New Blood Purge Threatens Reich In Nazi Campaign

Marriage Law to Bar Jewish-Christian Ceremonies.

American Editor Ordered to Leave

No Jews Are Chosen for Olympic Games in Germany.

The German Situation.

Fears of another "blood purge" grew in Germany as leaders pressed their drive on "reactionaries."

The German Olympic committee disclosed there were no Jews among the athletes chosen to compete for places on the nation's team.

M. C. Harbeck, American editor of the German edition of the magazine Golden Age, was released by authorities and ordered to leave the country.

Mayor LaGuardia quoted State Department press releases to support his contention Americans have been discriminated against by Germany.

Berlin, July 26 (AP).—Uncertainty and tenseness growing out of the Nazis' big drive against "reactionaries" brought whispered conjecture today that another "blood purge" might result.

Jews and some diplomatic quarters compared the tactics employed against Jews, steel helmet war veterans and "political Catholicism" to those which preceded the June, 1934, blood letting, in which Adolf Hitler and his helpers eliminated unwanted party leaders.

[A United Press dispatch from Berlin reported Nazi leaders prepared a law definitely prohibiting marriages between Jews and Christians. It was understood their plans were prompted by conflicting court judgments on the Jewish-Christian marriage question.—Editor's note.]

German and foreign observers were watching developments closely, apparently believing important changes in the cabinet and national socialism's leadership likely.

A welter of rumors, dire predictions and fears expressed sotto voce, like those of June, 1934, accompanied progress of the offensive against "reactionaries."

Helmets Hit Again.

The Steel Helmets were today's worst sufferers. Gov. Erich Koch, of East Prussia, between Poland and Russia, dissolved their organization, adding the East Prussian units to those already under the Nazi ban in Silesia, Mecklenburg, Anhalt, Baden and Thuringia.

Catholics, too, were affected. Chief Heinrich Himler of the secret police ordering confessional youth groups to not wear uniforms or badges or carry flags. His decree duplicated that issued earlier this week by Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior.

New attention was focused upon Naziism's anti-Semitic campaign when the official German Olympic committee disclosed there were no Jews among athletes chosen to compete for the German Olympic team. Jewish spokesmen promptly charged discrimination. Nazi officials denied it.

The flood of rumors inundating the capital included reports, entirely unconfirmed, that:

The anti-Jewish measures indicated increasing internal and financial troubles.

Dissension had arisen among Nazi leaders over questions of policies.

These were described officially as "nonsense." Nevertheless, they served to indicate Berlin's state of mind and some observers called them "straws in the wind."

Developments in the drive against Jews included the closing of municipal baths at Karlsrue, Freidburg, Gladbach and Dortmund to them. Badd Charlotte-Brunn officially decreed that orchestras there could not play works of Jewish composers.

The Merkenfritz city council announced:

"Whoever, as a German and a

Snob in Her Ingloo.

IT WAS winter night [Rockwell Kent, the illustrator, told the story himself when he returned yesterday on the liner Deutschland after another adventure in the north] when he decided to leave the igloo of Salamina, the Eskimo hostess of himself and son, Donald, 14, for a year. This she had forbidden him to do. A terrific fight enseud in the 11-by-16 hut of ice. There was tumbling among Salamina's four children, 3, 7, 9 and 12 years old. It was rought, for the Eskimos are hardy.

Salamina was unaccustomed to having her orders disobeyed. She was an aristocrat of the village of Igdlorssuit, an island with a population of 165, and she ruled her igloo as she did most of the town. She was a fine character [Kent said], but she was a real snob. Worse than some of our best families. She warned me of some persons in town I was not permitted to talk with. She warned me against going out alone at night.

It was on the question of going out at night that the artist clashed with the primitive snob. He started out to take a walk and Salamina ordered him back from the exit of the igloo. He went ahead and she sprang at him. All the furniture in the place was broken, the artist said, and his little finger was smashed.

"I was about to brain her when my American chivalry got the best of me," he said.

He did not say whether he finally went out or not.

"The Eskimos are fine people," he said. "They are unhappy, but they don't know it. I wrote a book about Salamina. My son learned much and developed into a man there. I am glad he picked up some of the character of the Eskimos." Mr. Kent spent some time in Greenland years ago and went back this time for a year to give his son a taste of the life.

1,000 Nazi Foes Fight N. Y. Police

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—More than 1,000 Communist sympathizers and scores of police engaged in a battle around the pier from which the German liner Bremen sailed late tonight after an anti-Nazi demonstration.

Three of the demonstrators gained the bow of the crack liner, ripped the German flag from its pole and threw it into the Hudson River while hundreds cheered on the pier and in the streets below.

A force of 150 patrolmen, 100 detectives and 25 mounted policemen fought to disperse the demonstrators.

U. S. to Keep Out of Row In Ethiopia

Roosevelt Says America Will Stay Out of Controversies.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

President Roosevelt announces cardinal principles in this country's peace policy are "good neighbor" attitude and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern America. In the latter category he placed the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

European diplomats made eleventh-hour attempts, apparently without success, to obtain Mussolini's approval of wide economic concessions in Ethiopia, rather than a military victory.

Mahatma Gandhi appealed to his followers to finance a Red Cross unit in Ethiopia.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday declared that the two cardinal principles of this Administration's policy to keep the Nation out of war were maintenance of friendly relations through observance of the "good neighbor" policy and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern the American people.

In reply to a question, the President said the Italo-Ethiopian controversy would fall in the latter class. He also thought preparedness for defense was a third point in the country's keep-out-of-war program, but he regarded this as subordinate to the other two principles.

Mr. Roosevelt did not indicate that this Government would wash its hands of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. His point was that it did not concern this country, aside from general interest in maintaining world peace and except for personal feelings of some Americans regarding the controversy. The latter, however, could not be controlled by Government decrees, he said.

No Policy Change.

The President's qualification of his answer that this Nation was not concerned with the plight of Ethiopia, aside from our general interest in world peace, was taken to indicate there would be no change of policy in regard to the threatened Italo-Ethiopian war. That policy has been to deprecate resort to hostilities and to support every step toward a pacific solution of the dispute without involving this country.

Shortly before the President spoke, pressure was brought on Capitol Hill and at the State Department to have this Government take steps to discourage Adolph Hitler's Germany from further persecution of religious groups—actions which might well come under the President's ban of becoming involved in controversies which do not concern this country.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, introduced a resolution in the Senate calling for an investigation of German discrimination against Jews and Catholics. King would have the Senate Foreign Relations Committee conduct the inquiry and would direct that group to "recommend what way the cause of tolerance and religious freedom may be served."

Nazi Inquiry Pressed.

His resolution would require the committee to inquire particularly into "charges that Jewish citizens have been denied their political and civil rights and have been compelled to leave Germany." The resolution would appropriate $5,000 for the conduct of the inquiry.

Earlier in the week King, denouncing Nazi "oppressive acts"

Bank Funds Up Sharply, Failures End

Reserve Board Reflects Optimism Increased by 6.6% Relief Cut.

D. C. Leads Nation in Drop in Aid, Hopkins Report Shows.

Bank failures have practically ceased, banks have recovered a large part of the deposits lost in the early stages of the depression, and the number of families on relief declined 6.6 per cent from May to June.

The Federal Reserve Board's July bulletin disclosed that deposits in the 24,630 operating banks in the country declined from the peak of $55,289,000,000 on December 31, 1929, to a low of $37,998,000,000 on June 30, 1933, a decrease of $17,291,000,000. However, by December 31, 1934, deposits had climbed again to $44,771,000,000, a gain of $6,773,000,000, although the number of banks had fallen to 16,042.

Along with the recovery in bank deposits, the Reserve Board reported a virtual cessation of bank failures. In the first six months of this year only 16 banks, with combined deposits of $3,299,000 closed their doors, as compared with 56 banks having deposits of $36,944,000 in 1934, and several thousand banks with several billion dollars of deposits in 1932.

Relief Burden Cut.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, reported the decline in the number of families on relief. He said 4,100,932 families were depending on the Government aid in May, and 3,830,871 in June. Expenditures declined 9.8 per cent, from $188,323,706 in May to $169,840,125 in June.

The percentages of decline in the District of Columbia were even greater than the average for the country. The number of families on relief here dropped from 13,159 to 11,941, or 9.3 per cent, and the expenditures fell off from $932,353 to $785,444, a percentage of 15.8.

Another announcement by Hopkins was on the appointment of four technical assistants to direct formulation of white-collar projects in four major arts, music, the theater, writing and painting.

They will develop the projects to give employment to needy cultural workers who will be transferred from relief rolls to jobs under the Works Progress Administration. They are to function in the professional and service projects division under which the $300,000,000 appropriated for assistance to educational, professional and clerical persons is being administered.

Directors Named.

Nikolai Sokoloff, of Connecticut, was appointed to direct music projects; Holger Cahill, of New York, to direct art projects; Hallie Flanagan, of Vassar College, to direct theater projects, and Henry G. Alsberg, of Washington, to direct projects for writers.

Sokolai won fame as a conductor of major symphony orchestras in Cleveland, San Francisco, Cincinnati and New York.

Cahill has contributed extensively to the literature on American art. He wtas on the staff of the Newark Museum under the late John Cotton Dana, and later organized numerous exhibitions, including the Exhibition of American Painting and Sculpture from 1865 to 1932, which brought Whistler's "Portrait of Artist's Mother" to America.

Hallie Flanagan, in private life the wife of Prof. Philip H. Davis, of Vassar, for nine years has been professor of English and director of the Experimental Theater at Vassar.

Alsberg, for a year and a half has been supervisor of reports and bulletins for FERA here. He was

A wholesale deportation order, one of the greatest in the country's history, was approved yesterday by President Roosevelt to rid the Nation of 151 counterfeiters, narcotics offenders, postal law violators and other criminals, all aliens.

At the same time it was learned that Mrs. Anna Sage, the "woman in red," who is said to have "put the finger" on John Dillinger, also is scheduled for deportation. Now living in Chicago, she will be sent back to her native Rumania next month, Labor Department officials said.

Only one woman, Bessie Murray, is among the 151 who will be released from Federal prisons and sent back to the countries whence they came. A native of Ireland, she is serving a term in Alderson penitentiary for violation of the postal laws.

Twenty-seven countries in Europe, Asia and South America are represented on the list of deportees. Italy supplied 62 prisoners. There are 16 Chinese, all of whom were sentenced under the anti-narcotics laws.

Criminal aliens from Canada and Mexico, contiguous countries, were not included in the roundup, the Department of Justice explained, because past experience has proved it is not difficult for them to slip back inside the United States.

The surprise move by the Government was attributed to economy reasons. Length of sentences, prison records and offenses of every alien confined in a Federal prison were studied by Attorney General Cummings' office before the selection was made.

Recommendations submitted to President Roosevelt for riddance of the 151 were authorized by the recent statutes which state that any alien is subject to deportation who violates the narcotic laws, commits a felony within the first five years after entry or commits two felonies over any period of time.

The conflict of Mrs. Sage, the "woman in red," with the immigration laws hinges on her arrest in East Chicago, Ind., on a charge of operating a disorderly house. Officials are said to have given her one month to settle her affairs. The Bureau of Investigation has refused consistently to confirm reports that

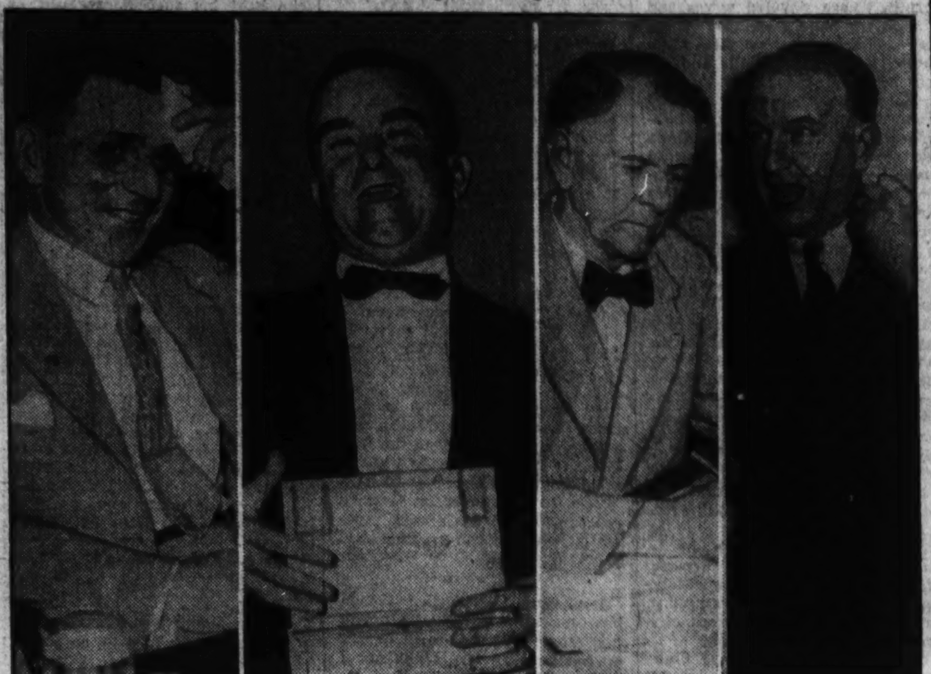
Glass Scores a Major Victory As Senate Passes Banking Bill

Figures In a Lively Day on the "Hill"



Associated Press and Harris & Ewing Photos.

Indignant words were used in hearings and conferences in the Capitol yesterday. Left to right; Frank E. Speicher, who, before the House military hearing, said Joseph Silverman, Army surplus supplies dealer, told him he had the Assistant Secretary of War's office "in the palm of his hand;" Representative Patton, who, before the Senate Lobby Committee, admitted buying $3,000 bonds in a period his salary totaled $3,100, and Representative Huddleston and Senator Wheeler, who called each other names in conference on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Central Bank Proposal Sponsored by Nye Swamped 59 to 10.

Routed Libebrals Turn to Conferees

La Follette Is Hopeful Administration Might Yet Recover.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's banking bill, minus central bank features and without a single liberalizing amendment, yesterday was approved by the Senate by a resounding voice vote, following three days of brisk debate.

The measure was sent to conference, where Administration forces will make a last stand to strengthen Federal Reserve Board credit powers, and recoup losses suffered at the hands of Senator Glass, of Virginia.

The 77-year-old former Secretary of the Treasury and veteran of 32 years in Congress won one of the most sweeping victories of his career, in the final draft of the measure, despite "concessions—concessions even of convictions."

In the end no Senator demanded a record vote. Glass, a bit weary and hoarse from continuous debate, shuffled slowly from his seat to receive the congratulations of colleagues—friends and foes alike of the banking bill.

Priest's Plan Swamped.

Of less than a dozen amendments, only three were pressed to a Senate vote, and all of these were overwhelmingly defeated.

Shortly after the Senate met yesterday, Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, called for a test on Eather Charles E. Coughlin's Government-owned central bank proposals. On a roll call vote, the substitute vas beaten, 59 to 10.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive, met a similar fate in moving to eliminate authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues. His amendment was voted down, 39 to 22.

A day earlier, Senator Louis Murphy (Democrat), of Iowa, had failed by a voice vote to scrap a section of Title ', which requires State banks with deposits of $1,000,000 and more to join the Federal Reserve system by July 1, 1937, or lose their deposit insurance.

In the parade to passage, a number of amendments were offered for the record, and never pressed to a vote. Among these were two amendments advanced by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, authorizing the Government to buy all stock in the 12 regional Reserve banks, and the Goldsborough "commodity dollar" proposal, favored by the Committee for the Nation.

LaFollette Quits Fight.

LaFollette likewise failed to press amendments that would have denied Federal Reserve banks voting representation on the open market committee, and stricken the section permitting a director of a Federal Reserve member bank to be a director also of not more than one other bank.

LaFollette charged there was "a virtual gentleman's agreement, which makes it impossible for senators to vote their convictions."

"I have just learned that I cannot get a real test of strength," he asserted. "Many who agree with me would vote against me. The reason is that there has been a long controversy in the committee, and these senators do not want to jeopardize the bill in further protracted argument."

The Wisconsin Progressive, however, insisted upon an "aye" and "no" vote on his amendment to strike out authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues.

He declared that this authority was one of the chief factors in bringing on the 1929 market crash.

"Unloading of securities upon customers of commercial banks resulted in the wiping out of investments of thousands upon thousands, and the final collapse of the stock market," he declared. "This is the nose under the camel's tent. We will write this section into law, and next session there will be a move to go farther."

Opposing the LaFollette amendment, Glass recalled that he had condemned conditions that made the rigid restrictions in the banking act of 1933 necessary; that he had deplored the flooding of the country

Utility Conferees in Deadlock; Bid to 'Swing' Army Deal Bared

New Deal's Lobbyists Told to Stay Clear of House by O'Connor.

By James D. Secrest.

Senators and Representatives very nearly came to blows yesterday in one of the bitterest rows of the session, further tightening the deadlock on the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill, as the Senate lobby committee pressed Representative Patton (Democrat), of Texas, to explain how he bought $3,000 worth of Government bonds when he had drawn only $3,100 in salary.

Statements flew thick and fast during the afternoon as Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, made another attempt to regain the spotlight for the House lobby inquiry by issuing a statement which in effect warned Administration lobbyists to stay clear of the Speaker's lobby and cloakrooms.

Senate and House conferees were agreed on only one thing, that they had reached an impasse which probably can be settled only by taking the bill back to both chambers for a vote on the "death clause" or for appointment of new conferees.

Cohen Is Issue.

The point at issue between the Senators and Representatives was not the death sentence, however, but the question of whether Benjamin Cohen, Administration legislative aid, should be permitted to participate in the conference. Dozier A. DeVane, sollicitor of the Federal Power Commission, whose presence was also opposed on Wednesday, did not appear yesterday.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, was the focal point of the conference row, first clashing with Representative Cooper (Republican), of Ohio, and then with Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama.

He is reported to have threatened to invade Cooper's district during the next campaign in an effort to defeat him. To this the Ohioan replied: "I told him to come ahead. I would welcome it."

With Huddleston the argument became more personal after Wheeler had insinuated that the Alabaman was playing into the hands of the public utilities. Huddleston is reported to have retorted with an attack in which the epithet "fourflusher" was used.

Senate, House Divided.

The conference broke up after the Senate conferees voted unanimously to insist on Cohen remaining, while the House managers voted 3 to 2 to refuse to participate in the conference so long as he was present. Only Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, voted with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, to accept the Senators' ultimatum.

"The position of Mr. Holmes, Mr. Cooper and myself, constituting a majority of the House conferees, is that under all circumstances it would be manifestly improper for a representative of the executive branch to be present during our confidential deliberations," Huddleston said subsequently in a formal statement.

"We hold that it is fundamental to our system of government that the legislative branch should be permitted to function without influence from the executive branch * * *

"As servants of the House we are charged with the responsibility of upholding its dignity and prestige. This can not be done with a representative of the Administration sit-

New Yorker Says Silverman Planned to Split $10,000,000 Order.

By the Associated Press.

The purported inside story of a plan to split a $10,000,000 Army motor car order between Chrysler and Chevrolet was related yesterday to the House Military Committee.

It was told by Frank Speicher, New York dealer in inner tubes. He said that back of the plan was Joseph Silverman, jr., who at one time conducted a huge business in excess Army supplies.

For a 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman sought to arrange with Norman K. Haig, General Motors Co. official, to set up a General Motors agency in Washington to which, through his alleged influence with the War Department, Silverman was to swing the truck and automobile contract.

Federal agents hunted Speicher for months last year as a witness in the inquiry, now being continued by the committee.

Yesterday he told the committee that Silverman claimed to have influence with the War Department because Ralph O'Neal, past national commander of the American Legion, "the closest man to Woodring in the United States," was on the Silverman pay roll. Harry W. Woodring is Assistant Secretary of War.

Silverman claimed, too, Speicher asserted, that he had been able to obtain inclusion in the specifications for the motor equipment—mostly for the CCC—of a provision which would have blocked Chevrolet bids.

But for the 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman proposed to Haig that he, Silverman, could have the provision eliminated and divide the contract between Chrysler and Chevrolet.

Speicher said he was interested in seeing Chevrolet obtain Army orders so that Haig would give him inner tube business.

Despite the fact that Silverman offered both Haig and himself a 2½ per cent cut, Speicher said, he warned Haig he might get in trouble with Silverman because he had learned the 7½ per cent commission was to be added to the regular price of the cars for the Army.

Speicher said he refused then to become involved, explaining:

"I was not dumb enough to get in a conspiracy like that to hook the Government.

The name of Frederick H. Payne, former assistant Secretary of War, was brought into the investigation.

Speicher testified flatly that Payne, in his hotel room here, told Haig he knew Silverman, had dealt with him a long time and that Haig had "better put him on the pay roll as he could do a lot of good for you."

President Cool To Complaints Of Steel Trade

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated that he believes the complaint of domestic steel manufacturers against a PWA order which would give them a 15 per cent preferential over foreign competitors is unjustified.

Through Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the domestic industry complained not against the preferential granted to them, but because it was not much greater. Indeed, Grace indicated he did not think that foreign steel makers should be permitted to compete at all on PWA or other Government projects under the $4,000,000,000 works fund, since the latter was designed to help American employment.

The President pointed out that under previous administrations the domestic steel industry had enacted tariff rates which they wanted and which it was contended would equalize the difference between production at home and abroad.

Is General Rule.

The PWA had in effect added 15 per cent to these tariff rates to aid the domestic industry, he said, by providing that unless the bid of a foreign manufacturer was at least 15 per cent less than a domestic bidder it should be disregarded. He said that this had been adopted as a general rule in making Government purchases.

The rule recently was set aside, the President said, in the case of a purchase of airplane cloth. In that case the bid of a Japanese manufacturer, he explained, was exactly one-half of the bid of the only American concern engaged in the business. Although it meant the Government would pay twice as much as necessary, it was decided to accept the American bid on the ground that airplane cloth is an essential article of national defense and that its manufacture in this country should be encouraged.

The President said he did not think any foreign-made steel was being used on PWA projects. One of the correspondents at his press conference, however, contended that large quatities of foreign cement had been used in erecting Government buildings here.

The foreign cement, he insisted, was brought over as ship ballast and sold much under the price of the domestic product. When ques-

Quantico Marine Corps Base Facing Transfer to San Diego

Plans to shift the headquarters of the Fleet Marine Corps from Quantico, Va., to San Diego, Calif., are being considered at Marine headquarters, it was learned yesterday. If the contemplated move is carried out about 50 officers and 600 enlisted men will be transferred to the West Coast.

Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the corps, and his staff have completed plans for the transfer, and these have been forwarded to Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the fleet. He has not yet approved of the change, but officers at Marine headquarters here are confident that his approval shortly will be forthcoming.

Lack of housing facilities at Quantico, as well as the necessity of having the fleet Marine force with the naval fleet, now in the Pacific, were given as reasons for the contemplated change.

If approval is forthcoming, the transfer will be made about September 1, it was stated. New recruits to the corps will replace the 600 men taken from Quantico, through the canal, on a transport to San Diego.

'Public Interest' To Rule Silver, Says Roosevelt

Noncommittal Observation Purchase Plans Given Bloc Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

A noncommittal observation that "public interest" will dictate administration of the silver purchase act was President Roosevelt's reply yesterday to the Senate silver "bloc."

His views on obtaining "our common objective of a wider monetary use of silver" were outlined politely but firmly in a letter to 46 Senators who had asked him to pursue the acts' goal "enthusiastically."

Some Senators hold the Treasury should buy silver until its price reaches $1.29 an ounce or enough is purchased to pile up one-third as much monetary silver as gold. Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, estimated that only the half-way mark of the $3,000,000,000 purchase goal has been attained.

"There has just come to me your joint statement dated June 20 on the general subject of silver, and I am glad to have the benefit of your observations and suggestions on this subject. As evidence of the broad objectives, I need only to refer to my message on silver to the Congress on May 22, 1934, which is but one of numerous statements I have made on the desirability of a wider monetary use of silver.

"I was glad to have that message supplemented by statements made on my behalf to the Senate to the effect that, if the silver purchase act were passed, it would be carried out vigorously and in good faith. The administration of this act has been and, of course, will be characterized by this spirit and purpose.

"When we come to such particulars as the amount and price of day-to-day purchases of silver and the issuance of silver certificates in excess of the cost of the silver, their determination is a duty which the Congress, by the provisions of the silver purchase act, has laid upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

"I know, from my frequent conferences with him on the administration of this act, surcharged with such great possibilities for our national welfare and the advantage of the world, that that duty has been, and will be, discharged in the manner most advantageous to the public interest, as the act itself enjoys, and in pursuit of our common objective of a wider monetary use of silver."

Kidnap 'Chiseler' Handed 20 Years

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Alfred Otto Wagner, whose alleged attempts to wring ransom money from the families of kidnapers' victims earned him the Government appellation of "misery chiseler," today suddenly ended his trial on extortion charges by pleading guilty to violating the Lindbergh law.

Federal Judge J. Clarence Galston immediately accepted the plea and sentenced him to 20 years in prison. He had been indicted on nine counts.

Wagner, a former convict, was arrested in a Brooklyn trap set by agents of the Bureau of Investigation of the Federal Department of Justice.

His sudden plea broke off the reading of a series of letters sent to families of victims in the Distelhurst, Stoll, Weyerhaeuser and several other kidnapings and slayings.

tioned by the President, he was unable to say how much foreign cement was used or its proportion to the domestic output.

PWA officials explained there were two statutes controlling Government contract awards. One required that the lowest and best bid be accepted. The other that domestic materials should be given preference except where unfeasible or against the public interest.

In reconciling these two provisions, the PWA prescribed that on purchases of $100 foreign competitors and products be ruled out. On orders up to $10,000 it was provided that domestic bidders should be favored unless the foreign bid was not at least 25 per cent under the lowest domestic bid. On orders above $10,000 foreign bids were outlawed unless at least 15 per cent under the lowest domestic bid.

Domestic Lobbies Hastening Adjournment; Coughlin Brain Child Born on Wall Street.

By Raymond Clapper

FORCES more powerful than the public is aware of are driving Congress into a stampede for adjournment.

Quite understandably, people forget that Senators and Representatives are human beings. A number of legislators are summer bachelors who have let the used dishes pile up to capacity in the sink. For these, it is either wash the dishes now or adjourn Congress. Then there is the other group whose devoted wives and daughters have stood by. They are being nagged to hurry up with those silly old bills and get out of Washington.

This war of attrition in 500 congressional households is having its effect. In two days, the Senate finishes off what was to have been the great battle of the session. Senator Carter Glass and Governor Eccles, the midget contenders, had trained down for a finish fight. It went just one round when Glass won by a technical knockout. The debate that was to have taken weeks wore out before the second day was half over. Even the great Borah was almost inarticulate. Fighting Bob La Follette and Elmer Thomas surprised the Senate by a strategic retreat and did not insist on their amendments. Senator Nye, with Father Coughlin's central bank amendment, rallied only 10 feeble votes. After that the bill rolled through without even a final roll-call.

True, there remains a hard-fought conference to go through with the House and Senate widely apart. But when members finally begin to stampede, conferees can work with surprising speed.

The House is going into high gear on taxes. Drafting experts will have a bill in shape over the week-end, and it probably will be through the House before the end of the month. There are even hints that the Guffey coal bill, which has been stuck in the House sub-committee, will be dehorned and hustled out in relatively harmless form. They are talking about striking out the whole section of the bill which would authorize expenditure of $300,000,000 to buy up poor coal lands and make a Government reserve out of them.

The utilities bill is stalled in a curious quarrel in the conference committee. Senator Wheeler is insisting upon having in the conference committee room Benjamin V. Cohen, of PWA, who drafted a good deal of the language. Some House members object. They have walked out indignantly two days in succession. Any morning soon Mr. Cohen is likely to be detained downtown by a pressing engagement and the conferees will wade through the bill.

Father Coughlin's mighty influence turned out to consist of ten Senate votes when his central bank amendment, offered by Senator Nye, came to the showdown. Nye was supported by Gore, of Oklahoma; Caraway, of Arkansas; Holt and Neely, of West Virginia; Thomas, of Oklahoma; Wheeler, of Montana; Frazier, of North Dakota; Schall and Shipstead, of Minnesota.

And the curious thing is that the last time the central bank idea was up in the Senate it was towed in by Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, the most eminent reactionary of his day. The original idea was Wall street's. It was 20 years getting out to Main street.

The Administration is considerably put out with the steel people. They came to Washington to protest against the PWA rule that steel would be purchased from foreign buyers who bid more than 15 per cent below domestic offers.

The steel men said that steel imports have more than doubled this year over last year, in effect depriving 3,900 American workmen of full-time employment. In the first five months of this year, 73,836 tons of semifinished steel were imported. The figures sound frightful until it is explained that domestic ingot production for the first six months of this year was 16,024,691 tons.

The Administration's answer is that the steel industry not only has a fat tariff obtained in previous administrations, but, in addition, this Administration has given it a 15 per cent additional margin of protection. That is, if a foreign company, after jumping over the tariff wall, still bids 10 per cent or 14 per cent or even 15 per cent under the American firm, it does not get the business. It only gets the order if it can bid 16 per cent or more below our own producers.

The steel people want a still greater differential. The Administration thinks they have a nerve to ask that and privately feels that the steel industry ought to shake down its prices a little. Officials still remember what they regard as a holdup in steel rail prices when the Government was advancing money to the railroads to buy rails in the hope of stimulating the heavy industries.

The row is over a German company which has a trick process by which it can produce steel piling dirt cheap.

Department of Justice G-men have become so famous in fiction and movie that we are in danger of having a whole alphabetical series of "deteckative" heroes inflicted upon us, so many Government departments having their own private chekas. We will have the Interior I-men, the Treasury T-men, the Labor Department L-men, in addition to the President's own Etc.-men like Tom Corcoran and Ben Cohen and the other mysterious rubber-heel messengers of truth and light who operate around Congress.

J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men boast that they have solved practically all outstanding kidnaping cases, but they haven't been able to find out where the label G-men came from or who started it. They don't use it around the Department of Justice.

Next to the longest Senate day within memory of the oldest inhabitant came to an end last night when the Senate adjourned the legislative day which began May 13. The longest previous legislative day occurred during consideration of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, lasting from April 20 to August 3. The only reason the Senate adjourned then instead of continuing overnight recesses was that some member died.

One disgraceful thing about this long legislative day is that the Senate has not had an opening prayer since May 13. After an overnight recess, the Senate goes to work without benefit of clergy. For a while the Senate chaplain, the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, appeared in the chamber at noon as usual, but, not being allowed to deliver a prayer, he finally grew discouraged and went to Cape Cod. It will serve the Senate right if he doesn't come back to pray for it any more this summer.

Macon Disaster Is Laid to Navy By De Forest

Reinforcements at Vital Point Denied; Investigator Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, July 26.—A statement by Prof. A. W. De Forest that the Navy was responsible for the crash of the dirigible Macon last February brought a variety of reactions tonight from officials attending a forum here on lighter-than-air craft.

Prof. De Forest, attending the conference, which is sponsored by the Daniel Guggenheim Airship Institute, made the statement today in an interview. He is a member of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology faculty. He served on an eight-man commission which investigated the crash.

His Best Friends.

Dr. Karl Arnstein, vice president of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, builder of the Macon, named by Prof. De Forest as "having begged the Navy to allow him to strengthen the dirigible while it was under construction," said:

"Don't, for heaven's sake, run down the Navy. Navy men are my best friends."

De Forest said that "the Navy's refusal to permit reinforcements of the Macon's ship structure at the vital point it gave way was responsible for the crash." He refused to amplify his statement.

Bradley Jones, professor of aerodynamics at the University of Cincinnati, said:

"There has been too much of this Hush! Hush! policy all along. Goodyear officials have been afraid to talk because the Navy is its best customer."

Report Is Cited.

Navy officials in Washington declined comment on De Forest's statement, but pointed to an official report signed by Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin and approved by Secretary Swanson.

The report was the verdict of the court of inquiry appointed to investigate the disaster. The report said some requested repairs had not been carried out when the ship crashed, but officials at the time said these were of a minor nature.

Navy to Answer De Forest Charges

By the United Press.

Leading Navy Department experts on lighter-than-air craft who are now in Akron probably will reply to charges that "obstinacy of certain naval officials" was responsible for the crash of the dirigble Macon, department officials said last night.

The only other comment to the assertions of Prof. A. V. De Forest, who blamed the Navy for loss of the ship, was:

"That's very interesting."

Tag on Governor's Car.

Des Moines, Ia., July 26 (AP).—Gov. Clyde Herring waited up all last night at a hotel here where bakery operators and union leaders sought a way to settle the Des Moines bakery strike.

A policeman tagged his automobile for being parked overtime.

"That," said the Governor, "is what I get for staying up all night."

O'Neill Resigns As NRA Head For N. Y. Post

President to Name His Successor Within Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

James L. O'Neill, the pleasant, intense New York businessman, who has headed the new NRA for two months, has resigned.

His resignation as acting chairman, effective July 31, was accepted yesterday by President Roosevelt, who said his successor would be named Monday or Tuesday.

"I talked with my New York office this morning," O'Neill said, "and was asked when I was leaving here. I told them I would get in New York next Thursday.

"'Well,' I was told, 'why don't you take Thursday and Friday off and come to work Saturday?' So that will be my vacation."

Old Job Beckons.

O'Neill will return to his old place as active vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. He has been with that organization for 17 years.

He predicted that the man who will replace him as head the NRA probably will be some one now in the organization.

O'Neill declined to discuss for publication his views of what would be the outgrowth of NRA. From other officials, however, came the view that the organization probably would be welded into the Federal Trade Commission through legislation at the next session of Congress.

"Anybody who expects to see new legislation setting up a separate agency to replace NRA is foolish," one official said. "I think we will see most of the practical functions of NRA and many of its employes transferred to the Trade Commission, which should have one or two additional members."

Many Detached.

Already quite a few NRA division heads and legal experts have been assigned to work with the Trade Commission. They are still on the NRA pay roll but are temporarily detached from that agency. President Roosevelt said at his press conference he had given no thought to additional legislation to give the commission greater authority over helping establish voluntary code agreements.

O'Neill, a Repunblican, said that the time he had spent in Washington had given him a wholesale respect for members of Congress and the manner in which they tackled the problems before them.

"You take the average business executive and sit him down with the amazingly complicated list of problems that falls to the lot of the Congressman and he would throw up his hands and go home," O'Neill said.

Coughlin Wins Suit For Soldier Field

Judge Rules Radio Priest Can Use Stadium.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit "radio priest," won a court order today allowing him to use Chicago's biggest stadium for a speech on "Social Justice."

Park board commissioners who refused to rent the huge Soldiers Field, scene of the second Dempsey-Tunney fight, were overruled by Superior Judge Joseph J. Kelly in deciding a mandamus action brought by the priest.

Judge Kelly said: "I have examined speeches by Father Coughlin and I fail to find anything subversive of the Constitution or the good order of society."

The priest originally hoped to hold his Chicago mass meeting on June 19 for the benefit of a claimed following of 250,000 in the Chicago territory.

Park board attorneys said today they would appeal, and lawyers said this would tie up Judge Kelly's mandamus decree until the appellate court rules, probably in the fall.

Attorney Samuel B. Ettelson, representing Father Coughlin, said he would fight any delay.

Utility Plot to Oust Him Charged by Governor

Oklathoma City, July 26 (U.P.).—Gov. E. W. Marland said he had learned of a "plot" by utilities and oil companies to have him impeached. Marland took office six months ago.

He said America faces the question, "Do you want the people to govern themselves or the utilities to govern them?"

Marland formerly was an oil millionaire.

The impeachment movement started even before he was inaugurated, Marland told a meeting of State Democratic women leaders.

"Men gathered in hotels of this city whispered about impeaching me before I was inaugurated. This continued all through the legislative session. Lobbyists for utilities and oil men would carry it on in their hotel rooms at night with the boy legislators."

Marland said he would "drag this thing out into the open."

Senate Passes Glass Measure On Bank Credit

with worthless foreign securities, and had denounced the State Department for approving such flotations.

"But it was represented to the committee by responsible persons that the consumptive goods industries had declined only 5 per cent during the depression," he said, "while the heavy goods industries were declining 55 per cent. When we wrote the complete prohibition in 1933 it was with the avowed hope and expectation that these underwriting houses would supply the required capital for the heavy goods industries. We were disappointed in that expectation. No underwriting houses were organized, and there was a paucity of capital available."

Glass insisted the underwriting section was "hedged around" with safeguards to prevent recurrence of evils preceding the 1933 banking act. Referring to the bill, he pointed out that no bank under its terms may underwrite more than 20 per cent of any one security issue, or in an amount more than $100,000, whichever is the larger. The aggregrate of underwriting is limited to twice the bank's capital and surplus, with the Comptroller of the Currency empowered to prescribe regulations.

Opposed By Roosevelt.

Although President Roosevelt was known to be opposed to the underwriting feature, 29 Democrats voted with 10 Republicans to defeat the La Follette amendment, while 13 Democrats, 7 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite, voted "aye."

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, entered the debate to inquire what "safeguards" were provided against repetition of the 1929 crash.

"I do not profess to say that safeguards have not been written into the bill," he observed, "but I do say that I do not find them sufficient to avoid some of the catastrophes which we have encountered in the past."

Pointing out that there was evidence of trouble long before the 1929 panic, he said nothing was done by the board or regional banks to stop the movement.

Glass retorted that the banks and the board were not the only offenders.

"I stood here on the floor of the Senate two years before the crash came and warned the country that the crash would come, and two Presidents of the United States practically jumped into the stock pit and urged it on," added the Virginian.

Safeguards Described.

Glass cited safeguards against speculation in the 1933 banking act, and pointed out that under the pending bill, in the event any bank engages in excessive speculation, either the Reserve bank of the district or, ultimately, the Federal Reserve Board may put a stop to it.

Borah said he had no controversy with Glass. He conceded that the 1933 banking act provided remedies, but reiterated that in the period leading up to 1929 "most of the board and the bank sat silent and watched this saturnalia of speculation gather strength until it finally resulted in the utter ruin of millions of people, driving thousands to crime and to suicide."

"We are giving stupendous power here," he warned, insisting that adequate safeguards are essential to avoid abuse of currency and credit controls concentrated in a few hands.

At another point the Idahoan declared "this move to meet the situation going on in 1927, '28 and '29 had its beginning in conferences with the representatives of the central banks from foreign nations."

He said: "Our policy initiated in 1927 had its inspiration not in the protection of American industry, but * * *to protect the financial interests not alone in this country but in Europe. I do not know that might not occur again under similar conditions and in a similar state of facts."

Glass replied:

"It can not occur under the terms of existing law or under the terms of the bill, without the assent of the Federal Reserve Board, because in the act of 1933 we denied the right of any governor of a Federal Reserve bank to negotiate with a foreign banker without the express permisson of the Federal Reserve Board."

La Follette, in withdrawing his amendment to centralize Federal Reserve Board control over open-market operations, virtually admitted he was doing so to strengthen its chances in conference.

Ten Voting Yes.

"Through a vote at this time, conferees might get a false view," he said.

But the Wisconsin liberal contended that ultimately there must be complete control of credit and monetary policies by the Government.

"The banker has the wrong view at the wrong time," he shouted. "In the boom period, bankers were in the same frame of mind as the rest of the country. They believed the law of gravity had been suspended."

Senator Nye was the sole speaker in favor of his substitute for a Government owned and operated central bank. Its defeat was conceded from the outset and there was so little interest that no one even offered to speak against it.

When the roll call on the Nye proposal was tallied, 41 Democrats, 17 Republicans and 1 Progressive were recorded against it.

Following passage of the bill, Vice President Garner named as Senate conferees Glass, Fletcher, Bulkley and McAdoo (Democrats), and Norbeck and Townsend (Republicans).

With some hope of success, the Administration will make a conference attempt to alter the Senate bill's open market committee set-up, which constitutes seven members of the Federal Reserve Board and five representatives of the Reserve banks, in control of open-market operations.

Bank Law Changes Proposed

Following are a few of the 150 changes in existing bank laws ordered in the bill which yesterday passed the Senate, compared with the measure which passed the House.

Changes name of Federal Reserve Board to Board of Governors of Federal Reserve system. Board would comprise seven members, instead of six as now constituted, with members, appointed by President, serving 14 years at $15,000 a year. Not more than four could be of same political faith. Secretary of Treasury and Comptroller of Currency removed as ex-officio members. President would designate chairman and vice chairman to serve for four years. House bill retains present personnel.

Reconstitutes open market committee, which influences credit flow by purchase and sale of Government bonds by Reserve banks on open market. Committee would comprise seven members of Federal Reserve Board and five representatives of Reserve banks. Policy would be mandatory on the banks. House bill gives Federal Reserve Board complete voting control of open-market operations, although five bank representatives would serve in advisory capacity.

Speculation Regulations.

Statutory requirements governing maintenance of reserves against deposits by member banks, as a check on use of funds for speculation, could be changed only by vote of five of seven board members. Reserve requirements could be doubled, but not decreased. House bill permits change in reserve requirements, without minimum or maximum.

Reserve banks could propose changes in rediscount rates, subject to approval by board. Rates woud have to be announced at least every two weeks. Board would retain power to approve, disapprove, or change the rates proposed. House bill gives board full authority to initiate rates, with operation mandatory.

Titles Are Changed.

Hereafter head of each Federal Reserve bank would be designated "president" instead of "governor." Each bank would have a president and vice president, to be appointed for five-year terms by the bank's board of directors, with approval of Board of Governors of Federal Reserve System. House bill combined offices of chairman of board and governor of banks and provided for annual appointments.

Authorizes real estate loans by national banks not to exceed 50 per cent of appraised real estate value and limited to five years. If loan is secured by an amortized mortgage, providing for 50 per cent retirement in 10 years, loan may be made up to 60 per cent of appraised value over 10-year term. House bill left regulations to Federal Reserve Board, permitting loans up to 60 per cent of appraised value.

Prohibitions against underwriting of securities by commercial banks would be relaxed. Under regulation by Comptrolled of Currency banks could underwrite up to 20 per cent of any one issue, or $100,000, whichever is greater. For any one issue, would be limited to 10 per cent of bank's capital and surplus. Aggregate of all bank's underwriting engagements, limited to twice bank's capital and surplus. House bill retains existing ban on underwriting.

Insurance Established.

Makes permanent the present temporary law fully insuring bank deposits up to $5,000. Annual assessment of one-twelfth of bank's total deposits authorized. Assessments would continue until fund reached $500,000,000. When the fund was impaired by 15 per cent, assessments would be resumed again. House bill provided assessments of one-eighth of one per cent.

Under Senate bill, all State banks organized after bill becomes law would have to join the Federal Reserve System by July 1, 1937, in order to get deposits insured. All State banks now in operation with deposits of $1,000,000 or more would have to meet this requirement in order to remain insured. House bill carries no Reserve membership requirements.

Director, officer or employe of Reserve member bank prohibited from being private banker or from serving in similar capacity in more than one other bank. House bill flatly bars interlocking directorships.

'Public Interest' To Rule Silver, Says Roosevelt

Noncommittal Observation Purchase Plans Given Bloc Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

A noncommittal observation that "public interest" will dictate administration of the silver purchase act was President Roosevelt's reply yesterday to the Senate silver "bloc."

His views on obtaining "our common objective of a wider monetary use of silver" were outlined politely but firmly in a letter to 46 Senators who had asked him to pursue the acts' goal "enthusiastically."

Some Senators hold the Treasury should buy silver until its price reaches $1.29 an ounce or enough is purchased to pile up one-third as much monetary silver as gold. Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, estimated that only the half-way mark of the $3,000,000,000 purchase goal has been attained.

"There has just come to me your joint statement dated June 20 on the general subject of silver, and I am glad to have the benefit of your observations and suggestions on this subject. As evidence of the broad objectives, I need only to refer to my message on silver to the Congress on May 22, 1934, which is but one of numerous statements I have made on the desirability of a wider monetary use of silver.

"I was glad to have that message supplemented by statements made on my behalf to the Senate to the effect that, if the silver purchase act were passed, it would be carried out vigorously and in good faith. The administration of this act has been and, of course, will be characterized by this spirit and purpose.

"When we come to such particulars as the amount and price of day-to-day purchases of silver and the issuance of silver certificates in excess of the cost of the silver, their determination is a duty which the Congress, by the provisions of the silver purchase act, has laid upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

"I know, from my frequent conferences with him on the administration of this act, surcharged with such great possibilities for our national welfare and the advantage of the world, that that duty has been, and will be, discharged in the manner most advantageous to the public interest, as the act itself enjoys, and in pursuit of our common objective of a wider monetary use of silver."

Kidnap 'Chiseler' Handed 20 Years

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Alfred Otto Wagner, whose alleged attempts to wring ransom money from the families of kidnapers' victims earned him the Government appellation of "misery chiseler," today suddenly ended his trial on extortion charges by pleading guilty to violating the Lindbergh law.

Federal Judge J. Clarence Galston immediately accepted the plea and sentenced him to 20 years in prison. He had been indicted on nine counts.

Wagner, a former convict, was arrested in a Brooklyn trap set by agents of the Bureau of Investigation of the Federal Department of Justice.

His sudden plea broke off the reading of a series of letters sent to families of victims in the Distelhurst, Stoll, Weyerhaeuser and several other kidnapings and slayings.

tioned by the President, he was unable to say how much foreign cement was used or its proportion to the domestic output.

PWA officials explained there were two statutes controlling Government contract awards. One required that the lowest and best bid be accepted. The other that domestic materials should be given preference except where unfeasible or against the public interest.

In reconciling these two provisions, the PWA prescribed that on purchases of $100 foreign competitors and products be ruled out. On orders up to $10,000 it was provided that domestic bidders should be favored unless the foreign bid was not at least 25 per cent under the lowest domestic bid. On orders above $10,000 foreign bids were outlawed unless at least 15 per cent under the lowest domestic bid.

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

FORCES more powerful than the public is aware of are driving Congress into a stampede for adjournment.

Quite understandably, people forget that Senators and Representatives are human beings. A number of legislators are summer bachelors who have let the used dishes pile up to capacity in the sink. For these, it is either wash the dishes now or adjourn Congress. Then there is the other group whose devoted wives and daughters have stood by. They are being nagged to hurry up with those silly old bills and get out of Washington.

This war of attrition in 500 congressional households is having its effect. In two days, the Senate finishes off what was to have been the great battle of the session. Senator Carter Glass and Governor Eccles, the midget contenders, had trained down for a finish fight. It went just one round when Glass won by a technical knockout. The debate that was to have taken weeks wore out before the second day was half over. Even the great Borah was almost inarticulate. Fighting Bob La Follette and Elmer Thomas surprised the Senate by a strategic retreat and did not insist on their amendments. Senator Nye, with Father Coughlin's central bank amendment, rallied only 10 feeble votes. After that the bill rolled through without even a final roll-call.

True, there remains a hard-fought conference to go through with the House and Senate widely apart. But when members finally begin to stampede, conferees can work with surprising speed.

The House is going into high gear on taxes. Drafting experts will have a bill in shape over the week-end, and it probably will be through the House before the end of the month. There are even hints that the Guffey coal bill, which has been stuck in the House sub-committee, will be dehorned and hustled out in relatively harmless form. They are talking about striking out the whole section of the bill which would authorize expenditure of $300,000,000 to buy up poor coal lands and make a Government reserve out of them.

The utilities bill is stalled in a curious quarrel in the conference committee. Senator Wheeler is insisting upon having in the conference committee room Benjamin V. Cohen, of PWA, who drafted a good deal of the language. Some House members object. They have walked out indignantly two days in succession. Any morning soon Mr. Cohen is likely to be detained downtown by a pressing engagement and the conferees will wade through the bill.

Father Coughlin's mighty influence turned out to consist of ten Senate votes when his central bank amendment, offered by Senator Nye, came to the showdown. Nye was supported by Gore, of Oklahoma; Caraway, of Arkansas; Holt and Neely, of West Virginia; Thomas, of Oklahoma; Wheeler, of Montana; Frazier, of North Dakota; Schall and Shipstead, of Minnesota.

And the curious thing is that the last time the central bank idea was up in the Senate it was towed in by Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, the most eminent reactionary of his day. The original idea was Wall street's. It was 20 years getting out to Main street.

The Administration is considerably put out with the steel people. They came to Washington to protest against the PWA rule that steel would be purchased from foreign buyers who bid more than 15 per cent below domestic offers.

The steel men said that steel imports have more than doubled this year over last year, in effect depriving 3,900 American workmen of full-time employment. In the first five months of this year, 73,836 tons of semifinished steel were imported. The figures sound frightful until it is explained that domestic ingot production for the first six months of this year was 16,024,691 tons.

The Administration's answer is that the steel industry not only has a fat tariff obtained in previous administrations, but, in addition, this Administration has given it a 15 per cent additional margin of protection. That is, if a foreign company, after jumping over the tariff wall, still bids 10 per cent or 14 per cent or even 15 per cent under the American firm, it does not get the business. It only gets the order if it can bid 16 per cent or more below our own producers.

The steel people want a still greater differential. The Administration thinks they have a nerve to ask that and privately feels that the steel industry ought to shake down its prices a little. Officials still remember what they regard as a holdup in steel rail prices when the Government was advancing money to the railroads to buy rails in the hope of stimulating the heavy industries.

The row is over a German company which has a trick process by which it can produce steel piling dirt cheap.

Next to the longest Senate day within memory of the oldest inhabitant came to an end last night when the Senate adjourned the legislative day which began May 13. The longest previous legislative day occurred during consideration of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, lasting from April 20 to August 3. The only reason the Senate adjourned then instead of continuing overnight recesses was that some member died.

One disgraceful thing about this long legislative day is that the Senate has not had an opening prayer since May 13. After an overnight recess, the Senate goes to work without benefit of clergy. For a while the Senate chaplain, the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, appeared in the chamber at noon as usual, but, not being allowed to deliver a prayer, he finally grew discouraged and went to Cape Cod. It will serve the Senate right if he doesn't come back to pray for it any more this summer.

Macon Disaster Is Laid to Navy By De Forest

Reinforcements at Vital Point Denied; Investigator Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, July 26.—A statement by Prof. A. W. De Forest that the Navy was responsible for the crash of the dirigible Macon last February brought a variety of reactions tonight from officials attending a forum here on lighter-than-air craft.

Prof. De Forest, attending the conference, which is sponsored by the Daniel Guggenheim Airship Institute, made the statement today in an interview. He is a member of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology faculty. He served on an eight-man commission which investigated the crash.

His Best Friends.

Dr. Karl Arnstein, vice president of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, builder of the Macon, named by Prof. De Forest as "having begged the Navy to allow him to strengthen the dirigible while it was under construction," said:

"Don't, for heaven's sake, run down the Navy. Navy men are my best friends."

De Forest said that "the Navy's refusal to permit reinforcements of the Macon's ship structure at the vital point it gave way was responsible for the crash." He refused to amplify his statement.

Bradley Jones, professor of aerodynamics at the University of Cincinnati, said:

"There has been too much of this Hush! Hush! policy all along. Goodyear officials have been afraid to talk because the Navy is its best customer."

Report Is Cited.

Navy officials in Washington declined comment on De Forest's statement, but pointed to an official report signed by Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin and approved by Secretary Swanson.

The report was the verdict of the court of inquiry appointed to investigate the disaster. The report said some requested repairs had not been carried out when the ship crashed, but officials at the time said these were of a minor nature.

Navy to Answer De Forest Charges

By the United Press.

Leading Navy Department experts on lighter-than-air craft who are now in Akron probably will reply to charges that "obstinacy of certain naval officials" was responsible for the crash of the dirigble Macon, department officials said last night.

The only other comment to the assertions of Prof. A. V. De Forest, who blamed the Navy for loss of the ship, was:

"That's very interesting."

Tag on Governor's Car.

Des Moines, Ia., July 26 (AP).—Gov. Clyde Herring waited up all last night at a hotel here where bakery operators and union leaders sought a way to settle the Des Moines bakery strike.

A policeman tagged his automobile for being parked overtime.

"That," said the Governor, "is what I get for staying up all night."

O'Neill Resigns As NRA Head For N. Y. Post

President to Name His Successor Within Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

James L. O'Neill, the pleasant, intense New York businessman, who has headed the new NRA for two months, has resigned.

His resignation as acting chairman, effective July 31, was accepted yesterday by President Roosevelt, who said his successor would be named Monday or Tuesday.

"I talked with my New York office this morning," O'Neill said, "and was asked when I was leaving here. I told them I would get in New York next Thursday.

"'Well,' I was told, 'why don't you take Thursday and Friday off and come to work Saturday?' So that will be my vacation."

Old Job Beckons.

O'Neill will return to his old place as active vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. He has been with that organization for 17 years.

He predicted that the man who will replace him as head the NRA probably will be some one now in the organization.

O'Neill declined to discuss for publication his views of what would be the outgrowth of NRA. From other officials, however, came the view that the organization probably would be welded into the Federal Trade Commission through legislation at the next session of Congress.

"Anybody who expects to see new legislation setting up a separate agency to replace NRA is foolish," one official said. "I think we will see most of the practical functions of NRA and many of its employes transferred to the Trade Commission, which should have one or two additional members."

Many Detached.

Already quite a few NRA division heads and legal experts have been assigned to work with the Trade Commission. They are still on the NRA pay roll but are temporarily detached from that agency. President Roosevelt said at his press conference he had given no thought to additional legislation to give the commission greater authority over helping establish voluntary code agreements.

O'Neill, a Repunblican, said that the time he had spent in Washington had given him a wholesale respect for members of Congress and the manner in which they tackled the problems before them.

"You take the average business executive and sit him down with the amazingly complicated list of problems that falls to the lot of the Congressman and he would throw up his hands and go home," O'Neill said.

Coughlin Wins Suit For Soldier Field

Judge Rules Radio Priest Can Use Stadium.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit "radio priest," won a court order today allowing him to use Chicago's biggest stadium for a speech on "Social Justice."

Park board commissioners who refused to rent the huge Soldiers Field, scene of the second Dempsey-Tunney fight, were overruled by Superior Judge Joseph J. Kelly in deciding a mandamus action brought by the priest.

Judge Kelly said: "I have examined speeches by Father Coughlin and I fail to find anything subversive of the Constitution or the good order of society."

The priest originally hoped to hold his Chicago mass meeting on June 19 for the benefit of a claimed following of 250,000 in the Chicago territory.

Park board attorneys said today they would appeal, and lawyers said this would tie up Judge Kelly's mandamus decree until the appellate court rules, probably in the fall.

Attorney Samuel B. Ettelson, representing Father Coughlin, said he would fight any delay.

Utility Plot to Oust Him Charged by Governor

Oklathoma City, July 26 (U.P.).—Gov. E. W. Marland said he had learned of a "plot" by utilities and oil companies to have him impeached. Marland took office six months ago.

He said America faces the question, "Do you want the people to govern themselves or the utilities to govern them?"

Marland formerly was an oil millionaire.

The impeachment movement started even before he was inaugurated, Marland told a meeting of State Democratic women leaders.

"Men gathered in hotels of this city whispered about impeaching me before I was inaugurated. This continued all through the legislative session. Lobbyists for utilities and oil men would carry it on in their hotel rooms at night with the boy legislators."

Marland said he would "drag this thing out into the open."

Senate Passes Glass Measure On Bank Credit

with worthless foreign securities, and had denounced the State Department for approving such flotations.

"But it was represented to the committee by responsible persons that the consumptive goods industries had declined only 5 per cent during the depression," he said, "while the heavy goods industries were declining 55 per cent. When we wrote the complete prohibition in 1933 it was with the avowed hope and expectation that these underwriting houses would supply the required capital for the heavy goods industries. We were disappointed in that expectation. No underwriting houses were organized, and there was a paucity of capital available."

Glass insisted the underwriting section was "hedged around" with safeguards to prevent recurrence of evils preceding the 1933 banking act. Referring to the bill, he pointed out that no bank under its terms may underwrite more than 20 per cent of any one security issue, or in an amount more than $100,000, whichever is the larger. The aggregrate of underwriting is limited to twice the bank's capital and surplus, with the Comptroller of the Currency empowered to prescribe regulations.

Opposed By Roosevelt.

Although President Roosevelt was known to be opposed to the underwriting feature, 29 Democrats voted with 10 Republicans to defeat the La Follette amendment, while 13 Democrats, 7 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite, voted "aye."

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, entered the debate to inquire what "safeguards" were provided against repetition of the 1929 crash.

"I do not profess to say that safeguards have not been written into the bill," he observed, "but I do say that I do not find them sufficient to avoid some of the catastrophes which we have encountered in the past."

Pointing out that there was evidence of trouble long before the 1929 panic, he said nothing was done by the board or regional banks to stop the movement.

Glass retorted that the banks and the board were not the only offenders.

"I stood here on the floor of the Senate two years before the crash came and warned the country that the crash would come, and two Presidents of the United States practically jumped into the stock pit and urged it on," added the Virginian.

Safeguards Described.

Glass cited safeguards against speculation in the 1933 banking act, and pointed out that under the pending bill, in the event any bank engages in excessive speculation, either the Reserve bank of the district or, ultimately, the Federal Reserve Board may put a stop to it.

Borah said he had no controversy with Glass. He conceded that the 1933 banking act provided remedies, but reiterated that in the period leading up to 1929 "most of the board and the bank sat silent and watched this saturnalia of speculation gather strength until it finally resulted in the utter ruin of millions of people, driving thousands to crime and to suicide."

"We are giving stupendous power here," he warned, insisting that adequate safeguards are essential to avoid abuse of currency and credit controls concentrated in a few hands.

At another point the Idahoan declared "this move to meet the situation going on in 1927, '28 and '29 had its beginning in conferences with the representatives of the central banks from foreign nations."

He said: "Our policy initiated in 1927 had its inspiration not in the protection of American industry, but * * *to protect the financial interests not alone in this country but in Europe. I do not know that might not occur again under similar conditions and in a similar state of facts."

Glass replied:

"It can not occur under the terms of existing law or under the terms of the bill, without the assent of the Federal Reserve Board, because in the act of 1933 we denied the right of any governor of a Federal Reserve bank to negotiate with a foreign banker without the express permisson of the Federal Reserve Board."

La Follette, in withdrawing his amendment to centralize Federal Reserve Board control over open-market operations, virtually admitted he was doing so to strengthen its chances in conference.

Ten Voting Yes.

"Through a vote at this time, conferees might get a false view," he said.

But the Wisconsin liberal contended that ultimately there must be complete control of credit and monetary policies by the Government.

"The banker has the wrong view at the wrong time," he shouted. "In the boom period, bankers were in the same frame of mind as the rest of the country. They believed the law of gravity had been suspended."

Senator Nye was the sole speaker in favor of his substitute for a Government owned and operated central bank. Its defeat was conceded from the outset and there was so little interest that no one even offered to speak against it.

When the roll call on the Nye proposal was tallied, 41 Democrats, 17 Republicans and 1 Progressive were recorded against it.

Following passage of the bill, Vice President Garner named as Senate conferees Glass, Fletcher, Bulkley and McAdoo (Democrats), and Norbeck and Townsend (Republicans).

With some hope of success, the Administration will make a conference attempt to alter the Senate bill's open market committee set-up, which constitutes seven members of the Federal Reserve Board and five representatives of the Reserve banks, in control of open-market operations.

Bank Law Changes Proposed

Following are a few of the 150 changes in existing bank laws ordered in the bill which yesterday passed the Senate, compared with the measure which passed the House.

Changes name of Federal Reserve Board to Board of Governors of Federal Reserve system. Board would comprise seven members, instead of six as now constituted, with members, appointed by President, serving 14 years at $15,000 a year. Not more than four could be of same political faith. Secretary of Treasury and Comptroller of Currency removed as ex-officio members. President would designate chairman and vice chairman to serve for four years. House bill retains present personnel.

Reconstitutes open market committee, which influences credit flow by purchase and sale of Government bonds by Reserve banks on open market. Committee would comprise seven members of Federal Reserve Board and five representatives of Reserve banks. Policy would be mandatory on the banks. House bill gives Federal Reserve Board complete voting control of open-market operations, although five bank representatives would serve in advisory capacity.

Speculation Regulations.

Statutory requirements governing maintenance of reserves against deposits by member banks, as a check on use of funds for speculation, could be changed only by vote of five of seven board members. Reserve requirements could be doubled, but not decreased. House bill permits change in reserve requirements, without minimum or maximum.

Reserve banks could propose changes in rediscount rates, subject to approval by board. Rates woud have to be announced at least every two weeks. Board would retain power to approve, disapprove, or change the rates proposed. House bill gives board full authority to initiate rates, with operation mandatory.

Titles Are Changed.

Hereafter head of each Federal Reserve bank would be designated "president" instead of "governor." Each bank would have a president and vice president, to be appointed for five-year terms by the bank's board of directors, with approval of Board of Governors of Federal Reserve System. House bill combined offices of chairman of board and governor of banks and provided for annual appointments.

Authorizes real estate loans by national banks not to exceed 50 per cent of appraised real estate value and limited to five years. If loan is secured by an amortized mortgage, providing for 50 per cent retirement in 10 years, loan may be made up to 60 per cent of appraised value over 10-year term. House bill left regulations to Federal Reserve Board, permitting loans up to 60 per cent of appraised value.

Prohibitions against underwriting of securities by commercial banks would be relaxed. Under regulation by Comptrolled of Currency banks could underwrite up to 20 per cent of any one issue, or $100,000, whichever is greater. For any one issue, would be limited to 10 per cent of bank's capital and surplus. Aggregate of all bank's underwriting engagements, limited to twice bank's capital and surplus. House bill retains existing ban on underwriting.

Insurance Established.

Makes permanent the present temporary law fully insuring bank deposits up to $5,000. Annual assessment of one-twelfth of bank's total deposits authorized. Assessments would continue until fund reached $500,000,000. When the fund was impaired by 15 per cent, assessments would be resumed again. House bill provided assessments of one-eighth of one per cent.

Under Senate bill, all State banks organized after bill becomes law would have to join the Federal Reserve System by July 1, 1937, in order to get deposits insured. All State banks now in operation with deposits of $1,000,000 or more would have to meet this requirement in order to remain insured. House bill carries no Reserve membership requirements.

Director, officer or employe of Reserve member bank prohibited from being private banker or from serving in similar capacity in more than one other bank. House bill flatly bars interlocking directorships.

Philippine Post Likely to Open For MacArthur

He May Become Military Adviser to Insular Government.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the Army, will go to the Philippine Islands as military adviser to the new island government, according to a report here yesterday.

His appointment is said to hinge on the election of his old friend, Manuel Quezon to the presidency. Observers in Manila report that Quezon's election now is assured.

President Roosevelt smiled broadly yesterday at his press conference when asked about the rumor. He added it was his understanding that the Philippines want Gen. MacArthur but that reporters should talk with the general about the appointment.

MacArthur has refused to comment. It is understood that he will make no decision until the new government is set up and the other chief appointments made.

If Gen. MacArthur goes to the Philippines it will be his third tour of service there. Following his graduation from West Point in 1903 he was stationed on Guimaras Island with the Corps of Engineers.

From October, 1922 to January, 1924, he served there again, commanding the district of Manila, the Twenty-third Infantry Brigade and the Philippine Division. His tour of duty as chief of staff of the Army expired last November, but at the request of Secretary Dern it was extended. There has been no announcement concerning its termination.

Should Gen. MacArthur go to the Philippines it would not be necessary for him to retire from the Army, although he is eligible, having completed more than 30 years active duty.

Under a recent act of Congress officers may be assigned to duty with the Commonwealth government. If MacArthur stays on active duty in the Army he still has eight more years before he must quit for age.

Inflation Bill Dead, House Chiefs Say

By the Associated Press.

House Administration leaders passed the word around yesterday that the inflationary Frazier-Lemke bill to refinance farm mortgages with $3,000,000,000 in new money "is dead for this session."

They based this prediction on the fact that they had made new progress in their campaign to remove signatures from a petition to force a House vote on the measure. The total stood at only 203 signers, 13 short of the 216 signatures needed to force the bill out of the Rules Committee.

That was a loss of half a dozen signers this week alone, and at one time there were 210 names on the petition. Party leaders got busy about that time and, while denying they were working on instructions from President Roosevelt, brought the strongest pressure against Democrats to scratch their names.

Fight Foreseen On House Floor Over Tax Bill

Corporation Charity Gift Exemption Source of Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

A major congressional scrap was forecast yesterday with the disclosure that Democratic drafters of the President's tax bill had agreed to retain the law which makes corporations pay taxes on gifts to charities.

President Roosevelt openly opposed any change. Charitable organizations insisted that unless corporations were allowed some sort of deductions for charitable donations the amount of gifts would drop off.

There has been considerable discussion of the question among House Ways and Means Committee Democrats, now busily at work putting Roosevelt tax ideas into bill form. It was reported that earlier in the week an agreement was reached to let a corporation deduct up to 5 per cent of its income for gifts to charities.

Then came the President's statement, followed by authoritative word yesterday that committee Democrats would not include an exemption feature in their bill.

Scores of members, however, continued to receive dozens of letters from individuals and charitable organizations urging the change. Consequently it was forecast that if the bill emerged from the committee without deductions attempts will be made to change it on the floor.

Under present law, a corporation may deduct from its income only the gifts which it can prove were necessary to its business. A recent Supreme Court decision narrowed the classification of such gifts.

At the same time, the Ways and Means Committee Democrats continued their work with administrative features of the bill. Already they have decided tentatively upon new taxes for inheritances and gifts in addition to those which already exist on estates and gifts; upon graduated corporation taxes ranging from 13¾ to 14¼ per cent, with the dividing line being $15,000 income; upon excess corporation profit levies of 5 to 20 per cent of all profits over 8 per cent; and upon increases boosting top individual surtax income rates from 59 to 75 per cent.

One detail reported accepted yesterday applied to life insurance. It was that up to $50,000 of life insurance left to a wife or husband, son, daughter, parent, grandparent, adopted child, and grandchild would be exempt from taxes. Only $10,000 left to others not so closely related would be exempt.

The same exemptions apply to other inheritances and to gifts.

The dispute over the financial aspects of the bill meanwhile continued. Republicans contended it would raise an "insignificant" amount compared with present expenditures. Some conservative Democrats expressed approval of the rates, but many liberals insisted they were too low.

Bankruptcy Quiz To Be Nation-Wide

Sabath Announces Itinerary; Sees Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

A country-wide investigation of bankruptcy proceedings was announced yesterday by Chairman Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, of the House Special Investigating Committee after a talk with President Roosevelt.

Sabath called at the White House to confer with the President on legislation to protect bondholders and said Mr. Roosevelt favored some action.

The chairman said that when Congress adjourns the committee will proceed to New York and thence to Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Cleveland, St. Louis, Newark, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and Southern cities.

He described conditions in Philadelphia as "rotten." He predicted indictments in Chicago.

Pilot Not Able to Jump, Dies in Bomber's Crash

Shreveport, La., July 26 (AP).—An Air Reserve officer was killed this afternoon after an unsuccessful attempt to leave his spinning Army plane during bombing and gunnery training at Barksdale Field here.

The pilot, Second Lieut. Franklin Shroyer, had dropped ten bombs when his powerful pursuit plane went into a spin at an altitude of 1,500 feet. The field's ambulance crew found his mangled body in the wreckage of the plane with the pilot's partially opened parachute, indicating, officers said, he had attempted to leave the falling craft.

Col. Woodcock To Prosecute Aids of Long

Former Prohibition Head Will Press Louisiana Tax Cases.

By the Associated Press.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, former director of the Prohibition Bureau, has been named a special assistant to the Attorney General to push income tax evasion charges against four Louisiana men, known as associates of Senator Huey Long.

Authoritative sources yesterday said Woodcock was named at the request of the Treasury Department. He is president of St. John's College at Annapolis, Md.

The Justice Department said that Dan Moody, former Governor of Texas, remains in charge of New Orleans tax cases, but that Woodcock will work directly under the Treasury Department.

New Orleans, July 26.—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, newly appointed special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, was here today presumably working on a group of Federal income tax cases involving political allies of Senator Huey P. Long.

Cases are pending against eight persons affiliated with Senator Long's organization, who are charged with income tax law violations. Iincluded in the group are Abe L. Shushan, president of the Orleans Parish Levee Board, and Seymour Weiss, head of the New Orleans Dock Board and treasurer of Long's political organization.

Only one of nine persons indicated has been tried. A Federal district court jury last April found State Representative Joseph Fisher, also a Long ally, guilty on two counts. Fisher is now serving an 18-month sentence in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

Col. Woodcock said he would remain here until August 10, when he will return to Washington, and said he did not think his new duties would interfere with his work as president of St. John's College.

"I expect to return to Annapolis in time for the opening of the fall term, September 23," he said.

Col. Brittin's Wife Found Dead in Bed

Death in Minnesota Occurs While Husband Is Here.

By the Associated Press.

Isle, Minn., July 26.—Mrs. L. H. Brittin, wife of Col. L. H. Brittin, pioneer aviation enthusiast, was found dead in bed at her home on an island in Mille Lacs Lake today.

Dr. H. T. Morrgard, Mille Lacs County coroner, said preliminary advices indicated the woman died of a heart attack.

Col. Brittin formerly was vice president and general manager of Northwest Airways.

Col. Brittin, nationally known in aviation ranks, served ten days for contempt of the United States Senate in February, 1934, as an outgrowth of alleged destruction of papers from the Northwest Airways file in an investigation of air-mail contracts.

Italian Challenges U. S. Aviator to Duel

Monte Carlo, July 26 (AP).—Hal Du Berrier, former American commercial flier who is organizing an air squadron to fight for Ethiopia, hopes to engage in a small skirmish against Italian forces before leaving for France.

The former stunt pilot has undertaken to fight a duel with the Italian Captain Marchetti, who accused him of insulting Premier Benito Mussolini. The customary cards have been exchanged. But it is uncertain whether the two will meet.

Friends of Du Berrier said the aviator, while seated in a cafe, remarked:

"Mussolini is a big bruiser picking on a helpless cripple."

Marchetti, at the next table, told him to "mind his own business" and an hour later sent his seconds.

Union to Delay Soft Coal Strike Till September

Roosevelt Successful in Plea for Extension of Wage Scale.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday pushed back the date of the much-threatened soft-coal strike to September 16.

The United Mine Workers and Appalachian producers agreed to extend the present wage scale when the Executive wrote them that "certainly by that time the situation will be clarified and you will be in a better position to resume your negotiations."

Without mentioning the Guffey bill by name, the President's letter said "the prospects for constructive legislation are so substantial that I am writing to ask you to again extend the present contracts for a further period up to September 16."

The Appalachian joint wage conference had been deadlocked in its attempt to write a new wage-and-hour contract to succeed the extension of the 1934-35 agreement expiring August 1.

The miners asked a 30-hour work week and pay increases averaging 10 per cent. The operators offered to extend the present wage scale and 35-hour week until next April 1, but many of them were dubious of the industry's ability to pay even present wages with coal prices tumbling.

Solution Seen.

One large group of producers and the miners see a solution in enactment of the Guffey coal stabilization bill, now before a Ways and Means sub-committee. This bill would set up a "little NRA" for the bituminous industry, and permit the operators to fix prices that would cover the wages the miners demand.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, said that the "uncertainty should be ended before September 16" in a statement to reporters after he had accepted the White House proposal.

If there were "nothing ahead for the mine workers" at that time but a "bitter fight for their existence," he added, the fight "may as well come on September 16 as at any other time."

Lewis said that Congress should act on the Guffey bill "at an early date in the public interest—favorably if it will, unfavorably if it must."

Another large group of operators, however, opposed the measure on the ground that it was unconstitutional, that it would make coal prices so high the industry would suffer through loss of markets to competitive fuels, and that the industry would be put in a Government "strait-jacket."

Extension Fought.

Five leading Southern producers, representative of the anti-Guffey bill group, urged Secretary Perkins yesterday morning to work against another extension of the old wage scale. They said they were willing to pay present wages at least until April 1, but that constant strike threats had "disrupted the coal markets."

These operators maintain that John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers, is using strike threats to club Congress into enacting the Guffey bill.

Immediately after her talk with the operators, however, Miss Perkins went to the White House and conferred with the President on the coal situation for nearly an hour. The letter to the joint wage conference followed.

JOHN A. LOGAN WARREN, unfrocked by the Methodist Church in a tumultuous trial in 1927 on charges by a 17-year-old girl, will be reordained in a public ceremony at Rockford, Ill., August 11, as a minister of the Christian Association of America.

Cameraman Lost in Sinking Of Film Barge

Coast Guard Seeks Body of Glenn Strong in Sea off San Miguel.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 26.—Rough seas near primitive San Miguel Island were searched today for the body of Glenn Strong, film cameraman who lost his life when a movie barge sank with $50,000 in film equipment aboard.

Heavy swells swamped the 80-foot barge, valued at $15,000, as it and other craft were returning to the picture expedition's base on the island, 50 miles southwest of here.

The craft had been fitted up to resemble the British warship Pandoro which figures in the story of "Mutiny on the Bounty," the picture being filmed.

Only meager information about the accident was received. Whether any one besides Strong was aboard the barge, and rescued, was not known. He was said to be the only person missing when the barge sank late yesterday.

Search for his body was undertaken by a Coast Guard cutter. Salvage equipment was dispatched to the island in the hope of saving some of the valuable film equipment which sank.

The company of about 75 persons which went to San Miguel Island included Stanley Fields, screen "heavy," Donald Crisp, director and actor, and Eddie Quillan, comedian.

It also included about 30 athletes from Santa Barbara State College playing as extras in the ship scenes. Stars of the picture, Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone, were not with the San Miguel company.

Most of the players, technicians and others afloat for scenes were believed to have been aboard the tug retriever and two water taxis, while Strong remained aboard the barge to care for his equipment.

Fake Narcotic Agents Get Turfmans' $20,000

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—George W. Leeds, of New York, wealthy racing stable operator, reported to police of suburban Arlington Heights that four men posing as Federal narcotics inspectors today bound and gagged him and robbed him of $15,000 in jewelry and $5,000 in cash.

Leeds, who has several horses running at Arlington Park, said the men took four platinum rings set with diamonds, one set with a large ruby, a platinum watch set with diamonds and rubies, valued at $5,000, and various other articles.

He said the men gained admission to the home where he is residing during the Arlington season, bound and gagged him and Mrs. William Neuman, wife of the owner of the house, and ransacked his personal effects. The money taken, he said, was in bills of $50 denomination.

Westerly, R. I., July 26 (U.P.).—Theft of $20,000 in jewelry from her Watch Hill summer home was reported today by Mrs. King White, of Cleveland.

Awakened early today by the soft tread of someone leaving her bedroom, Mrs. White snapped on a light and discovered that her jewel case had been emptied. With the jewelry, $60 cash was stolen.

Whisky Barrel Makers Charge Glass Monopoly

Senators Told Treasury Rules Give Advantage to Bottled Liquor.

By the Associated Press.

Keg makers charged yesterday that Treasury liquor regulations had given an "absolute monopoly" to the glass bottle industry.

Criticism by cooperage representatives at a Senate committee hearing on the Federal alcohol control bill also brought a denial that Dr. James M. Doran, former commissioner of industrial alcohol, had been "bought" by distillers.

Doran was defended by Joseph H. Choate, jr., chairman of the old FACA, outlawed by the Supreme Court's NRA decision, who said the bill just passed by the House was acceptable except for provisions permitting sale of liquor in kegs to hotels and clubs, and placing administration in the Treasury Department.

Choate listened silently while A. Sidney Johnson, of St. Louis, representing Associated Cooperage Industries of America, charged that Treasury regulations favoring use of bottles as liquor containers "constitute an absolute monopoly to the glass bottle industry."

Then F. P. Hankerson, also of St. Louis, secretary of the national legislative committee of the tight cooperage industry, discussed regulations he said Dr. Doran had sponsored, and which he said benefited such large whisky makers as National Distillers, and the Owens-Illinois Glass Co.

Observing that Dr. Doran had left Federal employment to head Distillers' Institute, Hankerson said "it would be interesting to know how many distillers are members of the institute."

"I object to the insinuation that the distillers bought Dr. Doran out because he was useful," interrupted Choate, swinging up to the committee table to confront the witness.

"I only stated facts," said Hankerson. "I made no insinuations."

Choate testified that the keg sale section of the new bill would "destroy" Treasury efforts at controlling bootlegging. Hankerson said "not one iota" of evidence could be produced to show bootlegging in barrels was easier than in bottles.

Lindbergh Visits His Boyhood Home

By the Associated Press.

Little Falls, Minn., July 26.—Turning aside from business cares to return to his boyhood home, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here late today accompanied by his wife.

Col. Lindbergh, on a business trip across the country, flew here from Davenport, Iowa, landing at the Camp Ripley Airport about 5 p. m.

Brought into town immediately, "Lindy" went first to the store of M. A. Engstrom, close friend of the flier's father, the late Representative Charles A. Lindbergh.

Expressing a desire to visit his childhood home, which is the central point of interest in a State park of 99 acres near here, the colonel and his wife motored to the house and spent considerable time in a tour of the building.

Mrs. Grenfell Dead; Wilson War Emissary

Denver, July 26 (AP). — Helen Thatcher Loring Grenfell, formerly State superintendent of public instruction and a member of the State prison board, died at her home here today.

As a member of a commission appointed by President Wilson, she spoke at many meetings in England and France during the World War, explaining the attitude of this country.

Conferee Row On Utility Bill Brings Impasse

ting in our conference and influencing our deliberations. A calm and fair decision in conference would be impossible under such influences."

Wheeler likewise saw no prospect of agreement.

"If they don't object on that, they will object on something else," he said. "This is the first time in the history of Congress that either house has objected to an expert from one of the departments sitting in at a conference to act as drafting clerk."

Representative O'Connor lent further support to the House conferees and the objections of members to Administration lobbyists by issuing a statement calling attention to a House rule which bars from the Speaker's lobby and the cloakrooms any Government official not the head of a department and any former member who is interested "in any claim or directly in any bill pending before Congress."

The rule, he said, has been interpreted that "heads of departments" mean members of the President's Cabinet "and not subordinate executive officers."

It was recalled that Charles West, former liaison man for the President, just appointed Undersecretary of Interior, is a former member of the House.

The Senate lobby inquiry, which adjourned until Monday, when high officials of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. are scheduled to testify, was attacked in a statement by Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee on public utility executives, as the Senate group continued to weave a net of circumstantial evidence about Representative Patton.

"By innuendos and insinuations, which have their basis in malice and not in fact," Gadsden said, "Senator Black and his committee are now engaged in the practice of character assassination, to which the sponsors of the public utility bill have for some time resorted. The falsity and absurdity of these charges become apparent as the facts develop. * * *

"The use of a congressional investigation for this purpose is nothing more than a campaign of terrorism. It is apparently designed to silence any further protests from the public and thereby to influence the members of the House to abandon their courageous stand against the 'death sentence,' which would destroy the savings of so many of their constituents."

Senator Black revealed that the committee has issued subpenas for J. I. Mange, president of A. G. & E., and H. C. Hopson, former vice president, but that Mange is a patient in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and Hopson has not been located.

The appearance of Representative Patton, husky Texan, veteran of the State Legislature, before the Senate committee came as a surprise, as he had previously stated he would not testify voluntarily and did not expect to be summoned.

Accompanied by Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, he went before the committee armed with two books and a cigar box, which he presented as Exhibits A and B of the mysterious box allegedly turned over to him by John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co.

After telling his story without interruption and leaving the stand, he listened with obvious amazement to the story told by E. V. Sellers, an NRA employe, of Abilene, Tex., who has associated with Patton since his arrival here last winter.

When Sellers concluded his testimony, during which he related seeing Patton in the Mayflower Hotel with a newspaper-wrapped box on the Sunday before the vote on the "death sentence" and subsequently being shown a United States bond by Patton, the Texan returned to the stand with cries of protest and astonishment.

"I was never so chagrined in my life," he said.

He insisted that he had told "the honest-to-God truth" and advised the committee that it must believe one or the other—him or Sellers.

Sellers brought in the name of Patton's nephew, Norris Shook, as a supporting witness in his belief that the package Patton allegedly carried from the Mayflower Hotel was not cigars. He quoted the nephew as saying: "Hell, that wasn't cigars."

A few days later Shook remarked, according to Sellers, that Patton had bought another Government bond, "and it isn't pay day."

Later in the day Patton said he would insist that his nephew be called before the committee either to affirm or deny Sellers' story.

Patton's story of the books that he sent to John W. Carpenter, jr., and the box of cigars he received from him varied somewhat from the stories told by the elder Carpenter and Joseph A. Warsham, vice president of the Texas Power & Light Co. They all agreed, however, that Patton and Carpenter did not meet on the Sunday that Sellers said he saw Patton get the mystery package.

The Senators questioned Patton very pointedly regarding his income and expenditures since coming to Congress the first of the year. They said they were puzzled as to how he could buy four Government bonds at $750 each, or a total of $3,000, while supporting a family, paying $90 a month rent, when he drew only $3,100 between the time he came to Washington and the time he bought the bonds.

Patton explained that he had brought $800 in cash with him to the Capital, had collected more than $100 on a note, and had lived frugally. Later he recalled that he had collected about $300 mileage allowance at the rate of 20 cents a mile on 1,500 miles.

With frequent oratorical flourishes Patton opened his testimony by explaining that he came voluntarily before the committee because it was "only fair to the great State of Texas and to my family" to clear his name of insinuations made during previous testimony.

After exhibiting the books and cigars, and explaining the circumstances of the exchanges, he said:

"I hope to God I may be struck dead if that isn't the full expose of this business."

Went to See Friend.

He insisted that Carpenter is not a lobbyist but that he and the utility executive were old friends. Carpenter called Patton "Cousin Nat."

Sellers told the committee that he and Patton and Shook drove to the Mayflower Hotel on the Sunday before the House vote because Patton explained that he wanted to see a sick friend.

"He left us in the lobby and when he returned he had a little box and said, 'John gave me a box of cigars,'" Sellers recalled.

Sellers subsequently handled the box, which he said felt like pasteboard and was too small to be a cigar box. He said it was light and something inside it rattled.

Patton made a third appearance before the committee adjourned. He produced canceled checks to prove his statement that the four bonds were bought with checks issued on the sergeant at arms office. The bonds were bought on March 8, April 4, and two on May 8.

The Texas congressman continued to express amazement at Sellers' testimony, explaining that he and Sellers had been "splendid friends" and "I can't understand how he got mixed up in this transaction."

"The gentleman is mistaken some way," he concluded. "I've told the whole truth on this matter, so help me God."

Mellon, Bishop Cannon Embark for Europe

New York, July 26 (AP).—Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, were among the passengers who sailed for Europe on the Berengaria today.

They boarded the ship shortly before sailing time, Mellon taking the suite once occupied by the Prince of Wales and Bishop Cannon being installed in an inside tourist cabin.

Neither the financier nor the clergyman was on the passenger list and neither would discuss his plans. Bishop Cannon was carried aboard in an invalid-chair.

Mayor Reveals Strike Parley At Alexandria

Factory Heads Will Weigh Complaints of Women on Monday.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Mayor E. C. Davison, discussing the strike of employes of the Century Manufacturing Co. last night, said that Morris Weiman, president of the company, has arranged a conference Monday in Washington, at a time and place to be agreed upon later, in an effort to reconcile the differences now existing between the company and its employes, who have been out since July 15. The mayor said his interest in the matter is primarily to preserve peace in Alexandria, and to protect the interests of the citizens, rather than to compromise the strike. There are approximately 105 girls and women, residents of Alexandria, on strike.

In the meantime, a conference between Sydney Weiman, manager of the plant, and Howard T. Colvin, labor conciliator of the Department of Labor, has been arranged for Monday.

Mayor Davison has called attention to the Wagner act, approved July 5, 1935, which guarantees to employes of industrial establishments the right to self-organization, and to bargain collectively, through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in concerted activities for the purpose of mutual aid or protection.

The strikers are continuing their picketing of the plant, day and night. It is understood trucks have been sent from Baltimore to take away materials and finished products from the plant, but that the truck drivers, when advised by the women that a strike is in progress, made no effort to remove the goods.

A quarterly meeting of the Eighth District Graduate Nurses Association will be held today with a picnic luncheon and swimming party at the Gunston Manor cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Bowman. Mrs. Bowman is a past president of the Alexandria Nurses Association. Local members will meet at the nurses' home at 1:30 p. m. and leave for Pohick Church, where they will be joined by members from throughout the district, with Mrs. Ayleen Guthrie as guide for the remainder of the trip.

The life-saving class of the Alexandria Municipal Pool, under the direction of the Red Cross, supervised by David Henderson and Frank Backus, is being held daily at 4 p. m. These classes are open to the public and swimming lessons are free. There is no restriction as to age.

The tennis courts adjoining Jefferson School are now open to the public, with a small charge for their use. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Virginia Wade Ryder, at the pool, between 9 and 10 a. m. and 1 to 2 in the afternoon.

A meeting and smoker of the Valiant Knights Bible Class of the First Baptist Church will be held on Monday night at 8:45 o'clock at the home of Ervin Brooks, 19 Oak street.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Fannon have presented to the Alexandria Hospital an oil painting as a memorial to their little son, "Sonny" Fannon, who was killed when struck by an automobile five years ago. The painting is also a memorial to the late Dr. M. D. Delaney, the family physician of the Fannons, who was with their son at his birth and death.

3-Week Dock Strike Ends in Mississippi

Gulfport, Miss., July 26 (AP).—The three-week-old labor controversy on the Gulfport docks was reported settled this afternoon when the Gulfport Maritime Association accepted the peace proposal of the chamber of commerce.

J. L. Taylor, president of the chamber of commerce and chairman of the conference committee, announced that an agreement had been reached to end the dispute.

The peace proposal provided that the shippers' contract with the International Longshoremen's Association which expired June 30 be extended until such time as the disagreements can be settled definitely under the Wagner bill's collective-bargaining clause.

The Gulfport Benevolent Association locals, which were awarded a two-year contract, withdrew in favor of the plan of peace.

Business of the port had been tied up through picketing by the I. L. A., whose workers claimed discriminations.

Vote for D. C. Citizens Occupies Democrats

Voting franchise for the District will be discussed at an open forum meeting of the District Division, Young Democrats of America, Tuesday night at the Willard Hotel.

The chief speaker will be Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, it was announced by Miss Alva Patton, chairman of the group's District Affairs Committee.

Paul Best, president of the local Young Democrats, yesterday announced that Eugene Keyser has been named vice chairman of the publicity committee to plan a permanent voters' registration and information bureau here.

Maj. Brown Is Guest Of Camp Ritchie Boys

Superintendent of Police and Mrs. Ernest W. Brown today will visit Camp Ritchie, Md., where 201 Washington boys, members of the Boys' Club of the Metropolitan Police Department, are on vacation.

The camp opened last Monday and will run for six weeks. During that time 1,200 boys from 6 to 18 years old will spend one week there.

Reports from the camp indicate that the first detachment of youngsters will greatly regret the end of their week of supervised games, swimming, woodcraft and other activities.

D. C. Resident Objects to Fete For Montgomery Legionnaires

Takoma Park Veterans Moved Fair to Dodge Game Restrictions.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post,
1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Plans of the Takoma Park (Md.) Post of the American Legion to hold a lawn fete on vacant property in Eastern avenue, Takoma Park, D. C., met opposition yesterday. Herndon M. Normandy, 6806 Eastern avenue northwest, objected in a letter to Commander E. Brooke Fetty.

Normandy stated that he owns the property next to the lot and that he fears the noise of the games would disturb the sleep of his 5-year-old daughter. He further declared that he was opposed to having a Maryland organization move into the District for such an affair.

Failure of the legionnaires to cancel the fete will be met with the filing of a suit for injunction, Normandy informed Fetty.

The Takoma post plans the event to raise funds to send its delegates to the annual State convention at Ocean City in September. Because of the recent order from State's Attorney James H. Pugh that the gambling laws of the county would be strictly enforced regardless of whether the affair was for charity or a benevolent or fraternal group, the legionnaires decided to move into the District so they could have bingo and other games banned in Montgomery County.

Fetty said last night he is not sure what his post will do.

The annual tour of the 4-H Jersey Calf Club will be held Monday, it was announced yesterday by Albert A. Ady, assistant county agent for Montgomery County.

Members of the club will meet at the courthouse in Rockville at 9 a. m. The following schedule of visits will be followed: Clarkson Fry, Rockville; Lee R. Howes, Washington Grove; Allie Messer, Washington Grove; Richard Vetter, Rockville; Frank Stiles, Rockville; Bob Robertson, Rockville; Neal Crown, Gaithersburg; Harold Young, Damascus; Billy Hodges, Boyd; Charles Bodmer, Poolesville; Mason Butler, Poolesville; Stanley Umstead, Poolesville; Edward Poole, Germantown, and Newton Butts, Gaithersburg.

Standing committees to serve the North Woodside-Montgomery Hill Citizens Association have been appointed by James T. Reside, newly elected president. Chairmen of committees are as follows:

Entertainment, Mrs. J. G. Pratt; constitution and by-laws, James W. Gill; membership, Charles M. Irelan, jr.; postal facilities, Robert C. Brooks; streets and lights, William H. Ourand; police and fire protection, F. J. Schuyler; school facilities, William H. Reynolds; legislation and legal action, E. Clyde Algire; home grounds beautification, Leo P. Watson, and sanitation and public health, Dr. James M. Bankhead.

According to Reside, the association will devote much of its time during the coming year to studies of taxation, schools, road construction, playground facilities and public health. An intensive membership drive also is contemplated, he said.

A public hearing on the application of Warren W. Mulligan for rezoning of property in the J. C. Wilson subdivision of Silver Spring from residential A to residential B will be held August 26, at 7 p. m., in the county building at Silver Spring, it was announced yesterday by Ira C. Whitacre, clerk of Montgomery County Commissioners. The petition already has been approved by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Montgomery County 4-H Club girls will vie for awards in 15 classes of exhibits at their second annual rally day at the Liberty Grove Grange Hall in Bartonsville, August 2. At the same time the members will stage a style revue and exhibit samples of work carried on during the past year.

Miss Edythe M. Turner, county home demonstration agent, also has announced that the club record books will be judged during the day and club members placing first in each class will go to College Park to compete in the State-wide contest during annual 4-H Club week, August 8 to 13.

John White, of Takoma Park, Md., injured his right foot yesterday when he dropped a motor while working at the service station of the Takoma Motor Co. on Fourth street and Blair road, Takoma Park, D. C.

He was treated by Dr. William A. Shannon, of Takoma Park.

Thompson Case Witnesses Tell Of Body's Find

Slain Girl's Sister Identifies Victim Clothing; Sexton Testifies.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 26.—Gruesome details of the finding of the battered body of beautiful Mildred Hallmark were related today in the murder trial of Gerald Thompson.

William McGarvey, a sexton, told from the witness stand in circuit court how he had happened upon the nearly nude form of the cafe hostess on June 17, as he went to his work in Springdale Cemetery.

Thompson—accused of choking, slugging and assaulting the 19-year-old auburn-haired girl—listened with stolid indifference. The jurors and an overflow crowd strained for every word.

"I looked into a ditch," McGarvey told the jury. "There was the body." He estimated the culvert was 4½ feet deep.

Ruby Hallmark wept without restraint as she identified the blood-flecked clothing her younger sister had worn on the night of the tragedy.

Piece by piece, State's Attorney Edwin V. Champion held this disheveled attire aloft, then introduced the garments as evidence in his efforts to send the defendant to the electric chair.

"The gray plaid coat—yes, she wore that," Ruby testified. "I know it was hers. I gave it to her myself."

Tears coursed down her cheeks as she identified the hat, dress, shoes and stockings of her sister. Defense Counsel Ren Thurman whispered to his client. He did not contest introduction of the rumpled garments.

John McGinnis, student at Bradley Polytechnic Institute, told how he had escorted Mildred to a theater the night of the crime. He placed her aboard a street car late in the evening, he testified.

The State maintains that Thompson picked her up in his car later as she left the street car, drove her to the grave yard, knocked her unconscious when she resisted his advances and left her to die.

Both Ruby and McGinnis insisted there were no bruises on Mildred's throat when they last saw her alive.

"When did you next see her?" Champion asked Ruby. Her voice choked as she replied:

"At the morgue—she was dead."

Detective Delivers Deserter; Gets Slip

Captain Gives Receipt for A. W. O. L. Marine.

Detective Sergt. Frank M. Alligood returned to Police Headquarters yesterday with a strange receipt. It said:

"Received from Sergt. Alligood one George Hoyt Lee, deserter from the United States Marine Corps. (Signed) Capt. W. E. Maxwell, U. S. M. C."

Alligood arrested Lee on a tip. Lee told him, he said, that he had deserted twice, the second time because he could not stand punishment meted out to him after the first time.

Alligood delivered him at the Marine Barracks, whence he was returned to Quantico. A $50 reward had been posted for him.

Peach Trees Inspected In Martinsburg Area

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 26.—After examining approximately 80,000 peach trees in Berkeley, Morgan and Jefferson Counties, John B. Williams, inspector for the United States Department of Agriculture, who has been working in this section for 10 days, reported no trace had been found of the "phony" peach disease.

Williams' home State of Georgia has suffered large losses from the disease and the department is conducting a survey of the entire country. The disease causes a light production of fruit. No remedy has been found for it.

County Court Delays Trial Of 2 on Gambling Charge

Judge George B. Merrick of the Upper Marlboro Police Court, yesterday postponed hearing of charges against two men arrested in the recent series of Prince Georges County gambling raids. He set August 9 for the hearing.

The men, Mike Myers, of Silver Hill, Md., and Bernard Fitzgerald, of Washington, were charged with setting up and maintaining a gambling table. The charges were made in connection with a raid last Sunday morning on the Green Oak Country Club at Silver Hill.

The raiding officers, County Policeman Elon Turner and Deputy Game Warden Frank Burroughs, were severly beaten by occupants of the establishment before they gained control of the crowd.

Myers was taken into custody at the time of the raid. Fitzgerald was arrested Thursday. The police confiscated a great quantity of alleged gambling equipment from the establishment.

The first conviction in the series of raids were obtained Thursday in Capitol Heights Police Court when Irwin Makle, colored, paid a $50 fine for operating an alleged gambling establishment. He was arrested in a raid that took place at Fairmount Heights a few hours before the visit to the country club.

Parley Is Called To Speed Work On Boulevard

Arlington Officials Urge Completion of Link to Bridge.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 809. Clarendon, Va.

T. W. Ross, rights-of-way agent for the Virginia State highway department, and C. M. Smith, chief of survey parties for the department, came to the county yesterday to confer with representatives of the United States Bureau of Public Roads and county officials in an effort to complete the Lee boulevard to the Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The engineers, with J. V. McNary, of the Bureau of Public Roads, and C. L. Kinnier, county engineer, made a tour of the final revised northern route from Station 107 in Lyon Park to the bridge. The revised route will be submitted to the engineering department of the State highway department for its approval.

The State having allocated $150,000, it is expected the remaining 2 miles of the road will be completed in the early fall.

It was pointed out that the right-of-way was accepted by the State more than nine years ago but, when work was started about two years ago it was found that there were more rights-of-way to be obtained. The State already has spent more than $100,000 in rights-of-way.

The summer dental clinic for school and pre-school children next week, according to an announcement made by Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, will be as follows:

Monday for school and pre-school children; Tuesday for school children only; Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday for both school and pre-school children.

The clinic will be held at the Clarendon Health Center from 9 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. and will be in charge of Dr. P. H. Pumphrey, county school dentist. The fee will be 50 cents.

For special appointment parents are asked to call the office of Dr. P. M. Chichester at the courthouse.

The county health department does not deem it necessary to ban public gatherings because of infantile paralysis elsewhere in the State, Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, announced yesterday.

Dr. Chichester said that the department was using the press, the Sunday schools and eating places to broadcast health hints that would help keep the county free of the disease. The same helpful information, he said, would be given to any citizen of the county who called for it.

Rumanian Banker Is Forced to Resign

"Little Stavisky" Case Hits Governor of System.

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, July 26.—Rumania's "Little Stavisky" case caused the resignation today of Grigori Dumitrescu, governor of the Rumanian National Bank. Investigators tonight were trying to determine whether responsible officials of the bank were involved.

The scandal grew out of the alleged illegal transfer of 100,000,000 lei (about $1,000,000) to Belgium for an unnamed foreign concern operating in Rumania. Numerous instances of bribery were allegedly involved.

Authorities this evening stoutly denied the case held within it the seeds of possible political upheaval, as did France's more famous scandal arising out of the operations of the late Serge Stavisky.

The security of the Tatarescu cabinet is not threatened, they said. Premier Tatarescu conferred lengthily with King Carol, but associates said he was merely giving the monarch information on the case.

Explosions Continue At Ammunition Depot

By the Associated Press.

Ankara, Turkey, July 27 (Saturday).—Troops waged a desperate fight early today to save important ammunition dumps as heavy explosions continued among ammunition supplies of the Mamora Naval Base near Ismidt.

Violent explosions started a fire in a part of the military zone, the second within a week in Turkish military areas.

Fire brigades were hurried to the scene. Censorship was put into effect and details of the explsions could not be obtained. There were no reports of casualties.

The blasts, which began yesterday, followed a mysterious explosion in a munitions dump near Istanbul July 21.

Move to Expose Dutch Schultz At Trial Fails

'Bo' Weinberg, Margolese Fizzle as Witnesses Against Racketeers.

By the Associated Press.

Malone, N. Y., July 26.—Two flashily dressed witnesses were summoned from jail by the Government today to tell tales on Dutch Schultz, the New York beer dealer of prohibition days, but no tales were forthcoming.

They were "Bo" Weinberg and "Moe" Margolese, who, Federal agents say, were once identified with the notorious Purple Gang of Detroit, and who later became associated with Schultz in the beer racket.

The witnesses had been placed in jail by order of Federal Judge Frederick H. Bryant when they appeared here in answer to a Government subpena in the Schultz income tax evasion trial.

Led out today, they were obviously reluctant to give testimony and Margolese even went so far as to deny he knew Dutch Schultz.

Much to their own surprise, Judge Bryant directed the marshal to release them from jail, where they had grumbled about the food. Weinberg offered to "tell the truth if the Government will grant me immunity," but the prosecutor dismissed him, saying he could not offer immunity.

A mass of legal data which had gone into the record of Schultz's first trial at Syracuse in April—a proceeding which ended in jury disagreement — was introduced. These records are intended to show that Schultz made about $480,000 during 1929, 1930 and 1931 on beer and failed to pay $92,000 in taxes.

Weinberg and Margolese were two of four "hostile" witnesses jailed at the outset of the trial with Schultz.

When court adjourned today Judge Bryant summoned the other two—Rocco di Larmi and Charlie (Weeping Willie) Miller—and offerred to release them in $10,000 bail each.

The prisoners said they couldn't put up the bail and the judge ordered them back to jail.

Schultz himself grew less and less attentive as the day wore on, and he actually began to take on a cheerfulness after noon. He complained with mock disgust against the jail food, especially the coffee. A new brand was ordered for him.

Glen Echo Woman Arrested On Charge of Cruelty to Dog

Mrs. Cecelia Shaffer, of Glen Echo, Md., was arrested by Montgomery County police yesterday on a charge of cruelty to animals. She was arrested on a warrant sworn by William Combs, also of Glen Echo, charging that she had abused a large German shepherd dog entrusted to her care.

The dog, police said, was originally the property of "Sonny" Workman, jockey, who gave it to a friend, George Chaillet, of 2138 California street northwest. Finding his apartment too small for the animal, Chaillett had Mrs. Shaffer keep him, police said.

According to police, witnesses said that the dog had been beaten with a chain and tantalized by having his food placed just out of his reach. These witnesses were Reginald and Cornelia Russell and Jack Martin, all of Glen Echo, police said. The Russells told police the animal frequently came to their house to be fed.

County police also obtained a search warrant and went to get the dog, which they could not locate. Mrs. Shaffer was released on $200 bond for her appearance at the Rockville Police Court on August 5.

$9,284,000 Bid Lowest of 7 for U. S. Building

Interior Structure Biggest Federal Project Here in Years.

The George A. Fuller Co., of Washington and New York, submitted the lowest figure when bids were opened yesterday for construction of the new Interior Department Building. Its estimate was $9,284,000.

Seven contractors from Washington, New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Chicago competed for the award, which will be the largest allotted for a Federal building here in several years. The structure is to be erected immediately south of the department's present home and will be bounded by C, E, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets northwest.

The Consolidated Engineering Co., Inc., of Baltimore, was second with its bid of $9,370,000. Next in order came the Cauldwell-Wingate Co., New York, $9,461,000; McClosky & Co., Philadelphia, $9,475,000; John M. McShain, Inc., $9,728,000; John Griffiths & Co., Chicago, $10,498,000, and Carleton, Co., Inc., New York, $10,696,191.

Congress has authorized the expenditure of $11,500,000 on the project, latest step in the development of the so-called "northwest triangle" as a Government building area corresponding to the Pennsylvania avenue triangle east of the White House.

Demolition of buildings now occupying the site, excavation work and erection of the superstructure are included in the blanket contract to be awarded.

Inspection Aids Facing Formal Graft Charges

Complaints Will Be Aired Later On at Public Hearings.

Complaints of improprieties involving persons in the office of the District building inspector yesterday were ordered incorporated in formal charges by Commissioner George E. Allen.

Chester Gray, assistant corporation counsel assigned to assist Commissioner Allen in sifting the complaints, and Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, who made a preliminary investigation at request of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, discussed the matter with the Commissioner.

Mr. Gray, Commissioner Allen said afterward, is to prepare formal charges involving each complaint and person. Copies of these are to be furnished to Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector, and the subordinates affected. The purpose of this, Commissioner Allen said, is to apprise the inspector of the detailed complaints and to give the subordinates opportunity to study complaints made against them.

Subsequently the charges are to be considered at public hearings to be conducted by Mr. Allen and Mr. Gray. Date of these hearings is to be fixed later. Charges include "loans" which have not been repaid to builders by borrowing employes of the inspection office, favoritism shown some building operators, and other criticisms.

Nazis, Fascists Are Attacked At Red Meeting

Communist Leaders at Moscow Assail Nations for Aggrandizement.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 26.—The seventh Communist Internationale cheered loudly at bitter attacks on German Nazis, Italian Fascists and Japanese Militarists today.

"A defensive war by the national bourgeoisie of those countries will be a fair war in which Communists must take part," he said.

Loud applause greeted his statement that the most important choice facing humanity today was that between Fascism and Communism.

Communists will fight "for every inch of freedom that remains to the working classes" in countries governed by democratic parliamentary principles, Pieck said, in laying down the principle, new to Communism, that followers of Moscow should support "bourgeois" democracies.

A Store is More Than Just a Store

IT IS PART OF THE LIVES AND HOPES OF PEOPLE

Few people, we believe, see or feel the genuine spirit of A Store that is established to render real service to the public and the community. A Store is a universally human, appealing, living thing. In this picture, the first of a series of 12, the famous artist, M. Leone Bracker, has illustrated graphically the human side of This—Your Store.

We see a mother buying for her family—the hopes and joys of youth as typified by the boy, and the children of the family group—the love and ambition of young couples planning for their babies, to make dreams come true—and of old couples, now in safe harbor, but who find happiness in providing for the new generation. This, we think is the real human story of A Store Worthy of the Nation's Capital—Your Store.

You will see this poster on display throughout the store. Mr. Bracker, the artist, created during the World War, many posters for the Government. His "Keep 'em Smiling" was the most widely printed poster of the war. Another, entitled "Behold Your Enemy," in the early days of the war, won the Government prize for Black and White posters. Mr. Bracker created America's National Peace Poster for the Geneva Conference. His posters hang in the collections of the late King Albert of Belgium, and of the Emperor of Japan. His "Ten Commandments" have been distributed all over the world. His series of Washington, for the B. & O. Railroad, is widely known. His background, then, well equips him to do this series for us.

The Girl From Home.

Although it was night, the eastern horizon burned crimson, and the windows of the long hut let in the menace. Although the weather reports read "Fair," the atmosphere trembled from what might have been mistaken for an endless thunderstorm.

The hut had a tiny stage at its far end. All the rest of the place was filled by rude benches, and all the benches by men in disheveled uniforms: all the benches, all the aisles, all the doorways. Men who had just been risking their lives, men who would presently be risking their lives again, men who would lie in their graves tomorrow—the eager mixing with the sullen, the ardent with the disgruntled, but everyone war-shocked, everyone an exile, nostalgic soldiers every one.

And then, on the stage, a slim, piquant girl, wearing a gray-blue cap, jacket and walking-skirt, sang to them.

She not only sang to them: she made them sing with her. She brought them the thing they wanted most: she brought America and Home to the homesick A. E. F., "Somewhere in France."

Mary Boland, Sydney Shields, Eleanor Cantor, Mary Hampton: there is a long and loved list of American theatrical women who captured the hearts and deserved the gratitude of the American Expeditionary Force. But Pennsylvania-Dutch Elsie Janis Bierbower was the one who won the most hearts and who holds the firmest place in the affections of that Army. The recent news of her injury in an automobile accident came to her military admirers like a flash from the casualty lists of old. The later news, which assures her recovery, will stimulate thousands of torpid pulses that beat time to the songs of Elsie Janis in the Big Parade.

Mr. McCarl's Ruling.

Several million dollars will be spent in Washington during the next year to create jobs. Local officials are trying earnestly to spend this money on projects that will be of lasting value to the community. Under the regulations laid down by the Works Progress Administration, however, they are finding it difficult to achieve that objective.

To some extent their task has been facilitated by Comptroller General McCarl's ruling that regular District appropriations may be used in conjunction with WPA funds. In other words, local funds set aside for the construction of streets, sewers, repair work, etc., may be spent for materials, while the labor on these projects can be financed through the WPA. That reasonable decision effectively counteracts the too frequent assumption that Mr. McCarl is a hard-boiled reactionary who finds delight in frustrating New Deal projects. It is his business, of course, to interpret the law as he finds it.

The immediate effect of the McCarl ruling is to open up a more substantial type of project for the expenditure of local WPA allotments. It is nevertheless a source of keen regret to citizens of the District that some of this community's most urgent needs cannot be included within the current spending program. Our deficiency in school buildings and branch libraries apparently will not be relieved. The acute need of the courts for new quarters is likewise ignored. And the hazards of air transportation from a port that is clearly recognized as a menace remain uncorrected while large sums are being frittered away in boondoggling.

Pretty Thin.

Whatever doubt lingered as to the political finagling behind the appointment of T. Webber Wilson to the Federal Parole Board is dissipated by the explanation put forward by Attorney General Cummings. Even in the field of politics, it is a gem.

Mr. Wilson, it will not soon be forgotten, was the judge recalled from the Virgin Islands along with Gov. Pearson, as a result of the Senate investigation. Relieved of his duties in the tiny Caribbean possessions, he was immediately named to the Federal Parole Board. Before this was possible, however, it was necessary to make a vacancy on the board and Dr. Amy N. Stannard, an expert psychiatrist of long and faithful service, was selected as scapegoat.

Her resignation was occasioned, submits Mr. Cummings, by the fact that only 4 per cent of the Federal prisoners are women. The implication, as confirmed by subordinates in the Department of Justice, is that a woman member of the board should deal only with women, inasmuch as it might be embarrassing for a woman psychiatrist to have to hear testimony concerning some of the male cases.

Dr. Stannard, whose restraint in this sordid business is admirable, merely retorts that there was nothing embarrassing to her in the work. Indeed all the embarrassment in the matter devolves on the head of the Attorney General, where it will probably be concentrated as long as Judge Wilson holds parole board office.

Not Even A Face Saver.

The tentative tax plan of the House Ways and Means Committee is expected to add from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 to the Federal revenues. With a budgetary deficit of about $3,500,000,000 recorded for the fiscal year just ended and a larger deficit anticipated during the present fiscal year, the program is palpably inadequate as a revenue measure. It should, however, help to spread realization that the cost of running the Government on present lavish lines can not be met merely by increasing taxes levied upon the rich. If that salutary truth can be forced home, the committee's labors will not have been altogether vain.

The meagerness of the anticipated returns from the proposed taxes is especially striking in view of the fact that the President's recommendations have been followed by imposing almost confiscatory levies upon large incomes and estates. The committee was less docile in responding to the suggestion that corporation income taxes should be graduated with reference to size of income. However, it provided for a limited range of 1 per cent instead of the present flat rate. By doing so, it set the seal of approval upon a thoroughly unsound proposal which should have been rejected outright as a matter of principle.

Graded taxes upon excess profits are recommended as a means of producing the bulk of the new revenue from corporations. Obviously, if any kind of graduated tax on corporations is contemplated it is more logical and reasonable to vary it with reference to the rate of profits rather than the amount of the net income. The latter method of procedure merely penalizes size as such and disregards the fact that many shareholders of large corporations are persons of small means.

It serves little purpose to linger over the deficiencies of specific proposals in view of the major defects of the tax program, viewed either as a plan for sharing wealth or producing revenue. New taxes which at the most liberal estimate would take $250,000,000 of current income from a small number of wealthy individuals and a few corporations can not by any stretch of the imagination be regarded as a wealth-sharing device. Even in the depression year of 1932 the national income was estimated to amount to approximately $50,000,000,000, while it probably exceeded $80,000,000,000 in 1929. As a measure of social reform, therefore, in the Rooseveltian sense, the tax program is a conspicuous failure. At the same time it may do much incidental harm by encouraging a flight of capital to tax-exempt securities and by forcing the break-up of large estates invested in productive enterprises.

Critics are generous when they refer to this tax bill as a "face saver" for the President. It is better described in the words of one exasperated Congressman as "a gesture at social reform and nothing at all as a revenue producer." The Administration will be hard put to excuse or explain its insistence upon prolonging the session for the sake of such negligible results.

The fiscal problems presented by our soaring public debt can only be solved by imposing heavier taxes, direct and indirect, upon all classes. The sooner that fact is brought forcibly to public attention, the better are the chances for enactment of a tax program that will assure a balanced budget and avert the dangers inherent in our present deficit financing.

Hat Martyrs.

The Government of Iran has ordered its male citizens to wear Western headgear, and serious riots have resulted. But the Occidental press reports them with tongue in cheek and with that superior smile which is always irritating when the occasion doesn't warrant any assumption of superiority.

After all, Shah Riza Khan Pahlevy has the example of President Kemal behind him. The subjects of both these rulers are largely Moslem, and the fez or turban of the Moslem is—or until lately was—a badge of his faith. The only worldly difference between the Persian and Turkish Moslems seems to be that, whereas the latter adopted the Western fashion without much demur, the former resist the sumptuary law as an invasion of civil as well as religious liberties.

Certainly there could be found something in favor of this resistence even by those Americans who care little for such liberties and are not Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Is the dwindling derby such a thing of beauty in comparison to the fez? Does the "soft felt" reveal qualities of joy forever when placed beside the turban? Moreover, if Western warriors are not so childish as to kill those of their fellow nationals who flout hat regulations, the cultured gentlemen of the New York Stock Exchange still find it amusing to bash the straw hat that ventures into Wall street after mid-September.

Backing The Bourgeoisie.

The decision of the Communist Internationale to abandon thoughts of world revolution, and to combine forces with unregimented bourgeois elements in countries opposed to Fascism, was not completely unexpected. Not long ago Communist deputies in France were urged to vote for increased military expenditures, the reasoning being that protection of France from the specter of Nazi Germany is more important to workers than any immediate conversion of France to Communism.

The superior force of political exigency over economic theory is thus once again demonstrated. But the development emphasizes particularly the Russian fear of German aggression, being clearly an attempt to placate the Soviet's potential capitalist allies. Reports from the Moscow congress indicate that a world labor party will be launched to bolster the forces of workers, particularly in those countries where democracy is threatened by dictatorships. This seems to mean that Communists will seek to align themselves in groups where they must be greatly outnumbered, and where their hope for control will be slight.

The practical success of the program will depend in each instance largely on the attitude of the local Communists. In this country, for example, it has been demonstrated time and again that co-operation between Communists and other political groups is impossible because of the Marxians' flat refusal to compromise, to consider action except on their own terms and under their own dictation. Moscow's repudiation of this disdainful attitude will have domestic political significance if it means furtherance of the "united front" so often discussed in radical circles.

The Liaison Problem.

Under a governmental system of checks and balances the relationship between the executive and the legislature is a matter of foremost importance. No Congress made up of representatives from many States, holding widely diverse viewpoints, can be expected to legislate intelligently without positive leadership. To a considerable extent that leadership must come from the President. In times like the present, when numerous measures of vital economic and social significance are under consideration, the working contacts between the Chief Executive and Congress constitute a problem of no little complexity.

The Constitution specifically assigns to the President the role of adviser to Congress. Moreover, his veto power gives him extensive influence over legislation, and his unofficial position as head of the party which elects him makes the Executive responsible for the initiation and promotion of measures constituting a national policy. Few would advocate diminution of these powers. On the contrary, there is general recognition of the need for some regularized policy to make cooperation between the White House and the Capitol more effective.

To a certain extent this function has been performed lately by Charles West, although he has been on the pay roll of the Farm Credit Administration. Now this former Congressman has been shifted to the newly created post of Undersecretary of the Interior. If he continues to function as a liaison between the President and members of Congress, his administrative status will be highly irregular. What is needed is an arrangement whereby the Administration may openly inform and advise congressional leaders without resort to devious maneuvering, secret propaganda or political influence.

In recent attempts to influence the judgment of Congress the Administration has resorted to intolerable procedure. Its agents have resorted to tactics not dissimilar from those employed by professional lobbyists. Too often political pressure has taken the place of frank and open discussion. Instead of guiding Congress, the President has tried to coerce that body in a manner that has aroused the resentment of all legislators who think for themselves.

The contacts established through Mr. West afforded an opportunity to place the relations between the President and Congress on a higher plane. Obviously one man could not supersede the miscellaneous political pressure emanating from many executive departments. But it was a start in the right direction. Now that Mr. West has been shifted, presumably to responsible executive duties, the question of beginning again to set up a legitimate and responsible liaison is immediately raised.

The bungling efforts of certain officials to "boss" Congress must not be allowed to discredit all plans to bring about more practical working arrangements. The line between political connivance to secure legislation without adequate analysis, and open presentation of data and arguments to sustain an Administration policy, should be sharply drawn. While that is being done, however, the need for some more adequate, above-board and trustworthy means of conveying to Congress the aims and viewpoint of the Administration may well be considered.

Another thing that retards the progress of man is that his architectural design so aptly fits him for sitting down.

Reform In Tennessee.

From The Houston Post.

Tennessee is exploring new trails through the wilderness of modern change and confusion.

In submitting to the people the question of a constitutional convention to rewrite the State's organic law, the Tennessee Legislature has taken a step which has been advocated for a long time. A powerful campaign is being made for a favorable vote on the issue on October 10, and its chances are considered good.

Its treasury overspent by $4,000,000 or more—a serious deficit for Tennessee—the Legislature of that State will consider, at a special session to be convened Monday, ways and means of raising needed revenues.

Another log awaiting the legislative saw and ax in the Tennessee woodpile is the question of prohibition repeal. Under an act of 1909 the State is dry, but the act has never been very well observed. In fact, there is a serious question in the minds of the State authorities as to whether new legislation is necessary to make Tennessee legally wet.

If Tennessee can get these issues and the TVA all settled to its satisfaction this year, it will feel that it has given itself a new deal from a new deck.

Ethiopia And The Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Abyssinia is now before the public eye, its romantic history from a biblical standpoint should be noted. In a general way it has been called Cush, Sheba, Ethiopia and Abyssinia. In days before the reputed time of Moses, the Pharaoh of Egypt (Thothmes I), who conquered it, made a high official of his court "the Prince of Cush." Some think Moses himself was offered that position, or filled it; anyhow, Josephus, the Jewish historian, says that Moses was sent to Cush and married a Cushite or Ethiopian princess named Tarbush.

This tradition finds an echo in the Bible when, after crossing the Red Sea and moving down toward Ethiopia, the sister and brother of Moses chided him for "marrying an Ethiopian," or Cushite. Tarbush did not, obviously, quit Egypt when Moses did, but afterward rejoined him.

The Queen of Sheba (Ethiopia) visited Solomon, not without reason. Some affinity or relation must have led her to do this. Tradition has it, and the present Abyssinian King believes it, that Solomon added to his many wives the Queen of Sheba. From her, so goes the story, he had a son, who was the progenitor of the present dynasty in Abyssinia.

Something of truth must be in these traditions, for we read that in apostolic days an Ethiopian chamberlain of Queen Candace had come to Jerusalem "for to worship." Evidently he had intimate knowledge of a relationship between his country and Palestine and its worship. This man was converted to Christianity by Philip the evangelist and in turn became the founder of the present Abyssinian (Coptic) Church.

Thus, while the different nations play politics and try to exploit Abyssinia, the church has a very definite interest in that romantic land. The church can not be silent and let Abyssinia be made the plaything of Mussolini or any other invader. J. O. KNOTT.

Jackson's "Stonewall."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with great interest in your issue of July 21 in the staff correspondence of The Post from Manassas, Va., July 20, an account of the observance of the seventy-fourth anniversary of the Battle of Bull Run; the first engagement of the Civil War. It reports the remarks of Maj. John K. Shawvan, of Clyde, Ohio, a student of the battle, where he says (perhaps it is the expression of the correspondent):

It was in the Battle of Bull Run that Beauregard, while watching the operations of Gen. Jackson from a ridge, exclaimed to his aide de camp, "There stands Jackson like a stone wall." Thus started the name.

The last sentence is the only correct expression.

If you will turn to "The Drum Beat of the Nation," by Charles Carleton Coffin, the noted war correspondent, see page 99 and you will find:

Gen. Bee sees them, and thus calls out to his wavering men, "See Jackson standing like a stone wall."

If you will turn to the first volume of "Battles and Leaders of the Civil War," probably the most correct brief history, because it was written by actual participants, and look on page 210 (popular edition, four volumes, in eight parts), you will find in the article on the "Battle of Bull Run," written by G. T. Beauregard, general, C. S. A., this:

"It was at this moment that Gen. Bee used the famous expression, "Look at Jackson's brigade! It stands there like a stone wall."

JOHN STUART BARROWS.
Boston, Mass., July 23.

For Nonpolitical Referees.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: We are consistently told that the President and Mr. Hopkins are more concerned with the welfare of the unemployed than with the wishes of local political "machines;" but we have never been enlightened as to the method by which the said unemployed can get a square deal, with all administrative employes selected by local politicians, and all complaints made to Washington returned to the person or persons responsible for the injustice, and the person making the complaint allowed to be discriminated against—and told that "he (or she) has caused us enough trouble already."

It appears to me that, with so many "investigators," and so much money to employ others, that complaints might be referred to an investigator who has no connection with local or State political leaders, and said investigator interview the authors of the complaints, in regular trips over given districts. Certainly, the just complaint would receive fairer treatment by this method.

Chicago Laughter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago there appeared in your news columns an article covering the activities of our "gentleman farmer" Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgantheau, in connection with the current move on the part of the Administration to have the Government made immune to lawsuits against itself for alleged damages incurred by private individuals or companies as a result of the incredible repudiation of the gold clauses in bonds. The article stated that Mr. Morgenthau offered to be "personally responsible" for the consequences if Congress would agree to enact the necessary legislation.

Our sides are sore from laughing. We might consider it more seriously if only somebody were responsible for Mr. Morgenthau. E. N. B.

Praises Rep. Jenckes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a native of the District of Columbia I wish to give praise for the stand of Representative Virginia Ellis Jenckes during the District committee meeting with reference to the bill on the bond holdings of the District.

I was present when she arose accusing Mr. Prettyman of malfeasance and I mentally registered praise and thankfulness to our Indiana neighbors for sending a brave conscientious woman to Congress who upholds the principles on which the crime investigation was conducted this winter in Washington. More 'Married Clause' Arguments

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Married Clause" should be struck out and the marital status should not in itself prevent any couple from holding Government positions.

Government work is or should be maintaining and rendering essential services to the public. Therefore, under present conditions, it should offer opportunities of employment to two general classes of workers, namely, scientists and highly trained men and women as well as executives and clerks who seek Government positions but being economically able are willing to accept a salary of $1 a year in order to work on a contractual basis, as during the late war; and all those of proper qualifications who have to work for a living.

It follows that the law in specifying a maximum for the combined salaries of the couple should allow an amount adequate to maintain not only the couple themselves but the actual or prospective number of children upon the basis of an average-size family, say, five. Specific increment of income for the couple, with proper safeguards of tenure and efficiency, may be made on a progressive periodical scale in terms of years, or outright before or upon the birth of a new member to the family, or upon a combination of these two methods.

This brief description is only one of many social policies the Government could make possible or encourage through its laws dealing with Government work and compensation therefor. Thus the Government, the people's final resort, could test as well as eventually set a standard for private industry. Then, in the selection of workers, the English system of civil service wherein only the relatively few higher officials responsible for carrying out policies are appointed could well be adopted and adapted to American conditions.

AMBROSE JULIAN FAHY.
Washington, July 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The discrimination against married women should work inflexibly against all or none. The fact that some of the opponents of the discrimination are willing to have it apply to higher salaried persons makes it manifest that the matter is based upon envy and that it serves only to appease unhealthy states of feeling.

Applying the discrimination to higher salaried women and not to others would make the discrimination more pointed and meaner and would penalize the very few women who have achieved some measure of success. Such an untoward discrimination would discriminate against the very women who have fought hardest for women and who have done most to raise their estate as a whole.

The discrimination based upon sex or marital state is purely a provision of panic and pettiness and has no place in any merit system. It is rather unfortunate that those affected by the unwise discrimination, instead of fighting it as a principle, are willing to have it continue so long as it affects others and not themselves. Obviously one ought to be for or against it for others and not try to be for it for others and against it for oneself. That surely is an untenable position for anyone. ANNA DEAN WILLIAMS.

The Post Impressionist

Pea-Soup Particular.

Post Office, Saturday.

When we make a mistake—and, oh, how rarely that occurs!—we always acknowledge it. We acknowledge it no matter if the mistake was made by somebody else, whom we quoted. In fact, we acknowledge it then even more freely and fully than when we happen to be a lonely offender.

So now, with perverted pleasure, we take back what we said some time ago about London fogs.

We said Londoners said London fogs had never been so bad as they were said to be. And we said Londoners said London fogs were decreasing in both frequency and power.

An English tourist concern was our authority. Now a second authority—Henry M. Robinson—says our authority erred. And traveler Robinson knows his England as well as Crusoe knew another little isle.

Well, from our own knowledge of London and human nature, we all along had some suspicion that the tourist concern might be just a trifle prejudiced. The London Pea-Souper—Dickens called it, you'll remember, "London Particular"—always struck us as very particular indeed. It seemed to us one of those "thoroughly English" things which England, the master-builder, has constructed to endure through ages:

"Age can not wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite monotony."

The formula is severely simple: Coal dust, a local air warm and moist, and the intrusion of a cool breeze from the sea.

"Stir these together," Mr. Robinson writes, "and you get . . . a fog that no other city has ever attempted to challenge. The dust particles act as kernels upon which fog droplets are formed when the breeze condenses the moisture . . . Eight million Londoners light their soft-coal home fires—and, by 9 a. m., the city is a pall of brown soup."

Now the Post-Impressionist understands what the Londoners meant by a song that was popular among them during the World War. It was dread of air attacks and the desire for smoke screens that prompted the melodious command: "Keep the home fires burning!"

The perfect London fog rises to a height of some 200 feet—and why not? London's soft-coal fires daily pump 300 tons of sulphuric acid gas into London's naturally limpid atmosphere.

Mr. Robinson—he's writing in The American Traveler—says:

"On foggy days, a citizen inhales 200,000,000,000 of these gas particles—almost a million times more than are found in clear mountain air." No wonder "the effect on health is disastrous." No wonder that, "during one historic fog, the death-rate rose from 16 to 19.14 and lung-diseases increased 250 per cent." Although doctors wouldn't venture forth upon any except serious emergency missions, many outdoor workers were partially asphyxiated by the fog-fumes: the hospitals needed their oxygen-tanks.

"The fogs decreasing in power?" Why, there was one particular less than three years ago which suspended all traffic within a radius of 30-odd miles of London. For hours, the great thoroughfares from Hammersmith to Hyde Park were a solid block of stopped vehicles. The Metropolitan Police sent out calls "for volunteers to control the traffic with searchlights"—but control was impossible. The ancient institution of the linkman (with a white handkerchief stitched between his shoulders) was temporarily revived—but at that you couldn't see two feet ahead of you.

Mr. Robinson was there.

On a comparatively recent election day, bell-ringers had to be dispatched to pilot Clapham voters. "In South London, a trail of white arrows was carefully chalked to show the way to the polls."

Mr. Robinson was there, too.

"Mail trucks could not collect mail . . . A couple returning from a wedding plunged into Wednesfield Canal. The royal musicians outside Buckingham Palace could not see their music during the changing of the guard. One airplane pilot got lost while taxiing from the center of the landing field to the hangar." And a searching party sent after him got lost, too. It all reminds us of a so-called day when we, in London, were due at the French front before nightfall, and our taxi lost the way to Waterloo.

But Mr. Robinson's instances are recent.

London fogs "decreasing in frequency?" Efforts to decrease them have failed through six centuries. Edward I forbade the burning of soft coal in London; there are smoke abatement committees today. But the Londoner likes soft-coal fires: they're traditional and they're cheap.

* * *

If London wants to get rid of its fogs, it will have to get rid of its Londoners.

Fair Enough

By

Westbrook Pegler

In God We Trust.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The interesting mind of Senator Long, of Louisiana, often a topic of discussion among his colleagues in Washington, appears to have entered a new phase. The Senator is now beginning to associate himself with God. The relationship is not exactly defined but appears to be that of a junior partner or special representative.

* * * *

On his arrival in New Orleans by plane a short while ago, the Senator exclaimed to the committee of armed guards who welcomed him, "Me and the Lord sure have been traveling fast." When he returned to Washington, he again referred to his new association in prescribing on the floor of the Senate three remedies for the ills which afflict the Nation.

"Back to the Lord," he said, "back to the Constitution and back to me."

To the casual observer, these remarks may seem to have been attempts at levity, questionable only on the grounds of taste. But those who have seen the Kingfish in action in the Louisiana State Legislature can detect a more ambitious intent. Huey has acquired all the power there is in Louisiana, short of divine authority, and he is one whose appetite for power cannot be content while there still is authority to be claimed.

If it is the next step in the development of Huey's mentality and his career to set himself up as a prophet, he will reverse the process which was followed by other great American holy men. Brigham Young, John Alexander Dowie, Benjamin Parnell of the House of David, Pastor Russell and the current Negro Messiah, Father Divine, of Harlem, whose followers regard him as God, no less, all began by claiming to be either God's special agent by direct appointment, with absolute authority over their followers, or God, Himself.

They first established firm control over the religious belief of their flocks and only then proceeded to dominate their political, social and financial affairs. All these wore whiskers, but they operated at a time when whiskers were regarded with more or less awe—the stained-glass window influence. In recent years, thanks to the comic artist and to failures of whiskered prophets who died without making good their claims, the deep-tangled beard has been abandoned. Mr. Wilbur Glenn Voliva, who took over Dowie's reign at Zion City, Ill., abandoned the master's make-up, and Father Divine's dark-brown countenance is nude. Aimee Semple McPherson, of course, would have been terribly handicapped as a bearded woman. Huey is smooth shaven.

Parnell, Dowie and Pastor Russell had no consideration for their successors. Parnell and Pastor Russell were going to live eternally, and it was an embarrassing task to explain why they had been taken off. Mr. Dowie had promised that when he went away he would leave this earth in a fiery chariot. This he did not do and the colony of Zion City has dwindled steadily, as a result.

* * * *

Senator Long, on the other hand, began as a politician and became dictator of the material affairs of Louisiana, answerable to nobody, before he began to suggest the existence of a working arrangement with God. His dictatorship is far greater than any of the others here mentioned. Utah is large in territory, but Brigham Young's domain was unimportant on any other basis of comparison with the Kingdom of the Kingfish.

But, like the others, even though he has reversed the order of things, Huey demands unquestioning faith and severely rebukes any challenge. Like Sister Aimee, he has a brass band except that his band is bigger and gaudier than hers and is, according to his claim, the loudest damn band in the world. And, like all of them, he is beset by enemies of the most sinister and malignant kind who do not hesitate to call him a faker and to question his disposition of the money.

It is a distinct novelty to find a prophet acting as press agent for a brand of gin, as Huey did in New York the other day, but these are new times and gin is now a legitimate article of commerce, in addition to which Huey has originality. He is the only prophet who could publicize gin and get away with it, an evidence of the man's power in the land.

It will be fascinating to note the progress of the new trinity of the Lord, the Constitution and the Kingfish. All his previous alliances have gone to smash because he wanted to be head man. He was once content to be a follower of Franklin D. Roosevelt, but wound up calling him a liar and a faker. Huey will hesitate long before denouncing his new senior partner in similar terms, but anything is possible in a dictator. Stalin and Hitler did.

County's Population 2

By the Associated Press.

Pierre, S. Dak., July 26.—Two men—that's the adult white population of Armstrong County as disclosed today by the 1935 State census.

Leo O'Neal and Ethan Earl Alexander—both 38, ranchers and World War veterans—are the only white men living in the 530-square-mile county. Both are married to Indians. O'Neal has three children, Alexander one.

Lawrence K. Fox, census director, said the county probably has fewer Caucasian residents than any other in the United States.

The State census lists 20 Indians in the county, part of the Cheyenne reservation. The Federal census of 1930 gave the county a population of 80, but made no classification as to race. The 1925 State census registered 27 white men, 20 white women and 266 Indians.

'Ghost' Is Whistler, Too

By the Associated Press.

Rock Island, Ill., July 26.—A new note—official if off key—was injected into the 2-month-old "ghost" mystery at the George Billingsley farm today.

The latest report of the Billingsleys to Sheriff Rudolph Kropp portrayed the "shade" in a new role—whistling "Let, Me Call You Sweetheart" while prowling about the farm.

And this was the sheriff's comment:

"Bah!"

Knox Denies Candidacy

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 26.—Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, told interviewers today he is not an aspirant for next year's Republican presidential nomination.

He laughed when shown an interview with George Creel, Democratic leader, taking note of rumors that former President Hoover was backing Knox for the nomination.

Europe Turns To Colonies

Franco-Italian Understanding In Respect To Ethiopia Is Counterbalanced By Bloc Composed Of Great Britain, Germany and Poland, The Latter With Eyes On Liberia.

By Stephane Botchev.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva (By Mail).

THE Franco-Italian understanding of the beginning of this year may be looked upon as having precipitated the crisis of colonial politics with which we are now confronted. It may be doubted whether such matters will completely occupy the stage to the exclusion of European problems such as that of Austria, but this is held, in some league circles, to be likely. What is certain is that the resumption of colonial politics will mark a further weakening of the league. All such affairs will be arranged outside its walls, and in a manner contrary to its principles. If by chance a colonial matter should happen to come before the league the consequences might be even more disastrous, involving possibly the dislocation of that institution.

To appreciate this point we need only look into the Abyssinian affair. Here, the league is faced with a clear choice—to intervene or not to intervene. If the league takes no steps to prevent Italy from conquering Abyssinia, war will break out, and we may expect to see Italian arms victorious. The result will be that a league member will have its territory seized in whole or in part without the intervention of the league. This is scarecely calculated to augment its prestige.

Now, suppose, on the other hand, that the league does intervene to prevent Italian action. Suppose that the council comes to deal with the Abyssinian question. Italy, for her part, may not even deign to appear at Geneva. If she does come, it will be with the intention, not of witnessing her own condemnation, but of claiming a mandate over Abyssinia. The attitude taken up by Signor Grandi in London and by the Italian press recently shows that this is the thesis that Italy is going to defend before the council.

Should the council wish to protect Abyssinia, far from giving Italy a mandate over the Negus' dominions, it will have to insist on the withdrawal of Italian troops from Abyssinian territory, and take whatever measure of compulsion will be necessary in case that Italy should disobey. Such decisions on the part of the council are for the present inconceivable. Still less conceivably could they be put into effect. All that could be said with certainty in such an eventuality is that Italy would march out of the league, banging the door behind her.

* * * *

IT is, therefore, improbable that there will be any serious league intervention in this African conflict where intervention could not have any positive results. Besides, there is another reason preventing action on the part of the league against Italy. France has bound herself to give Italy a free hand in Abyssinia. This is denied from the French side, but it is not only believed that such a promise was given, it is asserted that this promise was entrusted to paper, in a letter signed by Mr. Laval and handed over to the Italians. No league action is possible without France and still less against France. It is furthermore unthinkable that that country would abandon its new-found ally, Italy, after the Anglo-German naval agreement, and particularly after England's offers to Abyssinia which prejudice the development of French colonies (Djibouti).

The Franco-Italian understanding thus shows its worth for Italy. In fact, one can not see what other advantage Italy could get out of an arrangement which would allot her some hundred square miles of African desert. Abyssinia is beyond doubt Italy's share in the bargain.

It is now believed that the Franco-Italian colonial agreement involves not only a few French territorial concessions, nor yet a mere promise of support in the Abyssinian affair but envisages the setting up of a genuine united front on colonial policy. The reason for the establishment of such a bloc is to be sought in the German colonial claims. Italy and France have agreed, it is said, to oppose any revision of the colonial clauses of the peace treaties in favor of Germany.

* * * *

ALONG with the Franco-Russian alliance, this Franco-Italian entente rejecting all German colonial claims is given as one of the conditions favoring the Anglo-German naval agreement. Over against this Franco-Italian alliance for colonial purposes, which is aggressive with respect to Abyssinia, and leaves England to cope with German pretentions, there has formed, or is in process of formation another colonial bloc, Great Britain, Germany and, curiously enough, Poland.

Without doubt, it is to the colonial demands of Germany that we must look if we would understand the fundamental cause of the incipient stirrings in colonial politics. The Anglo-German naval agreement, it must be understood, is almost a concession of a colonial character by England to Germany, for though to have a fleet is not to have colonies, it is at least a good diplomatic argument for having them and an argument which will shortly pull its weight. In this way, England, by coming to an understanding in advance with Germany, is hoping to turn the German demands in the direction of the French colonies.

But there is the common front formed by Italy and France to oppose such claims. This is a grave situation, which becomes all the more serious with the increase of German strength, which must find an outlet either in Europe or in colonies. The possibility of eastward expansion is excluded by the Franco-Russian alliance, that of colonial expansion by the general refusal to make concessions—is not this a situation which threatens to end in an explosion?

* * * *

POLAND, which is joining the Anglo-German combination now in process of formation, has been led to do so for a curious reason. The Poles have taken up the idea of having colonies like ohter people—this idea finds clear expression in a speech made by the chief of the military general staff—and they appear to have picked on Liberia for a start. For some months there has been a Polish scientific mission in this country. The scientific character of this mission, however, did not prevent it from looking into other questions.

This fits in well with the prestige-politics of present-day Poland which looks upon itself as a great power. We are assured that one of the topics discussed by Beck and Hitler in their recent meeting at Berlin was this colonial question, and that Germany has promised its support.

Finally, one thing must be emphasized. The Abyssinian affair is a serious business. On the other hand, there exist German and even Polish colonial claims and ambitions, and colonial problems take up a great deal of attention. Still, it would be wrong to exaggerate the importance of all this and to believe that colonial politics is going to oust European politics.

The state which would establish a world power must be strong at home; and if Germany wishes to establish herself as a world power, she must first of all fortify her position in Europe. Hitler knows this well, and he has his plan—Ostpolitik and Anschluss. For Hitler's Germany, western policy is only the preparation of these two aims. And, if the former is yet distant, the latter, the Anschluss, is once more coming up for discussion, thanks to Italian preoccupations in Africa and the question now being raised of the restoration of the Hapsburgs.

Peery to Start Tour Of Institutions Tuesday

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—Gov. Peery and his budget advisory commission will start their tour of State institutions Tuesday, the chief executive announced today.

No detailed itinerary has been mapped, but the Governor said the group would spend the first day in the Richmond area, visiting other institutions Wednesday, probably including Petersburg on this day, and Thursday would visit Fredericksburg and Newport News.

About Paris

By

Andre Vulliet

THERE is at least one night in the year when dancing in the Paris streets not only gets the police official blessing but also is given precedence over traffic necessities. That is on the night of July 14, the French "Independence Day," when the whole country joyfully commemorates the day in 1789 when the people of Paris razed the hated Bastille royal prison, a symbol of tyranny.

Aside from the usual army parade along the Avenue Champs Elysees, the unusual display of an air armada in the Paris sky, and two huge political demonstrations held at both ends of Paris, this year's celebration was true to tradition. The great mass did not forget this was a popular fete and turned out in full force to preserve the most picturesque side of the French national holiday.

At nearly every important street corner, especially in the neighborhood of cafes, big or small, wooden platforms were erected, and tri-color decorations and long rows of paper lanterns strung from nearby houses. It was easy enough to drive around until 8 o'clock, but then traffic was stopped and chairs and tables sprang up along the sidewalks like mushrooms. Up jumped musicians, with plenty of accordions, on the patriotic platforms; the street itself was turned into a dancing floor and, by the force of circumstance, the cafe terraces expanded and expanded until they nearly joined each other.

Every now and then, especially in the Montarnasse section, near the students' quarter, Americans were seen apparently having the time of their lives. After a "real" dance among "real" Frenchmen they would sit at a terrace, sip a cheap drink and start out the next minute for a crazy whirl. In a little side street, near the Town Hall, far enough from possible onlookers but near enough to hear the music, we saw an old couple recall their happy days to the moving notes of a pre-war waltz.

This year, this went on well into the small hours, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. For three days, not only Paris, but the whole country danced, out in the heat of beautiful July nights. Joyfully but quietly, as no individual firecrackers were allowed, few drunkards were seen, no rows took place. Not a refined spectacle, if you like, but a popular one, both vulgar and intense, like most mass manifestations when people shout, kill or dance for a cause or a commemoration the meaning of which they do not know.

ACCORDING to old engravings, it seems that the enthusiasm that followed the surrender of the old Bastille fortress, in the summer of 1789, was paralleled only by the frenzy caused by the announcement of the Armistice, on the morning of November 11, 1918.

The first anniversary of such a symbolic event, July 14, 1790, was celebrated throughout France (and in other European cities as well) with an extraordinary display of official pomp and popular joy. It was the commemoration of this first Bastille Day which left its imprint on what was to become the French national holiday. On the site of the old prison, which in the meantime had been torn down to the last stone, 83 trees were planted representing the 83 departments of France and large posters with the words "Ici On Danse" (Here You Can Dance) indicated the people's determination to make merry on the very spot where the royal prison had raised its austere walls. On that night, all the streets between the Palais Royal and the Faubourg St. Antoine were illuminated and thronged with dancers. The tradition has been kept alive ever since.

A curious fact about street dancing is that it may be found in several localities in Europe, indulged in by their inhabitants on every festive occasion apparently with no rhyme or reason. In most of these places, it is purely a local custom, with no national or regional character, the origin of which would be hard to find were it not for historic records which show that Napoleon's troops had passed through those places on a 14th of July. The inhabitants had joined the soldiers in their street dancing, had liked it and kept it for their own fetes.

* * * *

ANOTHER fourteenth-of-July custom is that of giving free performances at most of the national (or so-called "subsidized") theaters in Paris, the Opera House, the Opera-Comique, the Odeon and the Comedie Francaise.

In spite of the weather, which is usually more suitable to outdoor pleasures, fans form up endless queues long before the show and wait patiently under the scorching July sun, eating sandwiches, making friends, talking "art." The most well-to-do among them bring folding chairs. If some of them are people who would stand anything just for the fun of getting something for nothing, most of them are destitute art lovers, or poor fellows for whom this constitutes the greatest treat of the year.

A great disappointment to them all, this year, was the inability of the Comedie Francaise, the French classical theater par excellence, to give its annual free performance, due to the fact that it is closed for repairs and remodernizing not to reopen until October.

The Academy

By

William Lyon Phelps

THREE hundred years ago, when King Louis XIII was on the throne of France, and the Three Musketeers were active, the French Academy was founded. Before 1635, the Academy had enjoyed a few years of precarious existence, in an amateur fashion; but in 1635, it received formal recognition from the King.

In the month of June in this present year, therefore, they celebrated in Paris the tercentenary; and our American Academy of Arts and Letters was represented by President Nicholas Murray Butler. Various receptions were held, music and drama were given by the State operas and theaters, and the French Academy added to its already great prestige.

* * * *

The 40 members, called the Immortals, have on the whole maintained the high level of excellence which was the ideal from the start. They represent —naturally with some glaring exceptions—Moliere, Alphonse Daudet, Guy de Maupassant—the best of French literature. The rules and the methods of election have remained without very much change. An Academician is elected for life, and the Academy is a self-perpetuating body, new members being chosen by a ballot of the existing ones. At present there are 38; with the exception of a few famous generals, men of letters constitute the majority.

The French Academy is probably the most influential and the most highly respected of all associations devoted to literature. Its main business has been the preservation of the purity, accuracy and dignity of the French language. A new grammar was recently published by the academy and over 200,000 copies have been sold. The Academy is now revising the dictionary.

Mayor Defends Order Against German in N.Y.

Cites State Department Releases to Prove Discrimination.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia quoted from five State Department news releases today in an effort to refute the department's contention that it had no record of any discrimination against Americans in Germany.

LaGuardia, who has aroused the German Consulate by refusing to grant a masseur's license to a citizen of the Reich, argues that Nazi discrimination against Jewish Americans has invalidated the commercial treaty under which the license was sought.

Commenting on the State Department's disavowal of any record of such discrimination, the mayor said:

"No responsible official of the State Department could have stated that there is no discrimination on the part of the German government toward American citizens."

Jews Applaud.

Jewish organizations meanwhile were applauding the mayor's stand, while German-American societies were denouncing it.

The State Department press releases cited by LaGuardia dealt principally with the treatment accorded holders of German securities. One of them, dated June 28, 1934, purported to be the text of a note handed by Secretary of State Cordell Hull to Charge d'Affaires Rudolf Leitner.

In this note the American Government, referring to Germany's move for concessions on debt service, voiced its "grave regret" that "the losses already being borne by American investors in German securities are thus to be augmented."

Another passage read by the Mayor said:

Cites Bond Loss.

"This Government is furthermore disturbed by the indications contained in the communication and in other declarations emanating from official German sources to the effect that discrimination is practiced between the various national groups of holders of German securities."

Another release, dated June 18, 1934, said the American Ambassador in Berlin had been instructed to inform the German government "that the Government of the United States would view with disapproval developments under which its investors would receive poorer treatment than the investors of other countries."

On May 5, 1934, the Mayor read, the State Department announced it had warned, in connection with German bonds, that the German government "can not escape the responsibility for any preferences it may sanction."

The National United German Societies sent a letter to the Mayor saying his "impulsive utterances" were endangering the friendly relations between this country and Germany.

fellow citizen of Merkenfritz, does any business with Jews, shelters one, flirts with one, is a traitor to the German people and its Fuehrer, and in this municipality can obtain no business and receive no municipal contracts."

Berlin Jews said the list of places closed to them had grown so long they had no place to go. This, also, Nazis denied.

Yesterday's edition of Der Front Soldat, Steel Helmet organ, was confiscated, apparently because it published a facsimile of a letter the late President Paul von Hindenburg wrote protesting, in effect, against bans on the veterans.

It was generally expected Steel Helmet units would be barred throughout the Reich as fast as reasons for such action could be found.

Nazis Release American Editor, Order Him Out

Berlin, July 26 (U.P.).—M. C. Harbeck, American editor of the German edition of the magazine Golden Age, was released by German authorities today and ordered to leave the country within three days. He took the evening train for Berne, Switzerland, headquarters of the Watch Tower Bible Society.

Harbeck was arrested July 18 by secret police on charges of attempting to smuggle funds from Germany and with attempting to circulate the Golden Age, banned by officials for criticism of the Nazis.

World Conflict Seen by Trotsky In African Row

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Oslo, Norway, July 26.—Leon Trotsky broke his long silence today to predict another world war would follow hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia.

War in Africa, the old revolutionist said, would do just what the Balkan war of 1912 did—marshal the world's powers into opposing coalitions and prepare the ground for history to repeat itself.

"It is very difficult to prophecy," he told the Norwegian labor newspaper Arbeider Bladet, "but I believe an eventual Italo-Ethiopian war is in the same relation to a new world war as the Balkan war of 1912 was to the World War of 1914.

"Three to Five Years."

"Before a new great war the powers would have to be classified and here an African war will point out the positions and mark the coalitions.

"It is impossible to say whether a world war will break out in three or five years, but we ought to focus rather on a short than a long time."

The famed exile, breaking the silence he imposed on himself when he came to Norway recently to try to regain his health, also predicted war between Japan and Soviet Russia within the year.

"Soviet Russia has its own danger in the Far East," he remarked. "The Japanese will of militaristic expansion is very large at present and Tokyo's policy is quite incalculable. War may break out in a year in spite of the Soviet's genuine will for peace.

Living Standard Low.

"At the beginning of such a war Japan may have success, but it will necessarily be losing finally on account of the interior position of Japan."

The Soviet era has seen great technical advances in Russia, Trotsky said, but he asserted the standard of living was "rather low, thus hampering the final fall of capitalism in America and Europe, the fate of which depends on their industrial productivity remaining higher than Soviet Russia's."

Trotsky, "the Napoleon of Bolshevism" who built up the powerful red army only to be exiled shortly after Nikolai Lenin's death, apparently was in much better health than when he came to Norway. He is busy writing a three-volume work on Lenin.

Rogers and Posts Shift To Horses for Vacation

Albuquerque, N. Mex., July 26 (AP).—Will Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Post flew today into the pine-clad Sangre de Cristo Mountains of northern New Mexico, where they will abandon Post's airplane and adopt "old Dobbin" for a brief vacation on mountain horse trails.

The trio landed the globe-girdling flier's new low-wing monoplane on the broad field of the Daite Phillips ranch near Cimarron, tucked in the North Canyon country.

The trio will fly to the ranch of Harry Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, in the Vermejo Park area near Raton, N. Mex., after a brief visit at the Phillips ranch.

U.S. to Stay Out Of Controversy, Roosevelt Says

against Catholics and Jews and failure to live up to obligations to the United States, suggested an investigation to determine whether this Government should break off diplomatic relations with the Nazi regime.

Meanwhile, led by Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, a delegation of representatives of Jewish organizations called on Undersecretary of State William Phillips and asked that the United States protest officially against reported anti-Semitic activities in Germany. Phillips listened attentively to their plea, promised to give sympathetic consideration to their request and to reply later.

The drive for this Government to show its displeasure over Nazi treatment of Jews and Catholics has grown in volume within the last weeks and the pressure for action is much greater than that directed against religious persecution in Mexico.

Agitation Embarrassing.

On numerous occasions State Department officials have indicated that agitation such as that directed against the German and Mexican governments have been embarrassing to them. It is a settled principle of diplomatic practice that what a country does within its borders, affecting only its own citizens, is none of the business of a foreign power.

Thus the greatest delicacy must be exercised in handling such matters. More than one-half of the House has petitioned the President to investigate, or show in some way this Government's disapproval of restrictions against free practice of religious beliefs in Mexico. The President declined to go further than to authorize, through the congressional committee chairman, a statement that this government and the American people are sympathetic with those advocating religious tolerance in all nations.

Silent on LaGuardia.

The President declined to make any comment on the action of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York in directing that a permit to do business be refused a German masseur on the ground that Germany had discriminated against American citizens.

Aside from discriminations against American holders of German bonds in the allocation of foreign exchange for payment of interest, the State Department has no record of German mis-treatment of Americans. Until the German Embassy protests against the LaGuardia action, the State Department is keeping hands off that affair.

League Balks Italy In Move on Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

London, July 26.—Europe's diplomats tonight pushed eleventh-hour efforts to get Premier Benito Mussolini to accept wide economic concessions, instead of military victory in Ethiopia, but indications were Il Duce would accept nothing less than a protectorate.

That, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has said repeatedly, is unthinkable.

Great Britain awaited an official statement of Italy's claims and charges against the African nation, but it learned unofficially Il Duce would insist upon the protectorate.

The extraordinary session of the League of Nations Council to consider plans for peace has been called for July 31 or August 1.

Events Point to War.

Supporting the view that war—despite all Britain's and the league's efforts for peace—was imminent were these developments today:

1. Ethiopia was authoritatively reported unwilling to revive the Italo-Ethiopian Commission, which broke up at Scheveningen, The Netherlands, over frontier questions. Italy proposed its revival in telegrams to Addis Ababa, Geneva and other capitals yesterday.

2. The Stefani (Italian) News Agency reported from Djibouti, French Somaliland, another "bloody encounter" between Ethiopians and native troops in British Somaliland. Three British Somalis were killed, Stefani said, and grave repercussions were feared.

3. Rome, still echoing to last night's huge pro-Mussolini demonstration, in which 100,000 Fascists shouted against Ethiopia and Japan, was reported still opposed to league action in the African crisis.

4. The British government made ready to send 100 soldiers to guard its legation at Addis Ababa. Only Emperor Selassie's official permission for them to cross Ethiopian territory was awaited.

5. Italian and Ethiopian consuls at Helsingfors, Finland, reported 1,400 Finns had volunteered for African service, 1,000 for Italy and 400 for Ethiopia. No applications had been accepted, however.

Possible Way to Peace.

Only some new, positive step by Mussolini limiting Italy's demands for economic concessions can open the way to peaceful solution, informed quarters here said.

Sir Eric Drummond and Sir George Clerk, British Ambassadors in Rome and Paris, were pushing their efforts to find an avenue of escape from war, with the governments hoping against hope the Italian premier would suddenly soften his stand.

Mussolini's note voicing Italy's willingness to have the fifth and neutral member of the conciliation commission appointed—as the league contemplated when it created the body—did not affect British policy. Britain still wants full airing of the crisis at Geneva.

Meanwhile, authoritative circles re-emphasized the temporary nature of Britain's ban on arms exports to both Italy and Ethiopia, announced yesterday. It will be reconsidered, they said, as soon as Italy or any other nation makes any move regarded as violation of the league covenant.

Premier Talks to King.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin saw King George today, and it was reported they discussed the African dispute.

The view was expressed here that Italy's expression of willingness to revive the conciliation commission was an attempt to forestall the League Council meeting, which Ethiopia had insistently demanded.

If so, it failed, J. A. C. Avenol, league secretary general, wired council members today:

"As it does not appear from the information received that the four arbitrators reached before July 25 any of the agreements or understandings provided for in the procedure, the president notifies the colleagues that the extraordinary session provided in the resolution will take place."

He asked replies before tomorrow noon whether July 31 or August 1 would be preferable for the meeting.

The league also made public Ethiopia's note of yesterday renewing charges of war, citing Il Duce's elaborate military preparations and his interviews with the foreign press, and an earlier note asking the council meeting "in order not to interfere with negotiations taking place between certain powers with a view to peaceful settlement of the dispute."

Ryland's Pastor and Wife at Home

This photograph introduces the Rev. Karl G. Newell, newly appointed minister of Ryland M. E. Church, and Mrs. Newell, who were honored at a reception in their church Thursday night. The picture was taken in the Newell home at 412 Tenth street southwest.

Ryland Church Greets Pastor With Reception

The Rev. K. G. Newell Has Returned to City After Long Absence.

The family of one of Washington's newest ministers was honored this week at a reception given by members of their congregation—Ryland M. E. Church.

The Rev. K. G. Newell, who was appointed pastor of the church at the June meeting of the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Newell were principal guests of the congregation Thursday night.

The Rev. Benjamin W. Meeks, D. D., district superintendent of M. E. churches and Alfred Rodrick, of Ryland Church, were principal speakers.

Although Mr. and Mrs. Newell came to Washington a few weeks ago from Williamsport, Md., where Mr. Newell served a five-year pastorate, both are natives of the Capital. Mr. Newell began his studies for the ministry while he was a member of Langdon M. E. Church here. He graduated from Business High School and Emerson Institute of this city and later studied at Ohio Wesleyan University, where he received an A. B. degree. His theological training was taken at Boston and Harvard Universities. He received his S. T. B. degree from the Boston institution in 1927.

Mrs. Newell graduated from Eastern High School and later attended Ohio Wesleyan University. She is an accomplished musician.

At his service at 11 a. m. tomorrow, Mr. Newell will preach on "A Voice from Galilee."

Bible Play Dates Set in Virginia

Old Testament Stories to Be Dramatized.

Plans for a colorful biblical pageant dramatizing familiar stories from the Old Testament are going forward at Massanetta Springs, Va. The drama will be presented August 20, 21 and 22, as a feature of the second week of the Bible conference there.

T. Beverly Campbell, author and director of more than a dozen large historical pageants, has produced the book of the religious drama. Dr. William E. Hudson, conference manager, of Massanetta Springs, announced yesterday that Mr. Campbell will also supervise the staging of the production.

The pageant will dramatize such scenes as "Noah Hears the Voice of God," "Lot's Wife Fails to Obey," "Abraham's Trial of Faith," "Jacob and Rachel," "Jacob Wrestles With an Angel," "Moses and the Burning Bush," "Aaron and the Golden Calf," and "The Ten Commandments."

The production will be staged at night under brilliant illumination in the immense amphitheater that will seat more than 10,000 spectators.

'Singing Evangelist' To Continue Revival

Revival services, launched last week at the Church of God, Congress Heights, by the Rev. Garner J. Wilkins, of Atlanta, Ga., will continue through each night of the coming week.

The Rev. Wilkins, known as the "Singing Evangelist of Georgia," has had a versatile career that includes activities in newspaper work and in the brokerage business. He spent ten years in a brokerage house on Wall street.

Deerfield Service.

Deerfield U. B. Church will conduct its third open-air service in the church grove at 8 p. m. tomorrow. A sacred concert by the Quincy U. B. Orphanage Band and Girls' Chorus will feature the service. The band and chorus are made up of 40 boys and girls.

Mt. Rainier Rites To Join Churches

Protestant Groups Plan Union Services.

A union church service will be held by the several protestant churches of Mount Rainier Sunday night at St. John's Episcopal Church, Thirty-fourth street and Rainier avenue, at 8 o'clock.

The Rev. Fred Miller, pastor of the Mount Rainier Christian Church, will deliver the sermon, while the Rev. Walter P. Plumley, pastor of St. John's Church, will conduct the service. Music will be rendered by the combined junior and adult choirs of St. John's Church.

Other services at St. John's Sunday will be Holy Communion at 7 a. m., morning prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock and Sunday school at 10.

Richard Martin To Preach on 'The High Hat'

The Rev. Richard Byers Martin, acting pastor at Luther Place Memorial Church, will preach tomorrow on "The High Hat." Special musical numbers will augment the service program.

An illustrated lecture on Europe will be given by Mr. Martin at the 7 p. m. Christian Endeavor meeting. The lecture will be on Scotland, England, and Germany, where Mr Martin spent a year in study and travel.

St. Mark's Lutheran Church. The Rev. J. Luther Frantz, pastor. The pastor will preach before his 11 a. m. congregation on "Cave Dwellers."

Concordia Lutheran Church. The Rev. Charles Enders, pastor. Preaching before his German congregation at 10 a. m., and his English congregation at 11:15 a. m., Mr. Enders will discuss "The Apostolic Church and Its Significance for the Present Day," the title of a series he is presenting. Tomorrow's topic will be "The Fellowship of Believers."

A vesper service will be held tomorrow evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Gredlein, Cherrydale. Va. The Concordia Brotherhood will conduct services beginning at 5 p. m. The Rev. Henry Whiting, of Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, will preach.

Christ Lutheran Church. The Rev. Henry J. Whiting, pastor. The pastor will preach on "The Christian Standard," at 10 a. m. services tomorrow.

Union Service To Hear Pastor From Nippon

The Rev. H. W. Schenck to Speak at Mount Pleasant Church.

The Rev. Harold W. Schenck, minister of the Yokohama Union Church, in Yokohama, Japan, will precah at union services tomorrow morning in Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

It will be the first of a group of three services in Mount Pleasant Church in which the congregations of All Souls' Unitarian, the Universalist National Memorial churches, as well as of the Mount Pleasant Church, are cooperating.

Mr. Schenck, who will preach on "Earthly Compulsions and Divine Purposes," has been in Japan since July, 1930. He graduated with honors from Rutgers University and the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, and from 1923 until 1930 traveled extensively through Europe and the Orient, studying social and religious conditions in those parts of the world.

In 1926 he served as minister in charge of the American Church at The Hague. Then he was a delegate and one of the speakers at the World Conference on Faith and Order at Lausanne, Switzerland. Last year Mr. Schenck made an extensive trip through China, Korea and Manchukuo.

The Rev. Reynolds B. Boden, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, Los Angeles, Calif., will be guest speaker at the First Congregational Church tomorrow morning. His sermon topic will be "God's Seeming Indifference."

Dr. Boden came several years ago from Manchester, England. He came to America under the auspices of the Committee on Interchange of Preachers.

First Congregational Church will have no mid-week suppers during August. The regular midweek prayer meeting will be at 7:45 p. m. Thursday. Dr. H. K. Krikorian, this week's guest speaker, will discuss "Missionary Work in Turkey."

Catholic Guild Sets Outdoor Meetings

John J. O'Connor Will Lead Session Tonight.

The Catholic Evidence Guild of Washington has scheduled four public outdoor meetings for this week.

John J. O'Connor will be chairman of the first one, which will begin at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Franklin Park. Philip Hanan will be one of the speakers to discuss the "Catholic Philosophy of Life," and "The Mass."

Mr. O'Connor will also lead a meeting in Franklin Park at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening with Eugene Hoffman, Martin Barrett and Mr. Lauriola speaking.

From 2 p. m. until 4 o'clock tomorrow there will be a meeting in Judiciary Square, held under Guild auspices. Speakers will include Aloysius Collins, William Collins, William Daly, Dolor Ginchereau and Robert Mailloux. Subjects will be "The Authenticity of the Holy Gospels;" "Devotion to of Papal Infallibility; Devotion to the Mother of God," and "Religious Indifference."

The Wednesday night meeting at Judiciary Square, which will begin at 7 o'clock, will be under the direction of John G. Bowen. Edward Heffron and Francis Thornton will be speakers.

Union Services Closing.

The Rev A. H. Thompson, of the Methodist Home, will preach at tomorrow night's union service for congregations of the Chevy Chase community. The service, on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church at 7 o'clock will be the last of a series of vesper services in which six Protestant churches in that area joined.

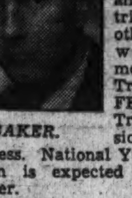
The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

MORE than 500 of the 1,600 employes at NRA who have received their dismissal notices have been placed in other agencies, it was learned yesterday. Most of the 500 have gone to Resettlement Administration and Rural Electrification, while others now are with Procurement Division, Treasury; RFC, FERA, Federal Trade Commission and Works Progress. National Youth Administration is expected to absorb a number.



BAKER.

It is estimated that $3,000,000 already has been saved in the annual payroll at NRA by the reduction in personnel.

While awaiting legislation on the possible merger with Federal Trade Commission, notices of dismissal are being drawn up daily.

In the office of Bradish J. Carroll, jr., special assistant to the administrator, first consideration is being given to qualifications and need of persons slated for dismissal. It is under Mr. Carroll's direction that transfers to other departments are being made.

With sleeves rolled up on these hot days, he labors long hours, listening patiently to each case. However, hard work and long hours have been his lot ever since he was the first person to be sworn into service at NRA, on June 16, 1933, and on through the past two years as he built up one of the most efficient and loyal staffs in the New Deal.

Mr. Carroll's success in this has been in no little measure due to his loyalty to the President and his accord with the Administration. Friction like that between certain other New Deal officials and the White House or the Capitol has not been evident in the former NRA chief clerk's office.

The newest unit in the National Federation of Federal Employes, Local No. 532, at Bismarck, N. D., already has made a substantial increase in membership, it was said last night at NFFE headquarters.

Agriculture Postettes.

D. A. Spencer has returned from a trip to Idaho, Montana and other Western States in connection with experiment station work. Dr. H. C. McPhee, chief of the Animal Husbandry Division, is back from an official visit to Brooksville, Fla. Mrs. Helen Anderson, accompanied by her husband, is on a Western tour, which includes the San Diego exposition and points in the Canadian Rockies.

Miss Isabelle Allen has been confined to her home by illness. Miss Elizabeth Sommers is spending her vacation in the West and will visit Glacier National Park and Alaska. O. G. Hankins left this week on an official trip to Chcago and to visit the experiment stations in Iowa, Michigan and Tennessee. Miss Cecil Stigall (F) has returned from a trip to Atlantic City.

Harris & Ewing.

BRADISH J. CARROLL, JR., special assistant to the administrator, NRA, who is assisting dismissed NRA employes to find positions in other Government agencies.

"Come in."

Upon opening the door, the fugitive, seeing the special agents, said:

"I guess I am in the wrong apartment." This remark met the reply: "No you are not. Come on in."

At this time the visitor is still the guest of the Government.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 12 and 2 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, 12 Aristocrats with Francette Malloy and other acts; screen, Spencer Tracy and Virginia Bruce in "The Murder Man"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Shirley Temple and John Boles in "Curley Top"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (third week of William Powell and Louise Rainer in "Escapade").

May Reopen Examinations.

Few disabled veterans of the World War, suffering from disabilities connected with their service, and now outside the Federal service, realize the preference to which they are entitled under the present regulations.

Such a veteran may reopen any civil service examination which he is qualified to take, once every three months until he is able to pass with a mark of 60, whereupon he is placed at the top of the eligible list, below only such disabled veterans of similar status, and widows of veterans, who obtain higher marks.

Employes Look to Trip.

All indications point to a successful event on the night of July 29 when the District Federation of Federal Employes Unions will hold its annual moonlight boat trip down the Potomac. Proceeds of the affair will go to the educational and research fund of the federation.

Reservations may be made through the following members of the committee in charge:

Mrs. Ollie Greer, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, chairman; Mrs. Sue H. Inge, Collections and Accounts, Treasury; W. E. Hoffheins, Office Quartermaster General, War; Miss Maude Miller, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; William Sanger, Lighthouse Service, Commerce; Elmer Thompson, Office of Information, Agriculture; W. F. Kesmodel, Navy Yard, and Charles Kothe, A. G. O., War.

FSRC Expenditures Outlined.

Q. What is the sum expended by FSRC, and what per cent of it goes to overhead? G. S. (C).

A. In 1934 $38,982,900 worth of commodities was distributed while the estimate for 1935 is $75,103,450. If your term "overhead" means administrative costs, that was $245,722 for seven months in 1934.

Q. I have a bottle of medicine I suspect of containing a strong narcotic. What shall I do with it? MRS. W.

A. Certainly don't drink it! We suggest that you submit the medicine to the Food and Drug Administration, 216 Thirteenth street southwest, for analysis.

Bussy—Turn from here right back to the page opposite the comics. See that 1936 Ford V8 for only $395. Well, that's what I want for my birthday.—SKIPPY.

What Today Means to You

"Leo."

IF JULY 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:45 a. m. to 1:45 p. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 5:45 to 7:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

Be careful you do not give unintentional offense this day through a careless choice of words. There is every indication it will be an auspicious day for making social contacts, indoor sports or entertainments, as well as for places offering diversion to the general public. Magnetic influences conducive to drawing crowds are likely to exist. Careful attention should be given to personal apparel because clothing, displaying poor or flashy taste, may have a disturbing effect on those with conservative ideas regarding dress.

Ears will probably be sensitive to discordant sounds on this date, so carefully modulated voices will find favor and loud tones are liable to cause irritability. Indiscretion is the food upon which gossip thrives, so the wise will be discreet, especially in public places. Married and engaged couples, and those seeking full possession of someone's heart, will have nothing to regret, if they will remember true love is best expressed by actions rather than words.

If a woman and July 27 is your birthday, avoid trying to impose your own personality or ideas on others, if you wish to avoid discordant conditions at home and abroad. To gain popularity, you must respect the rights of other people to have their own views on any subject. Money probably will come to you from an unexpected source. Be careful you are not talked out of it. If you do not close your eyes to it you will find a great deal of love offered to you in your daily life. You are systematic and painstaking in all you do.

Therefore, you should be very successful in whatever you undertake. Clerical or office work, teaching, writing short stories or acting as a professional buyer are likely to provide the right medium of activity for you. You should make a man a very fine wife, and be deeply appreciated by him.

The child born on July 27 may, when it reaches its majority, show preference for a professional career rather than commercial life. It might be a mistake to interfere with its ideas on this subject.

If a man and July 27 is your natal day, you should be very popular. Your retentive memory, preserverance and energy, undoubtedly will be well rewarded in due course of time. Chemistry, engineering, newspaper work, printing, publishing, and manufacturing may be directly or indirectly responsible for your success.

Successful people born on July 27:
Thomas Say, naturalist.
Eben N. Horsford, chemist.
Cyrus Thomas, scientist.
Theodore B. Comstock, geologist.
John Warren, physician and surgeon.
Alexander Macomb, merchant.

Dillinger Mobster Seized in Robbery

Dick Ray Captured, Shot After Peoria, Ill. Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 26.—Police said tonight the gunman wounded and arrested following a robbery and gun battle in the heart of the business district today had been identified by Washington authorities as a former member of the old Dillinger gang. The prisoner was identified as Dick Ray, 52, recently released from the Michigan City (Ind.) Penitentiary after serving a term for a holdup in Terre Haute, Ind.

A telegram from the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Washington to local police said that Ray formerly was connected with the marauding gang of the late John Dillinger.

He was the only one of the four men who participated in the daylight holdup who was captured. The loot was a $2,000 pay roll.

George Backes, pay-roll guard, was wounded. The pay roll was being taken to a Peoria tavern from the Commercial Merchants' National Bank. Backes was near death, physicians said, with 30 to 35 shotgun slugs in his body.

Culbertson on Bridge

Sandwiched By Dangers.

Today we shake our heads sympathetically over the sad story of the man who drowned because he was afraid of burning. A nonswimmer, he was panic-stricken when fire broke out on board his ship. The fire was gaining rapidly and it would take several seconds to grab a life-preserver. There was a good chance that he could reach a life preserver before the fire reached him—yet in his dread of the fire he forgot his fear of the water and sad to tell was never seen again.

Many a bridge hand has been sunk without trace because the declarer, fearing danger in one direction, unthinkingly leaped to certain destruction in the other.

Making Full Use of the Dummy.

Making full use of dummy's entries is often more necessary than the apparently safer but actually hopeless course of extracting trumps. Before a good player leads he always considers whether that suit could not just as well be led from the other hand and some more important use should therefore be made of the right to lead from the hand that has taken the last trick. In this respect the factor of safety must sometimes be sacrificed to the needs of time.

1—A takeout double, indicating greater strength than a simple rebid.

2—Questionable with only two spades, but North has a difficult choice.

3—Partner's response has indicated a possible minimum hand. South, however, can make game with North holding very little.

The Play.

West led the Ace of hearts and continued with the deuce. This lead of a doubleton suit headed by an Ace is usually a poor choice, but in this case it rattled declarer into "jumping overboard." With West's lead marked as a doubleton, South won the heart trick in his own hand with the King and rushed to extract three rounds of trumps forgetting that he needed two entries to the North hand to take the club finesse. The result was that with only the Queen of hearts for entry, he could take the club finesse only once and when the Ace failed to drop the King, was set one trick, losing one heart, one club, and two diamonds.

Crosby Family Enjoying Spacious Summer Home

Bungalow Is One of Most Beautiful in Spring Lake, N. J.; Once Was Owned by Caruso's Widow; the Distlers to Visit There.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

One of the most attractive summer homes is that of Mr. and Mrs. John Crosby, at Spring Lake, N. J., where, with their children, they are spending the season. Mr. and Mrs. Crosby, who make their winter home at the old Bradley estate on Wisconsin avenue, departed in May for Spring Lake, where they have been entertaining guests during the past month.

The house at Spring Lake looks like any other shingled bungalow at a summer resort, from the outside, but inside it is unexpectedly large, which is necessary for the Crosbys, with their family of five children. The house belonged to Mrs. Dorothy Benjamin Caruso, widow of the famous tenor, Enrico Caruso. The living room is two stories high, and there Caruso used to sing when he was courting his future wife. Across the street there was a hospital in those days and the famous artist afforded great pleasure to the patients who could hear his voice from the cottage. The room now is decorated with paneled walls, a huge fireplace and deep, chintz-covered chairs and couches, with plenty of convenient tables and lamps. On one side the room opens to a wide porch, and on the other to a tiled terrace furnished with red and white garden furniture of chromium and leather. A spacious garden is beyond the porch. The dining room is finished in a modernistic manner, with white leather chairs and a buffet decorated with bowls of glistening silver fruits. In one wing there are charming guest rooms, also opening into the garden, and in the other wing plenty of bedrooms for the family and a library where the children spend their evenings and where Mr. Crosby works during the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Crosby spend most of their time at the Beach and Tennis Club. All in the family are splendid swimmers, Mrs. Crosby doing her 12 lengths in the pool each morning. In the cottage there is a schedule tacked on a wall giving the hours that the car leaves for the beach club, when it returns for luncheon and the hour of departure for the afternoon session. All the children know that if they are not on hand when the car goes, unless they have a good reason, they will be left behind.

Mrs. Crosby, who is tiny and blonde, and unbelievably the mother of these sturdy children, wears charming sports frocks of white or pastel shades, very becoming to her sun-tan, and when she entertains for cocktails, as she does frequently, she wears soft, floating chiffon gowns of delicate shades.

Mrs. Walter Distler, who with her two small children has been at the Homestead at Hot Springs, Va., during July, will go to Spring Lake early in August, and until she finds a suitable house, will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Crosby. Mr. Distler will join her at the resort frequently.

Dorothy Martin Weds Dr. Titus In Martinsburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 25.—Miss Dorothy Marguerite Martin, of Martinsburg, became the bride of Dr. Theron Amsley Titus at a ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Martin, yesterday morning.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Louise Martin, and Dr. Norman S. Smith, of Charles Town, W. Va., was the best man. A program of nuptial music was played preceding the ceremony by Mrs. Elizabeth Livers Small. The marriage service was read by the Rev. Ernest S. Worden, pastor of Winchester Avenue Christian Church.

Mrs. Titus has studied at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore. Dr. Titus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Charles Titus, of Ohio, has been practicing here for several years. He was a premedical student at the University of Missouri, and was graduated from Kirksville College of Osteopathy and Surgery. He spent two years of surgical internship at Laughlin and K. C. O. S. Clinical Hospital, Kirksville, Mo.

Two-Purpose Cream Placed On the Market

Fragrant Product Removes Dirt and Builds Up Tissues.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

WHEN one has to look at as many cold creams as we do, he grows a little blase about cosmetics. That is why it is particularly exciting to stumble upon a cleansing cream such as we found the other day in a prowl through downtown stores. For here's a skin cleanser that's different. In the first place, it's put out by a woman who for years has been making a scientific study of women's skins. For a long time, she has been trying to concoct a cream which will do two things; remove dirt, and at the same time build up tissue and ward off wrinkles. After years of trying different combinations, she has at last evolved a cold cream which accomplishes both these important objectives. Her rich, fragrant product is derived from pure, health-giving mineral and vegetable oils. The minerals penetrate deep down into the skin, acting as a tonic and builder to the delicate tissues underneath. By laying the foundation for a firm and healthy skin, their vitalizing energy power wards off those tell-tale wrinkles and sagging muscles. So many women have dry, sallow-looking skins, when they can so easily be prevented. Just a few minutes every night with the right kind of cream can do wonders toward giving your face that healthy, pink glow of youth. It's never too late to begin, so start in right now with a jar of this cool, rich, and fragrant cleansing cream. You will be surprised at the difference just a few days will make. Another great advantage of this cream is that it contains no animal fat, as so many of them do, so you need never worry about its going rancid. It comes in three sizes, at $1, $1.75 and $3.

A Book on Furniture.

HAVE YOU a hobby? If not, why not start one? Aside from the fun you'll get out of riding your hobby horse, there's no better way to become an authority on one certain subject. And we can't think of a more interesting hobby than that of the study of furniture. The more you know about the different styles and periods, the more joy you will get out of your surroundings, and the more attractive you will be able to make them. An F street bookstore is featuring this week a perfectly grand book filled with all the facts one most wants to know about the different styles and periods. Since the information is general, rather than detailed, this book should serve as an admirable introduction to furniture high lights for those who don't know very much about the subject. It's profusely illustrated, that you will have no difficulty telling a Chippendale from a Sheraton. Formerly this book sold for $15; now the price has been slashed to $5.95.

Shoulder Shower Gadget.

In a downtown department store is a gadget which, unlike most gadgets, is really useful. The latest thing in bathroom accessories, it's called a shoulder shower. It consists of a rubber tube plus a little circle thing perforated with holes. You attach tube to bathtub faucet, slip the circle around your neck, there you are—all set for a ver without danger of wetting r hair. It leaves the hands free vigorous massage, and doesn't ash all over the place. With this convenient attachment, you needn't worry about craning and twisting your neck and shoulders into painful positions to avoid ruining your coiffure. It's particularly good for summer use, when a daily shower is the high spot of the day. The price is only 97 cents.

Unusual Value Specials.

An F street store has on sale this week some specials which will gladden the hearts of those who like unusual values. First on the list is a big box of fragrant dusting powder, formerly priced at $1, now reduced to 49 cents. It comes in gardenia and carnation, and is so cleverly scented that you will feel like a walking garden. The powder is packed in a most attractive gift box, covered with nosegays in pastel shades. The second item is some very fine quality rouge which is being discontinued, and so is reduced from $1 to 79 cents. It comes in a stunning compact in blue, white, and gold enamel.

Save shopping time by knowing where to go for cosmetics mentioned in this column. A 2-cent stamp will bring a list of more than 20 highly recommended preparations, with the names of the shops selling them. Write Ruth Anne Davis, in care of The Washington Post.

Increase Consumption Of Sugar Is Reported

The annual average consumption of sugar for the 4 years, 1931-34, inclusive, was 25,561,000 tons, an increase of 3.36 per cent over the 5-year period, 1926-30, according to the bulletin.

Cuba has dropped considerably in the world supply of sugar, the bulletin continued. Her proportion at present stands 9 per cent, it said, whereas in 1925 it was 21 per cent.

Music for the Masses Is Miss Brico's Object

Soft of speech and quiet of manner, Miss Antonia Brico, guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra this week, is not the temperamental, fiery Bohemian you might expect a famous conductor to be.

Americans Not Indifferent to Concerts, but Can't Afford Them, Guest Conductor Holds; She Hits Prejudice Against Women Artists.

By Dudley Harmon.

SMALL, QUIET, AND GENTLE in appearance, Miss Antonia Brico, the woman conductor who has been thrilling Washingtonians as the leader of the National Symphony this week, is something of a surprise to the interviewer who expects all musicians to be fiery, long-haired, and Bohemian.

For the leader of a large orchestra, Miss Brico is amazingly small. She has soft brown eyes, rather prominent features, and wavy, bobbed hair. Not until she speaks, do you begin to sense that here is a person of unusual force and personality. When she talks, her voice is low and quiet, but every word is uttered with such sincerity and conviction that you say to yourself, "This is a person out of the ordinary."

And you are right. If Miss Brico did not have the will and determination of a pioneer, she would never have reached her present position in the musical world. It has not been easy. Miss Brico began her career as a pianist, but, to use her own words, "The piano did not satisfy me," and she soon switched to conducting. She studied in Europe for five years, under the best conductors, before appearing in public. During this period, Miss Brico lived and breathed music, working like a Trojan. She obtained her first practical experience in leading orchestras in Poland and Latvia. Since returning to America, she has devoted most of her time and energy to building up her orchestra composed exclusively of women.

Seeks Chance for Women.

Miss Brico's orchestra was created to give women a chance to prove their mettle in the world of music. Remembering her own early struggles for recognition, she is convinced that it's still something of a man's world as far as music is concerned.

"Women have the capacity to be just as good musicians as men," said Miss Brico, "but there exists in the musical world a definite prejudice against them. If a man and woman artist are equally good, you can usually depend on it that the man will be chosen every time. Why does this prejudice exist? Mainly because women have never had a chance to show what they can do in this field. Out of 100 men, 5 are likely to be excellent musicians. Out of a like number of women, just as many are potential musicians, but probably fewer than 5 will develop their talent to its limit. This is because it requires too great a struggle to get anywhere."

Miss Brico has another ambition in addition to that of making the path easier for women musicians. She is eager to take music out of the luxury class and make it available to every pocketbook.

Sees Great Potential Audience.

She believes that in this country there is a great audience of potential music enthusiasts. The fact that hundreds were turned away from her last concert would seem to bear out this opinion. It is only a question of presenting programs at a price within the reach of everyone, according to Miss Brico. This can be done, she said, only when the capacity is such as to accommodate a sufficiently large number of persons to lower the price of every ticket. Although Americans have the reputation of being indifferent to music, Miss Brico believes that this is only because concert tickets in this country are ordinarily in the expensive class.

A location such as the concert setting at Memorial Bridge is ideal for inexpensive concerts, Miss Brisco believes. In the first place, the seating capacity is large enough to accommodate a good-sized crowd. Then, too, in the summer, people want to get outdoors, and this affords them an ideal opportunity.

"I wish you'd call attention to the fact that I'm an American," said Miss Brico. "So many people take it for granted on hearing my name that I'm Spanish or Italian. But I'm American born and bred."

After a day or two more in Washington, Miss Brico expects to leave for the West to rest. She was armed with a camera yesterday, evidence that she has been taking advantage of her visit to photograph sights of the Capital.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Those Who Seek Employment Should Approach Proper Agencies.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: It has occurred to me that I might receive the necessary lift by writing through your column to the readers of your valuable paper.

* * * *

I am a middle-aged woman who needs a position and needs it very, very much—more than I care to write. Through no fault of my own, I am without work. I am a housekeeper; can serve as companion, housekeeper, or in any position along these lines.

* * * *

The urge to write to you is overwhelmingly strong, for I feel so sure that some one needs me as badly as I need them, if only we can find each other. I am a woman of high character and high standard of living, trustworthy, kind, good disposition and willing to work. If anyone is interested, will they please communicate with me through you? Also, will the kind people who do not need help in their own families, kindly add their prayers to mine that a door may open for me and that I shall find work? Sincerely, O. C.

Out of Our Line.

DEAR O. C.: With so many agencies already in existence for bringing together potential employers and employes, it should be obvious to all that no real purpose would be served by my attempting to conduct, through this column, an employment agency.

There are many excellent commercial agencies in this city; there is the free, Federal Employment Center on Indiana avenue; there are the classified advertising columns in the daily newspapers, and there are the various social agencies which are pleased to furnish work-relief whenever and wherever possible.

I do not wish to be unkind, nor to seem non-cooperative, in making this statement. But in view of the fact that 90 per cent of my mail, recently, is composed of appeals for aid in finding employment, I think it high time my readers and I reached an understanding on this point.

* * * *

If any persons should respond to your foregoing appeal for employment, I shall be glad indeed to forward the information to you. But henceforth I must ask all who seek employment to look to the proper agencies for guidance. Providing employment is not exactly within my province whereas it is the whole reason for being of other agencies which I have listed above.

M. H.

Fewer Women Work in Reich

Proportion Employed Drops From 37.2 to 31.9% Since 1932.

THE REPORT that women workers are being sent back to the kitchen has been reduced to actual figures, according to a bulletin recently issued by the German Labor Office.

The proportion of women employes dropped from 37.2 per cent of the total number of employed persons at the beginning of 1933 to 31.9 per cent at the end of April this year. The number of registered unemployed women fell from 20.2 per cent of the total number of jobless persons in July, 1933, to 7.3 per cent at the end of June, 1935.

Because of the definite campaign launched by the Nazis to eliminate women from shops and factories, the reduction in the number of women employes would have been even greater but for the fact that the growing bureaucratic machine demands a steadily increasing number of women stenographers in both governmental and private offices, the bulletin said.

Meal Planning Is Facilitated By Baking Ham

Wrap Leftover in Waxed Paper and Place It in Refrigerator.

DINNER MENU FOR TODAY.

Hot tomato bouillon with whipped cream garnish

Ham slices baked in orange sauce

Buttered green beans

Waldorf salad

Raisin bran muffins

Iced tea Milk (for children)

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOU ARE WILLING to light up your oven for a few hours and then enjoy the fruits of your labor for several days to come, bake a whole or half ham. The present-day cures for ham have made it possible to bake a ham without soaking or parboiling. All you have to do now is to put the ham, rind and all into a very low oven (300° F.) and forget about it until the time is up. Figure your time basis of 22-25 minutes to the pound. You can put the ham into the oven right after lunch so that the baking can be accomplished and you will not suffer from the heat of the oven. Then about three-quarters of an hour before dinner time you can come back to the kitchen, remove the rind from the ham, rub it with brown sugar which has been mixed with some of the ham drippings and a few grains of dry mustard, stick it elaborately with cloves in a diamond pattern and finish baking the crust. Now cook up a hot vegetable and stair up a crisp cold salad and your dinner is ready.

The part of the ham that is not served for the first meal can be wrapped in waxed paper and kept in the refrigerator to use at a later date. Be sure to give your leftover ham this careful wrapping of waxed paper otherwise the ham will become dry.

Here is another way of cooking the ham. The butt, shank and center part may be cut apart (your butcher will do this). This way you may cook the separate parts on different days, broiling the center cuts, baking the butt with tart green apple sauce or pineapple juice, and simmering the shank end for cold slicing, sandwich filling or salads.

Cold sliced ham with a filling vegetable salad and some hot biscuits or muffins make a satisfying hot-weather dinner. Ham slices in hot fruit sauce, with a hot vegetable and cold salad is a simple combination for a cooler summer evening. Jellied ham loaf served on a bed of shredded lettuce makes an intriguing company luncheon dish. And a ham salad will please even father, who so often is adverse to anything that sounds like a salad.

Jellied Ham Loaf.

2 cups finely diced ham
1½ tablespoons granulated gelatine
¼ cup boiling water
¼ cup vinegar
2 hard cooked eggs, sliced
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup diced celery
1 chopped pimiento
½ chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons finely minced onion

Soak the gelatine in cold water, then dissolve in the boiling water. Add the vinegar and salt. Cool. When mixture begins to jell, mix in all the other ingredients excepting the eggs. Rinse a mold in cold water, arrange the egg slices on bottom and sides, then pour in the ham mixture. Set in cold place until firm. Serve on bed of shredded lettuce. Serves 6.

Ham Slices in Orange Sauce.

Cut ham in ⅛-inch slices for serving. Arrange in overlapping slices in a flat baking pan or casserole, cover with fruit sauce and let bake 20 minutes. Serve in the sauce.

Orange Sauce.

Mix ½ cup brown sugar with 1 teaspoon cornstarch, ½ cup water, juice of two oranges and the grated rind of ½ orange. Bring to a boil and pour over ham slices. A few small pieces of pineapple are an addition to the sauce.

Nomadic Life Seen In U. S. Eventually

THE AMERICA of the future maybe a country of nomads, predicts O. T. Kreusser, director of the Museum of Science and Industry of Chicago, according to Science Service.

"These nomads will live in automobiles and have no permanent residence," Mr. Kreusser said. "I base my beliefs on the present trends in buying cars and homes."

The day may come, he said, when many of us will solve the family problem of the higher cost of living and the reduced net income by spending the winter in the South, migrating with the birds and living on wheels, thus avoiding the existing dual cost and investment of home and automobile.

Why Do Women Work?

Why do women work? A group of English psychologists say it is to fill in the time until they find husbands. They arrived at this solution after studying 231 women secretarial workers on behalf of the National Institute of Industrial Psychology.

Secretary? No! Cabinet Wife Explains Why

'They'd Cramp My Style,' Says Mrs. Cummings, Noted for Parties.

MRS. HOMER CUMMINGS, Cabinet wife fast becoming famous for interesting parties, yesterday told how she does it—without a social secretary.

"It would cramp my style!" firmly ruled the gay and original wife of the Attorney General on the social secretary system of the Capital.

"I was told I had to have a social secretary, but I just knew what one of them would say to any note of mine, 'No Cabinet wife would ever write a letter like that.' And then one of us would have to stop right there.

"And I couldn't expect a social secretary to approve one of my guest lists, with New Dealers, old dealers, artists, authors, actors, and preachers all mixed up to make an argument."

So in "season" and out, Mrs. Cummings keeps right on writing her own breezy notes, inviting, this time of year guests to dinner at tables on terraces under the trees of Ruthven, their estate overlooking Rock Creek Park.

"My idea of a party," said Mrs. Cummings, of the dark, distinctive bob, "is just to get some interesting people together.

"I didn't change my method by one iota when I came from Greenwich, Conn., to Washington.

"Washington society is made a bug-a-boo, they try to scare you to death here about what to do. If you are that self-consciuos, your party will be a complete fiasco.

"I don't see why you should get all in a dither about it. All you do is add and multiply. The same thing you do at home for 30 people, you can do here for 300. It's easy if you like people, and I do—and so does Mr. Cummings.

"I told my husband we wouldn't have any trouble balancing our budget. When I came here, I just took two ciphers off his income, and added them to the number of people we entertain. That took care of those two ciphers. Where we had one guest in Greenwich, we have a hundred here.

"As for seating, I know how it is done. Once in a while I call up the protocol division on seating a visiting diplomat. That's about all."

She gave some of her party precepts:

"The perfect dinner is eight—for around-the-table conversation. But you'd never get through in Washington that way. We ask 12.

"Centerpieces must be low, so you can see who your opponent is."

"Serve coffee at the table when the argument's too interesting to break up."

Feet Expansion Noted As Result of Athletics

By the Associated Press.

This athletic age is telling on the feet, says Ruth Kerr, of New York, the only woman in the country who styles shoes for both men and women.

"The average woman's foot has expanded from 5½ to size 7," she said, "and the average man's foot size is 10½, compared with 9½ in the old days."

She also said that women are getting more conservative in their shoes, while men's shoes are running to colors.

Functions of Thymus Puzzle Science

X-Ray Treatments Reduce Enlarged Gland and Minimize Danger.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE are some structures in the body that have refused to disclose their secrets, while other organs and glands have admitted the searchlight of science to a limited extent only.

One of the most puzzling glands is known as the thymus, which lies in the front part of the body where the neck joins the trunk. On the average it weighs a little more than one-third of an ounce at birth. Although it doubles in size during the first five years of life, its growth thereafter is slower. After puberty (the period of sexual development) the gland gradually shrinks, decreasing in weight until in the older decades but a remnant remains.

In composition the gland resembles lymph tissue somewhat similar to the tonsils, and it is probable that its true function has not as yet been determined. Hammar, a Swedish writer, believes that the gland cells have something to do with the production of antitoxin whenever infection attacks the body. Other authors state that it produces an internal secretion that is related to body growth and the development of bones. It is found to be enlarged in patients with Graves' disease (exophthalmic goiter) and sometimes when disease of the adrenals exists. Some authorities are of the opinion that the thymus is closely related to the sympathetic nervous system and recognize its influence on the digestive tract.

Just as other glands may enlarge, so overgrowths of the thymus are occasionally encountered. This is particularly observed in the condition commonly known as status lymphaticus, although the very existence of this state is denied by many physicians. They believe that sudden deaths, in which the gland is said to be overgrown, are due to other undiscovered factors having no relation to the thymus.

There are certain cases, however, in which the gland is obviously increased in size and in which the children present symptoms indicating excess amounts of lymph tissue in other parts of the body.

Operations Risky; Shocks to Nervous System Should Be Avoided.

We may conclude then that as far as our knowledge goes the thymus gland exists as a part of the lymph system of the body; it begins to atrophy after puberty, and its function has not yet been determined. In order to guard against untoward accidents in children operative procedures should not be attempted until after the youngster has had a period of preparation sufficient to bring nutrition to the highest possible level. It is also well to test children for signs of excessive sensitivity, so that shock shall not appear suddenly and find those responsible for the child's welfare unprepared to meet this type of emergency.

Sudden deaths in children do occur and until we know positively to the contrary it will be well to respect an enlarged thymus. Fortunately one or two X-ray treatments will reduce the gland in size and minimize its potentially dangerous character.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XIII.—Justice Unveils.

A single or "latent" fingerprint, as it is called, found at the scene of a crime means practically nothing from an identification standpoint, unless there is a suspect to match it against. If someone is arrested, it is possible to compare his prints with the "latent" and thus establish his presence. But certainly, in 1928, there was little to be gained by sending that latent found on the doctor's automobile in the Fleagle case to Washington and hoping for a speedy identification.

All fingerprints were then classified and filed under the ten-print system, as is done in practically every fingerprint center in the world. There was no way in which one print could be searched out—that would have meant a hunt through the entire unit, which at that time contained about 2,000,000 cards, each of ten fingers, making a total of 20,000,000 searches to be made. There was only one way in which to attack the problem.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, issued orders that this fingerprint become a matter of prime importance between officers; he knew also that if this fingerprint represented a member of the Lamar bank robbery gang, it was possible that innocent men were being held as murderers.

Therefore, the print was magnified. It was thrown on a screen by a stereopticon. Day after day experts studied it in the hope that they would remember some similar print as having passed through their hands. It was useless.

Time passed. The trial of the four accused men—Clinton, Walker, Oliver and Jarret—approached. Then one day, in the course of routine, there came to the identification unit a fingerprint card from the sheriff's office at Stockton, Calif.

Suspect Arrested.

A man named William Harrison Holden had been arrested on suspicion for train robbery there and had freed himself by a plausible story. The police had merely sent his fingerprints to Washington as a matter of course.

As a matter of course they were classified and the records searched. Out came a card bearing the name of Jake Fleagle, convict No. 6591, Oklahoma Penitentiary, back in 1916. In routine manner, the fingerprint expert began his final check, to be sure that William Harrison Holden and Jake Fleagle were the same man.

But as he worked, a queer feeling, almost of apprehension, ran through his brain. He went over the prints again—he felt uncertainty, nervousness, as though he were making a mistake. He checked and rechecked. Then suddenly the smudges on the paper beneath the microscope ceased to be such. There was murder in those lines and whorls, the bark of guns, a white-haired old man standing alone against a bandit gang, firing shot for shot until the guns of the murderous crew had cut him down. The expert whirled. He left his microscope and while other workers stared after him, ran wildly for the photograph of the latent print found on Dr. Wineinger's car. He examined it again. It matched with the prints on the cards. He straightened exultantly. This was a member of the Lamar bandit gang!

That changed the entire case. Four men had been identified and were under arrest. But here was surely a member—some one was innocent. The wires sang, carrying amazement to Garden City, Kans. Investigation began. The banks were checked, revealing heavy deposits for Jake Fleagle and his brother, Ralph.

A posse was formed. It encircled the ramshackle homestead and surrounded the weather-beaten old house. The father, mother and two brothers were arrested for questioning. They revealed that they had been writing to Ralph at Kankakee, Ill.

Chief Harper hurried to Kankakee, and with local police covered the postoffice there. They caught Ralph. They learned that some one was calling the prisoner by long-distance from Peoria.

"Get that fellow who's calling!" commanded Harper.

Rayston Found in West.

The order was obeyed. Peoria police arrested a man named George De Moss in a perfect arsenal of an automobile, just as he was pulling out of town. De Moss asked that his wife be released. The Peoria police made a mistake and granted the request. She is believed to have warned Jake; when police reached his apartment house, the bandit was gone. De Moss was taken to California for questioning about a train robbery. Out of the Fleagle gang the police now had only Ralph. His chin showed a slight depression. Chief Harper called for the services of an X-ray. It showed a bullet wound, too old to have resulted from the Lamar robbery. But the fact that the police knew it to be a bullet wound frightened Ralph. He talked and named Royston as the one who had been shot in the Lamar hold-up. Hugh Harper went to San Andreas, Calif., in Calaveras County, where once lived the famous Jumping Frog of the Mark Twain tale. There, in San Andreas, Harper found Royston living a supposedly exemplary life, the husband of a school teacher and the father of a young baby.

Royston also confessed. George Abshier was arrested. Then began a long chase which ended with the killing of Jake while resisting arrest at Branson, Mo. The four men awaiting trial were freed from this charge and immediately rearrested on "Wanted" notices from various parts of the country; all of them went to prison on other charges. But, at least, they did not pay for a murder which they did not commit. However, Ralph Fleagle and Royston and Abshier did pay; all were hanged in the Colorado State Penitentiary at Canon City.

Because of the Fleagles, there is now a different procedure when a widely known bandit leaves a latent fingerprint at the scene of the crime. Almost immediately Mr. Hoover began the building of what is known as the Single Fingerprint File in the Division of Investigation. Through its development has come the segregation of America's ten thousand public enemies.

To create this file, the Director sent letters to every police department in the country. That there might be better concentration upon his aims, he asked for names by "occupation." First came the kidnapers. Then the bank robbers. Then the stick-up men and highwaymen, then the specialists in train holdups and so on down the list. Prison wardens and parole boards were asked to make their nominations. Judges were requested to contribute. From them all came a "Who's Who" of vicious crime—the mad dogs of the Nation. Moreover, instructions were issued that whenever a new bandit flared up, he too was to join the list.

Each Finger Classified.

This done, the regular fingerprint cards of these men were "broken down" into single prints. Each finger was classified separately. Since that time, there have been numerous major identifications out of this list, and in spite of the fact that the file has neared completion only within the last year.

An identification here means that one of the true enemies of society has been found in a crime with the possibility of an arrest to follow. Or perhaps I can better illustrate by an incident.

After Pretty Boy Floyd participated in what now is known as the Kansas City massacre of local, State and Federal officers, he headed East with his companion in crime, Adam Richetti. This pair was inseparable. But how did the bureau know whom to look for? Let us see.

Before going, Floyd, and, so it is alleged, Richetti, went to the house of the master killer of the massacre, Verne Miller, then they drove eastward.

In Toledo, Ohio, they picked up two girls, Juanita and Rose Baird, with whom they previously had traveled. Months passed. At last the four went into hiding like so many animals in an apartment in a middle-class neighborhood of Buffalo, N. Y.

These were horrible months. Floyd was a man of action; he had been reared in open country, where he had been protected to a large degree by those who had known him from childhood.

Here there was no one he knew, except Richetti. There was no protection, at least for a stranger like Floyd. The galling life continued; the girls even subscribed to magazines rather than expose their presence by frequenting news stands. Meanwhile, the card games went on endlessly, casion, double solitaire, pitch.

The dreary existence dragged on, each member of the quartette becoming more silent, more moody. At last Floyd jammed a hand deep into a pocket where rested the remainder of the money he had brought with him.

"Who wants to go home?" he asked.

Auto Crashes Into Pole.

The concerted action was almost hysterical. Floyd gave one of the girls several hundred dollars with which to buy a car; she hurried forth for its purchase. That night they started upon the journey, with the men taking turns at the wheel. When Richetti drove, Floyd sat in the back seat with a machine gun on his lap. When Floyd drove, it was Richetti who held the weapon. Miles flowed by in swift progress.

They had entered Ohio. Morning approached; with it came a fog which lay deeper and heavier upon the road as the journey continued. Now Floyd lessened the speed of the car. The mist grew denser. Suddenly there was a crashing impact. They had left the road completely and run into a telegraph pole.

No one had been hurt, but the car had been damaged materially.

"You girls will have to go into town for a wrecker," the bandit said. "We'll stick it out around here somewhere until you get back."

The girls went down the road toward an all-night garage they had seen in East Liverpool. The men sought a gully in which to hide. The wrecker came for the car and lugged it away. Morning arrived; the girls had not returned; this was to be an all-day job. Finally, word came to the police of a nearby town that two suspicious-appearing men had been seen by the side of the road. A local officer went out to investigate. Floyd ran. Richetti surrendered.

Immediately upon the identification of Richetti, word flashed from Mr. Hoover's office in Washington to a dozen special agents, concentrated in nearby States on the Stoll kidnaping case. Airplanes rushed them to East Liverpool; soon Pretty Boy Floyd lay dead, his body weighted by law-enforcement bullets.

Thus ended the career of one of the most hunted men in America—within a comparatively short time after his disappearance from Kansas City the word had gone forth that the Bureau of Investigation was on his trail.

However, no stool pigeon had informed upon him. No eye-witness had identified him. That was not necessary. In the search of Verne Miller's house, special agents had discovered a fingerprint of Adam Richetti. If Richetti had been there, they decided, Pretty Boy Floyd must have been there also.

Thus the hunt began, and thus Floyd died, because of a fingerprint.

Canoe Trip to Island in River Planned by Wanderbirds Club

Swimming, Water Sports Scheduled for Sunday Excursion.

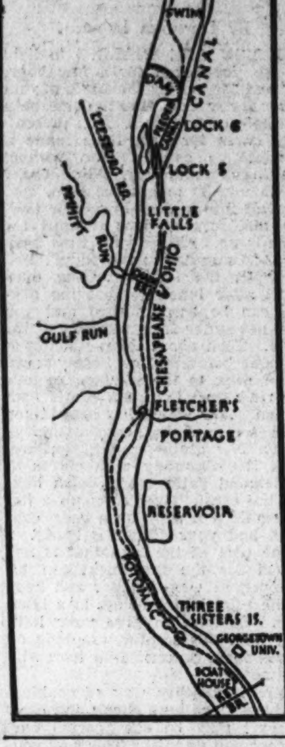
By Robert Shosteck.

On Sunday members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club will give their legs a rest when they paddle their flotilla of canoes up the Potomac River for 6 miles to a scenic spot on the Virginia shore opposite Sycamore Island. Here the group will lunch and later go in for a swim in the placid waters. The climax of the day's events will be an old-fashioned canoe-tilting tournament in which everyone may take part. Those not interested in water sports will have an opportunity to hike along the wooded and shady riverside trail to the Soapstone Quarry and Eagle Rock, several miles upstream.

Club members and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this trip will meet at the Great Falls Canoe House, several blocks from Thirty-fourth and M streets, the last D. C. stop of the Rosslyn car line. Walk down to Thirty-sixth street, cross footbridge over the canal, and follow the towpath to the stairway leading to the boathouse. Those coming by automobile can park at the end of K street and walk west along the tracks to the boathouse. Four-passenger canoes may be hired at 75 cents for the day. Hikers are urged to make up their own parties, but every effort will be made to accommodate those who cannot paddle. Bring lunch, a cup for water, swim suit, a hat to protect yourself against sunstroke, and a towel. Hikers are urged to bring along axes and knives to cut and shape the "lances" for the canoe-tilting tournament.

The Three Sisters Islands, which we pass on our way up the river, are covered with wild rice, which rises eight to ten feet above the water. The yellow tassels, with ripening pollen, are now much in evidence. A very narrow channel, navigable only at high tide, divides this long, rice-covered island.

The Wanderbirds will paddle up the Potomac River for about two miles to the inlet near Fletcher's Boathouse, portaging at this point to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, a distance of several hundred feet along a path. Those interested in natural history will have a chance to see many interesting types of aquatic life along the banks of the canal. The rank growth of vegetation here is the natural habitat of many kinds of reptiles, amphibians, and insects. At this time the hikers will see the blue heads of pickerel-weed in abundance as well as the yellow waterlily of spatterdock.



As we approach Chain Bridge we pass the rotting hulks of many barges, which, in the early part of the nineteenth century, were the strong rivals of the railroads in carrying coal from the western Maryland mines to Washington. Since the closing of the canal about 1924, these huge scows have fallen into disuse and serve only the turtles and minnows which bask and find shelter among the decadent beams.

Some of these barges have been repaired and are now the homes of squatter families.

About 1 mile beyond Chain Bridge we reach Lock 5, over which the canoes are portaged into the feeder canal leading into the Potomac above the dam. This canal is a very picturesque waterway, reminding one of Louisiana bayous, with giant sycamores leaning over precariously into the water, and graceful, swaying willows and birches lining the banks. On the left, High Island rises abruptly to a height of 125 feet, its gray walls of igneous rocks being partly hidden by rock ferns and lichens.

We enter the broad river suddenly, skirting the dam and crossing over to the Virginia shore to a point about ½ mile above High Island. We land at a beach near Snake Hollow (no snakes yet seen) not far from a fine spring and a tumble-down cottage which serves as a bath house.

Lunch will be had here, and those interested in hiking can visit the old soapstone quarry, about 1 mile upstream. Most of the group will go in for a swim in the early afternoon and later participate in the canoe-tilting contest. The winner of the elimination test will be awarded the grand prize—an ice-cold watermelon.

The return trip will cover the same route through the canals and down the river to the boathouse, which we should reach by 6:30 or 7 p. m.

Hikers are requested to write in and let us know whether they approve of an afternoon trip to Fort Washington some time early in August as the guests of the fort authorities aboard the U. S. S. General Rucker. The return trip would bring bring us to the city dock about 1 a. m.

A group of veteran Wanderbirds plan a campfire party with hot dogs, rolls and marshmallows, to be held in Rock Creek Park, near Pierce Mill, on Wednesday, July 31, about 7:30 p. m. A songfest which will include nearly all of the songs in the Wanderbirds Songbook will be the main feature of the evening. Make reservations for the eats by Monday evening at National 4200.

On the Air Today

Fray and Braggiotti have come to a permanent parting of the ways, according to radio circles. As entertainment—and a type employing an instrument too infrequently heard on the airways any more—they will be missed.

The situation locally may be remedied, however, if the radio audience responds as enthusiastically as the barons at WRC expect when a new piano team is presented Sunday evening at 10.

It was my pleasure to hear Gustave Heintze and Greta Mimmerrichter play for some 30 minutes the other afternoon in a private audition.

* * * *

Gustave has been in this country eight months. His sister for several years. Both have played in Vienna and other continental centers. Their arrangements for two pianos are original and difficult. Their playing is as flawless in precision and technique as any blend of pianos I have ever heard.

Occasionally some one writes to this desk and inquires why we have so little piano music on the air. Here is the answer—the solution. I believe Washington will like Gustave and Greta Heintze (they undoubtedly will be programmed under the one name) and 15 minutes with them tomorrow night, WRC, at 10, should be a delight.

If you are easily prejudiced, overlook the fact that their great uncle is Anton Dvorak and that Gustave, as a boy, enjoyed the friendship of Franz Lehar.

* * * *

With Gracie Barrie in town, radio receives the pleasure of a 15 minute interlude with the little girl who sang her way to months of popular acclaim at Billy Rose's Casino de Paree in Manhattan. The time is 6:30, WRC tonight . . . "G-Men" presents the story of Baby-Face Nelson, direct from the files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, WRC, at 8.

* * * *

It was bound to happen. WJSV's "Three Little Words" say farewell to the Capitol after this week and go to Gotham. Ted Collins, Kate Smith's manager, will take the girls under his ample wing. Which reminds me: The anwer to John Hutchinson's question regarding the whereabouts of the Boswell Sisters and why they are not on C. B. S. as a sustaining feature is found in the old story of the amount of noise money makes, so I am told. It seems the girls demand a higher figure than sponsors are willing to pay, hence they appear infrequently. Columbia, like Mr. Hutchinson, would like to see them on the network frequently. But dollars still talk powerful language in some quarters.

* * * *

Ruth Chatterton will do a scene from "The Lake" in the Chateau program, tonight, WRC, at 8:30 . . . Elsie Janis, who was seriously injured in an auto accident Wednesday, was the first woman to become a regular announcer for N. B. C. . . . She made her first starring appearance on the stage in 1900 and retired in 1930 . . . WOL offers an all-Russian program by the Symphonic Ensemble, tonight at 7:45, including the ever popular "Nutcracker Suite" . . . It comes from New York.

* * * *

Noel Coward, Gertrude Lawrence, Charlotte Greenwood and other celebrities will appear in the Silver Jubilee broadcast from London this afternoon at 2:30 from WRC. Coward and Miss Lawrence will sing a medley of Coward song hits. Miss Lawrence will be remembered for "Candlelight" and "Private Lives" and Coward's most recent Broadway appearance was in "The Scoundrel." Charlotte Greenwood's last appearance, I believe, was in "Flying High." Also on the program are Erna Fack, German soprano; Arthur Tracy, known also as the "Street Singer," and Austin Croome, English singer.

Truck Theater Due to Tour Washington

Washington soon may have a rambling theater—stage, scenery, actors and actresses being transferred from one section of the city to another in a large truck, which now is being remodeled for the purpose.

The matter is under consideration by Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center department, and Mrs. Nina Collier and Miss Sally K. Ring, of the FERA.

When and if the rambling theater materializes, its offerings will be presented to audiences of children and adults in the Capital's parks and playgrounds.

Symphony Will Play For Agriculture Staff

A program of sunset symphonies will be presented by the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night at the request of employes in the Department of Agriculture.

Several hundred of these Government workers will attend in a body. The concert will be conducted by Sandor Harmati, guest conductor, and Miss Winifred Cecil, New York soprano.

Works Delay Is Political, Nice Asserts

Governor Makes Charge on Eve of Excursion With Leaders.

Fletcher and Davis Join Party for Cruise on Chesapeake Bay.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 26.—Pausing at his desk between his return to Maryland and his departure on a cruise with Eastern Republican leaders on the Chesapeake Bay tomorrow, Gov. Harry W. Nice today charged politics caused the delay in the Federal Public Works program.

"There seems to be a general impression, probably with a strong basis," he said, "that the beginning of this work will be held back as long as possible in order to utilize it in the most advantageous way to insure political supremacy."

His statement, he said, boils down to "spending the money where it will do the most good in a presidential year."

The West more than the East, shows "the alienation of political affections of the people from the New Deal," Gov. Nice said. He saw Chicago as the pivot point of a spreading revolt against present Democratic policies.

The people, Gov. Nice declared, are not talking in terms of personalities, but in terms of national policies. There is no personal attack on President Roosevelt, but the fire is being directed on his policies, he added. These policies, said the Governor, "have the appearance of lacking political and economic sanity."

Convention Predictions.

Asked about the locations of the 1936 national conventions, Gov. Nice said that the consensus was that "Chicago would continue to be the permanent home of the Republican Party with possibly the Democrats holding theirs in San Francisco."

The guest list for the cruise on the State yacht Dupont was swelled today when James J. Davis, United States Senator from Pennsylvania, accepted an invitation. Others who sent in their acceptances during the day were W. S. Hallanan, Republican national committeeman from West Virginia, and Col. Charles H. March, minority member of the Federal Trade Commission. The following Maryland Republicans also accepted: Nice Wilkinson, member of the State Roads Commission; Ralph Grier, of the Bay Bridge Authority and George Dierman, members of the board of election supervisors.

Other prominent Eastern Republicans who already had accepted included George H. Moses, former United States Senator from New Hampshire; Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee; Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover, and E. T. Clark, secretary to former President Coolidge.

Returning to Baltimore this morning, Gov. Nice was met at the station by State Republican leaders. He went at once to his office to go through the mass of work which has accumulated during his 13-day trip to the West Coast to attend the meetings of the American Bar Association.

Later he made the charges that political expediency was delaying the start of the Federal work-relief projects.

Works Project Elaborate.

"Maryland has an elaborate public works project," Gov. Nice said. "The State Roads Commission has a program to which deep consideration has been given. Dr. George H. Preston, the commissioner of mental hygiene, has an elaborate program for the hospital group.

"Abel Wolman, State director of public works, has presented to the Government a very comprehensive plan. Various governmental units in the State have laid before the Federal Government plans for permanent improvements, which, if adopted by Washington, will be representative of the people's money for many years to come.

"We don't know when this work will start. We can't find out."

Gov. Nice was confident that the State would be able to care for its employables when Federal relief is cut off on November 1, pointing out that Maryland could rely on the income from the gross sales tax. Anent the Bay Bridge, he said that he would not call a special session of the Legislature to raise the money unless he had definite assurance from Washington that Federal funds also would be forthcoming.

Scalding Is Fatal To Winchester Man

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 26.—Scalds received while he was taking a shower bath in a Boston hotel more than a week ago while on a vacation proved fatal to Frank H. Bahlman, 67, steward of Winchester Elks Club, at Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore today.

Two other persons were reported seriously scalded under similar circumstances. Mr. Bahlman is survived by one brother, C. A. Bahlman, of Winchester and a sister in Baltimore.

Frank Stanley Divorced.

Lynchburg, Va., July 26.—Divorce has been granted by Judge Don P. Halsey in the circuit court here to Thelma Virginia Stanley from Frank Stanley. The case was based on a charge of desertion.

Tull Threatens He'll Shoot Anyone Sent to Get His Son

Maryland Man Appeals on Writ Awarding Boy, 4, to Mother.

By the Associated Press.

Marion Station, Md., July 26. Honiss A. Tull today sounded a warning against any attempt to take his 4-year-old son from his estate near here.

Faced with a circuit court injunction here prohibiting the removal of the boy from Maryland and a Supreme Court order in New York to deliver the child to his estranged wife, Tull expressed determination to keep his son in seclusion on the estate.

"I have never shot a man," Tull said, "but don't let anybody come around here looking for the boy."

"I love the boy dearly," he added, "and I am going to do all I can to keep him. He loves me and loves it here and don't want to leave."

Tull's first move after Justice Peter J. Schmuck in New York yesterday held him in contempt for not producing the boy was to instruct his attorney to appeal the order.

The boy, Alonzo Eugene Tull, was awarded to the custody of his father by Judge James A. Crockett in circuit court at Princess Anne last December. Tull's sister immediately obtained an injunction to restrain any attempt to remove the boy from the State.

Tull's estranged wife, the former Dorothy Gale, daghter of Greenleaf Whittier Gale, of Chicago, petitioned the New York Supreme Court for custody of the child. Justice Schmuck granted the request, although the child was still on his father's estate in Somerset County.

Brother Shoots Girl With 'Unloaded' Pistol

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 26.—An 18-year-old girl was killed here today by a bullet fired from an "unloaded" pistol in the hands of her 16-year-old brother.

The boy, Joseph Punte, and his sister, Mary were in the basement of their home here. Joseph, according to a statement made to police, took out five shells from the pistol and, thinking the gun was not loaded, pointed it at his sister, told her to "stick them up" and pulled the trigger.

The bullet struck Mary near the heart. She died a few moments later in a hospital.

Two Loot Bank Of $1,000; U.S. Joins in Hunt

Masked Pair Rob Virginia Institution Soon After Opening Time.

By the Associated Press.

Amelia, Va., July 26.—Two Department of Justice agents were rushed here from Washington today to assist State police in their hunt for two men who, masked, obtained about $1,000 in a holdup of the Union Bank & Trust Co. here this morning.

The Government agents joined two extra State policemen sent from Richmond to aid all State men assigned to that territory and local officers in an effort to apprehend the bandits. Capt. H. B. Nicholas, superintendent of State police, said the search was concentrated in the area between Petersburg and the North Carolina line.

The manhunters were aided by knowledge that the sedan in which the robbers sped away bore a Kentucky license tag No. 550-667 and Louisiana tag No. 277-886.

Victims of the fourth bank robbery in Virginia in recent weeks were two officials and one customer. J. G. Dickerson, vice president and cashier, and the customer were forced to lie down while the bandits scooped cash and currency from the teller's window. They made no attempt to open the safe, on which the time lock had not been released for the day.

The holdup was conducted quickly and quietly, without arousing the suspicion of passersby.

Partial descriptions said one of the bandits was about 50 years old, stocky, and mustached, while the other was about 28 and of medium build.

'Politics' Blamed In Legion Strife

2 Maryland Posts Demand Ouster of McNulty.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 26.—Department "politics" were blamed today by John F. McNulty, State commander of the American Legion, for the demand of two Western Maryland posts that he resign.

The Cumberland and Frostburg posts last night adopted resolutions which called on McNulty to resign on grounds that he had used his legion office to obtain his appointment to the newly created post of State service officer for the Maryland Veterans' Commission.

"Every year just before the September State convention rolls around," McNulty said, "charges and countercharges are placed against various persons in the department." McNulty added that his term as State commander expires September 7 and that he does not take over as service officer until October 1.

Water Shortage at Camp Near Danville Revealed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 26.—The civilian conservation camp, opened last May on the Mount Cross road with 122 New York State enrollees, has been without water since the camp opened, it was learned today.

Three times a day a water wagon makes the 9-mile journey to Danville, where water is pumped into the tank wagon by city firemen. Springs in the vicinity are not sufficiently large to provide for the camp.

Lemma Owen Engaged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 26.—Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Owen, of Leesville, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Lemma Owen, to Augustus Graham McCartney, of Savannah, Ga., formerly of Altavista. The wedding is scheduled August 14.

Selfish Attacks On Constitution Held 'Banditry'

Head of Roanoke College Tells Rotary to Shun False Security.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 26.—Those who would destroy the Constitution of the United States because it does not fit in for "their selfish purposes" are practicing a "refined form of banditry," Dr. Charles J. Smith, president of Roanoke College, today told the closing session of the Virginia Rotary Officers Assembly here.

He also warned that the talk of security heard so much today "has its price because there can not be security without sacrificing liberty."

Dr. Smith, a former district governor of Rotary, declared that the spirit of honesty, adventure and persistence will bring America back to its normal life. He urged a higher sense of morals and honesty in all forms of life and condemned the prevalent attitude of "what society cannot give us we will take—even from someone else." He also denounced war as the most dishonest thing in life.

Officers from the 55 clubs in the fifty-fifth Rotary district accepted the invitation of Lynchburg for the annual conference of members next May. They decided to put to a vote the continuance of the international round table sponsored by Virginia Rotarians at the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs. They also decided to ask the Legislature to make provisions for imbeciles and mentally unfit children below the age limits now fixed by State institutions. District Governor William McC. Paxton, of Norfolk, will present the matter to the welfare committee of the General Assembly at its next session.

Conference Will Hear Prominent Churchmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 26.—With registrations of members of 18 religious denominations from more than 30 States, the annual two weeks' Bible conference and school for pastors, climaxing the summer's activities at Massanetta Springs, will open August 12 and continue through August 25.

Midland Bank to Pay 35 Per Cent Dividend

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Midland, Md., July 26.—Thomas B. Finan, receiver for the First National Bank of Midland, has announced a dividend of 35 per cent to depositors should be available within 30 days to all who have properly filed claims.

Finan also said he expects soon to advise the depositors of the First National Bank of Frostburg the amount of dividend which will be declared from that institution. They have already received 40 per cent.

S. C. V. Picnic August 10.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 26.—The annual picnic of the Sons of Confederate Veterans will be held August 10 at the Harrison Island Ferry, north of Balls Bluff on the Potomac River. The picnic is in honor of Loudoun Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Confederate veterans. The committee on arrangements is composed of John T. Hourihane, J. W. Mitchell and C. C. Saffer.

Cecil County Roads Probe Stirs Conflict

Witnesses Crowd Court to Call Highways Good—Bad.

Ouster of Supervisor Led to Battle in Elkton.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 26.—A string of witnesses marched to the witness stand in Cecil County Circuit Court here today to testify that the roads of the county are in good shape.

In the afternoon another string of witnesses marched to the stand to testify that the roads are not in good shape.

The detailed testimony as to condition of the roads was introduced in the suit over dismissal by the State roads commission of Joseph T. Richards as county roads supervisor. The action was instituted by the board of county commissioners.

Two days have been occupied in hearing testimony as to the roads, and the trial will be resumed Monday. It is expected to continue for several days thereafter.

Defense Testimony.

Introduction of defense testimony by the State roads commission began this afternoon. The plaintiffs had submitted their testimony, all of which dealt with the condition of roads, yesterday and this morning.

The action is regarded as a test case to determine the right of the State roads commission, which is controlled by the Republican Party, to dismiss Democratic roads officials and substitute Republicans for them. The roads commission named a Republican to succeeed Richards.

Edward Carter, Elkton insurance man, appeared for the plaintiffs today and compared the county's roads to a race track. He said he had been traveling over the county for 24 years and testified that condition of the roads now was much better than before Richards took office in June, 1933.

Witnesses Listed.

Others called to the stand today by the plaintiffs included Lewis Jones, Elkton; David McDowell, Calvert; Walter I. Smith, North East; Sylvester Preston, North East; Elwood Locke, Back Creek road; George P. Connelley, Eighth District; J. Leedom Scarborough, Elkton; Charles P. Bartleywin, Elkton; R. V. Criswell, Pleasant Hill; Condon Reynolds, Elkton; John K. Burkley, Elkton, and Joseph Holt, Pleasant Hill.

Masonic School Elects 2 as Officers for Life

Blacksburg, Va., July 26 (AP).—After electing two charter members to office for life, the forty-fifth annual Southwestern Virginia Royal Arch Masonic School concluded its sessions today on the Virginia Tech campus, to meet at the same place again next July.

After serving eight successive years as president, John B. Barrett, of Wytheville, resigned last night and was named president emeritus for life. A. W. Obenschain, of Roanoke, was elected president; A. S. Burnham, of Lynchburg, vice president, and O. M. Miles, of Roanoke, secretary-treasurer.

Summers Takes Post As Roads Official

Easton, Md., July 26 (AP).—Russell Summers, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee for Talbot County, has taken over the duties of supervisor of roads for this county.

Summers received his appointment by telephone earlier in the week and went to Baltimore yesterday to receive instructions. He succeeds Capt. E. Ney Dodson, who supervised State road work in the county, and Aubrey Bates, who had supervised country road work.

Trial of Physician Set for Fall Term

Hampton, Va., July 26 (AP).—Trial of a $10,000 damage suit against Dr. Nelson F. McNorton, Yorktown Negro physician, was set today for the October term of Elizabeth City County Circuit Court by Judge C. Vernon Spratley. Proceedings were instituted by relatives of Mrs. Dorothy M. Reeves 15-year-old beer garden waitress, whose death last April was attributed by Dr. Paul J. Parker, Elizabeth City County coroner, to an illegal operation. Dr. McNorton, charged with second-degree murder, was tried twice in Yorktown, but both juries were deadlocked.

Pastor's Return Sought.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 26.—Delegates chosen at a quarterly conference of St. Paul's United Brethren Church in Hagerstown Wednesday were instructed to request the Pennsylvania annual conference, which will be held in York, Pa., October 8-10, to return the Rev. Dr. F. Berry Plummer to the pastorate for his fifteenth year.

Police Quiz 5 On Bombing During Strike

U. S. Takes Part in Case of Quarry Company Near Martinsburg.

Plot to Wreck Power Line to Plant Laid to Labor Strife.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 26. Five men, all understood to be striking quarry workers, are being held here in connection with one of three dynamitings last month at the Standard Lime and Stone Co. plant south of here, where the strike has been in effect for more than two months.

The men held are Thomas McGown, Carliss Files, Marion L. Hollar, Ray Robinson and Robert Webber. The arrests were made by an agent of the Department of Justice working with the State and local police. Hollar was arrested in Brunswick, Md., the others at their homes here.

Officers expressed confidence the arrests solved one dynamiting directed against power lines leading to the quarry plant. Formal charges have not been lodged, the men being held for further questioning.

Police said some in the group, in addition to being linked with the blast, were involved in the theft of about 550 pounds of dynamite from a Waynesboro, Pa., warehouse a few nights before the blast occurred here, June 21. Police said the facts so far established came through confessions of some of these held.

McGown's automobile was allegedly used to bring the dynamite here. Two boxes of the explosive were found hidden in a sink hole in the city's outskirts.

Although confident the same explosive was used in two other blasts at the quarry and one in the rear yard of the home of a quarry foreman here, the questioning so far is being confined to the June 21 blast, it was stated.

Blasting of a power line is a Federal offense, officers pointed out.

Officers attributed the dynamitings, none of which did heavy damage, to labor disagreements. The strike has never been officially called off but the plant has been operating for some weeks.

Student Thought Lost In France Sends Wire

Paris, July 26 (AP).—E. Griffith Dodson, jr., Richmond, Va., who was reported by a friend Monday to be missing on a bicycle trip through the Loire Valley, telegraphed yesterday that he was in Bourges.

Robert L. St. John, a University of Virginia student, who had notified authorities that his friend was missing when he reached here, has gone to meet Dodson. Dodson explained in his telegram that he had gone to Bourges alone.

$1,000,000 Car Order Is Given in Richmond

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—A million-dollar order for construction of 500 steel cars for the Norfolk-Southern Railroad Co. will be filled by the Richmond plant of the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co., C. A. Little, president of the company, announced today.

He said the order would give employment to several hundred persons, most of them skilled mechanics. The Richmond plant recently completed a large order for the Seaboard Air Line Railroad.

Gas Station to Replace Landmark at Woodstock

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., July 26.—"Shockey's Flats," said to be more than 200 years old, and to have sheltered many notables of the past, among them President Andrew Jackson, President Millard Fillmore and Henry Clay, is being razed to make way for a filling station.

The old structure once was a favorite tavern and stopping place for stage coaches on the route from Alexandria to the South.

U. S. Promises Action In Hotel Bar Problem

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—Gov. Peery said today he has been assured by Federal authorities that the Chamberlin Hotel open bar question is being handled by them. He declined to say what Federal authorities have promised action.

Recent legislation placed the sale of liquor on military reservations under the restrictions as laid down by the States in which they are located. The Chamberlin, at Old Point, is on a military reservation.

Thos. Moore, Jr., Drowns.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 26.—Thomas A. Moore, jr., 38, a former resident of Hagerstown, was drowned Wednesday at South Bend, Ind., according to information received by his relatives here. No details were given in the message. His body will be brought here for burial. He is survived by his father, Thomas A. Moore, of Hagerstown, and a brother, William Moore, of near Williamsport.

Appointed to West Point.

Warrenton, Va., July 26.—Marshall Wallach, son of Col. and Mrs. Robert R. Wallach, has been appointed to West Point by President Roosevelt.

'Gretna Green' of Maryland Cracks Down on Clerics' Signs

Elkton Outlaws Outdoor Advertisements of Marrying Parsons.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 26.—Elkton's two "marrying parsons" will have to pull down their "marriage information" signs by August 5.

The town commissioners of Maryland's "Gretna Green," where 6,000 persons come for marriage every year, outlawed the information billboards in a round-about ordinance which permits erection and maintenance of advertising signs on practically any subject other than marriage. The ordinance is effective August 5.

Outlawing of the signs is effective only in the city limits of Elkton. Similar signs on highways outside the limits can be outlawed only by an act of the State Legislature.

The commissioners' action came on the heels of a record "marriage" month in June when more than 600 couples obtained licenses here. The town's population is only 3,500.

Only two ministers, who have no regular churches, are affected by the ordinance. They have ten signs erected in various parts of the town.

Pastors of churches here have been campaigning for years against the "marrying parsons." During the 1935 State Legislature, the regular pastors advocated a bill which would have outlawed all "marriage information" billboards. The bill passed the Senate, but was lost in the closing-day rush of the House.

Taxi drivers do a land-office business transporting bridal parties from the license clerk's office to the homes of the marrying parsons.

Burglar by Telephone Gets a Wrong Number

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 26.—Mrs. Lenora Homer went to answer a ringing telephone in her home here early today and found an armed, masked burglar standing near it.

The burglar pointed a pistol at her and demanded money. Mrs. Homer replied that the money was upstairs. She was ordered to get it.

She ran to her room, locked the door and screamed from a window for police. When Patrolman Frank Phillips arrived the intruder had escaped.

Six Candidates Testify in Probe Of Mail Ballots

Roanoke Notary Cited for Holding Vote Slip of Another Citizen.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 26.—Roanoke's mail ballot by a special grand jury pulled through its thrid day in hustings court without further indictments today, but all six of the legislative candidates for the August 6 Democratic primary were recalled and between them they spent nearly four hours before the investigative body.

The probe took a new turn shortly before adjournment when Judge J. L. Almond, jr., who convoked the grand jury, instructed S. S. Brooke, deputy clerk of the courts, to issue a rule against Clarence O. Paugh, notary public, to show cause in court Monday why he should not be confined in jail for holding in his possession a mail ballot belonging to G. L. Cecil.

Paugh was named in two indictments returned by the grand jury Wednesday and accused of forging two mail ballot applications, uttering the ballots and attempting to cash them in the coming primary. He surrendered at police headquarters later that day and was released on bond of $5,000. He could not be located today.

Hal C. Tyler, of Radford, candidate for the Senate from the Twenty-first District, was the first witness, and spent more than an hour behind the closed doors, as did Marion S. Battle, Roanoke candidate for the House of Delegates. Leonard Muse and Harvey Apperson, two other senatorial aspirants, and Raye O. Lawson and Walter Harold Scott, House candidates, each were heard from 20 minutes to a half-hour.

Maryland Homes Flooded by Rain

Lonaconing Traffic Tied Up by Overflow.

By the Associated Press.

Lonaconing, Md., July 26.—Several homes were flooded, traffic was tied up for more than an hour and 200 feet of road were washed out here today as a cloudburst sent Seldom Seen Run out of its banks.

Water in other nearby streams rose rapidly, but kept within the banks and no damage was reported from them.

The properties of Slyvester Green and George Jeffries, near Seldom Seen Run and other houses along that section were flooded. A garage at Green's home was undermined by waters and collapsed, damaging a new automobile.

Two hundred feet of the Seldom Seen Run road were washed out and traffic on Georges Creek boulevard was tied up for an hour.

By the Associated Press.

Newport News, Va., July 26.—Approximately 3½ inches of rain—a fraction over 2 gallons of water to the square foot—fell in this area in the last 18 hours, bringing relief to soil which was becoming too dry to give crops their best growth.

Storm drainage in Newport News was overtaxed by the heavy precipitation, which flooded several low-lying streets. Three storm sewers broke under the unaccustomed pressure.

Farm Bureau Meeting.

Centreville, Md., July 26 (AP).—Plans for reorganization of the Centreville local of the Queen Anne's County Farm Bureau will be discussed at a meeting here August 6. New officers of the local will be elected and A. Temple Blackwood, temporary chairman, has invited every farmer in the district to attend.

Prince Edward Citizens Protest Land Program

Group Claims Marginal Project Includes Good Farm Country.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 26.—A delegation of Prince Edward County citizens, conferring here today with Wilbur C. Hall, conservation and development commission chairman, charged land being included in the submarginal land development in their section is not submarginal.

Hall said after the conference that he had informed them he would be glad to forward their protests to the proper officials in Washington if they would set forth their claims in a letter. It was indicated this formal protest would be framed immediately.

The delegation, headed by E. W. Sanford, member of the House of Delegates, protested that inclusion of non-submarginal land in the Federal program in Prince Edward would deprive them of getting new roads built in the area. No complaint was made against the conservation and development commission, since development of these projects is a Federal project.

Approximately 30,000 acres are included in the submarginal project in the Prince Edward area, Mr. Hall said.

Railroad Officer Heads Shenandoah C. of C.

Natural Bridge Hotel, Va., July 26 (AP).—Holcombe Parkes, advertising director of the Norfolk & Western Railway, Roanoke, was elevated from vice president to president of Shenandoah Valley, Inc., Regional Chamber of Commerce, at a meeting of directors and the executive committee here today. He will serve the unexpired term of A. T. Moore, killed in a recent automobile accident at Staunton.

W. W. Gibbs, president of the Waynesboro and Lexington Telephone Co., and former secretary, was made vice president, and John R. Crown, editor of the Harrisonburg News-Record and one of the organizers of Shenandoah Valley, Inc., was made secretary to replace Gibbs.

Body Is Recovered.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., July 26.—The body of Maurice Jordan, 26, colored, who was drowned Wednesday in Occoquan Run near here when he fell from a canoe owned by his employer, Richard Henson, was recovered today. Coroner Stuart McBride returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

Fight Opened On Paralysis In Delaware

Virginians Planning Stay of 12 Hours or More Asked to Register.

Acts to Check Spread; 11 New Cases in Dominion.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 26.—Delaware moved to protect itself against the possible spread of infantile paralysis from Virginia today, as 11 new cases ran the total in this State to 236 since June 1 and 184 since July 1.

Dr. I. C. Riggin, Virginia health commissioner, announced he had received from C. H. Sargent, director of the communicable diseases division of Delaware, a request that all Virginians who expected to spend 12 hours or more in the sister State to register with health officials at Dover, Del.

The Delaware authority informed Dr. Riggin that any suspicious symptoms noticed among Virginians visiting in that State would subject them at once to regulations designed to control poliomyelitis.

Of the 11 new cases put on record today, four were reported from Albemarle, bringing that county's patients to 20, of which 9 are in Charlottesville. Brunswick County reported 2, Norfolk City, 2, and Caroline, Greensville and Southampton Counties 1 each.

Meanwhile, warnings against the assembling of crowds, particularly including children, were repeated throughout the State. In Roanoke County and Salem, where six cases have been recorded, social gatherings were being canceled.

Infantile Paralysis Growing in Virginia

By the Associated Press.

The major scene of the infantile paralysis outbreak has shifted from North Carolina to Virginia.

Dr. J. P. Leake, infantile paralysis expert of the Public Health Service, returned yesterday from an inspection trip to Richmond and Charlottesville with a report tnat the disease was "very much increased over normal" and "not particularly localized" where it previously was concentrated on the North Carolina border.

For three July weeks, the number of new cases have been slowly decreasing in North Carolina and rapidly rising in Virginia.

The closest check is being kept on the situation in the District of Columbia, where 30,000 Boy Scouts are scheduled to meet in annual jubilee the latter part of August.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, Va., July 26.—Dr. A. G. Gilliam, assistant surgeon of the United States Health Service, has been named to supervise the use of the Park-Brodie vaccine for infantile paralysis in Virginia, it was announced here yesterday by Dr. J. P. Leake, Federal poliomelitis expert, who visited Petersburg with Dr. Maurice Brodie, of the New York City Health Department, to confer with Dr. Mason Romaine, city health officer.

Dr. Leake indicated that Dr. Gilliam may establish at Petersburg the first station in Virginia to be used in his controlled studies.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., July 26.—As a precautionary measure against the spread of infantile paralysis, which has appeared in adjoining counties, the Culpeper County Board of Health has issued orders closing all public gathering places for 30 days.

The regulation includes moving picture houses, swimming pools, dance halls, day schools, churches and Sunday Schools and baseball diamonds.

Warning—You will probably never get another chance to buy a 1935 Chrysler at as low a price as the one advertised on the page opposite the comics this morning.

Ghost Walks for Thousands of "Extras" as Film Production Spurts on Coast

Nine Specials At Warners to Employ 7,000

Off-Season Becomes Boom; New Beach Is to Open; Amusement Chat.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

The sudden wave of high-pressure production that has recently swept over Hollywood will have a more far-reaching effect than merely to overcome a sudden and somewhat alarming film shortage.

It will extend something of the box office prosperity that has attended picture exhibition of late to the lowliest workers in the studios and on the lots by affording the "extra people" more "employment opportunities" than they have enjoyed at any time since the economic bottom dropped out of things back in '29.

An instance of the case in point is afforded by the production schedule of the Warner Brothers-First National organization, whose studio statistics happen to be the first to come to hand since the rush started out on the West Coast.

According to Jack L. Warner, vice president in charge of production at the Burbank plant, more than 7,000 extra players will be used for extended periods in the making of the nine Warner pictures that are scheduled for shooting within the next few weeks.

Similar Activity Elsewhere.

The same condition exists in varying degrees in the other major studios engaged in converting what is normally the slack season into one of the busiest periods of the year, and timely aid, therefore, is rendered the army of extras at a time when it will do the most good.

The "bit" players also will receive a "break" through this abnormal studio situation, since all of the nine pictures planned by the Warners will be accorded more protracted shooting schedules than usually prevail in the case of "regular" or "program" releases. This means an increased number of pay days for those not too frequently on any pay roll at all.

To give a rough idea of the allocation of the extras by picture titles, some 1,485 extra people will find parts in "Captain Blood," the filmization of the romantic novel by Rafael Sabatini, in which Errol Flynn, Olivia de Haviland and Lionel Atwill will be featured. If this turns out anything like the same author's "Sea Hawk," that starred the late Milton Sills, it will be a honey.

"The Legionnaire" will require approximately 780 extras; 350 will appear with Leslie Howard in the picturization of Robert E. Sherwood's stage success, "The Petrified Forest," one of last season's Broadway hits, and about 300 more will work in "Radio Jamboree of 1935," featuring Franchot Tone, James Melton and Jane Froman.

The largest group of all will find employment in "The Charge of the Light Brigade," a spectacular drama based on salient events during the progress of the Crimean War. Some 2,500 supernumeraries, to borrow a stage term just for the sake of variety, are called for in the script of this pretentious subject.

Additional allotments of extras include 1,000 with James Cagney in "Frisco Kid;" Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures," when translated to the screen under the author's supervision, 200, and when "Ceiling Zero" is taken out of doors—as, of course, it will be on the screen—150 more. Pat O'Brien will play the role created by Osgood Perkins in this suspenseful play by Frank Wead.

Altogether, not a bad summer for the boys and girls whose names never get into the billing.

That specially chartered bus will run from in front of the Dupont Circle branch of the Riggs National Bank to the Roadside Theater and back again tonight. Last Friday a capacity load of playgoers was conveyed to the performance of "To Die at Dawn" and special ticket service was rendered en route by Miss Catherine Prichard, the energetic publicist of the Roadside group. Before the bus left for the barn theater, out the Rockville pike beyond Bethesda, Md., the number of patrons without ticket reservations was ascertained, phoned to the box office and seats were reserved for 24 persons who otherwise might not have found satisfactory locations.

This bus innovation has proved such a success since it was inaugurated three weeks ago that beginning next week it will be operated on both Tuesday and Friday evenings of each week. The bus leaves Dupont Circle at 8 o'clock, in plenty of time to catch the first curtain, and remains on the theater grounds until after the performance, to return its passengers to town.

"Flop" Becomes "Hit."

Washington, it is a pleasure to state, has completely justified its insistent demand that it be permitted to view the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur screen play of "The Scoundrel," starring Noel Coward in what he declares will be his only motion-picture appearance, in a downtown, first-run theater.

It may be revealed now that "The Scoundrel" was withheld from Washington presentation from its release date in May until the present because it had proved a nonattractor at the box-office practically everywhere it had been shown. Almost universally, also, it had been hailed by the foremost critics as a picture of outstanding and peculiar merit, like "The Informer."

Because public demand was expressed through the dramatic departments of the local press for a showing of "The Scoundrel," it was finally decided by the Loew executives in the Capital, into whose "split" of the Paramount product it fell, to take it off the shelf and let nature take its course—a process that was expected to record itself in red ink on the company ledgers. If an offer had been made to buy the week housing "The Scoundrel" at the Palace, it could have been purchased practically for operating expenses.

Then the picture opened.

"The Scoundrel" not only paid its way during the week ended last night, but returned a handsome profit. If the management had sold the house on that fictitious and wholly hypothetical offer, the Palace would have received less than half the sum it has actually taken in at the box-office.

I am not at liberty to disclose actual figures, but if every week through the year could be made to return as big a gross as "The Scoundrel," the management would look upon it as an exceedingly sweet arrangement.

Such are the vagaries of "show business." All a manager has to do is try to guess them!

Sidney Lust, foremost of the Capital's independent chain theater operators, whose new Milo Theater out at Rockville, Md., will be ready for formal dedication by September 1, is an astute showman. Conscious of the box-office advantage of air conditioning, he has recently installed a costly air-cooling system in his Arcade Theater in Hyattsville, Md., and tuned up the equipment in the Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier. Business has taken a jump since the Hippodrome, in town, has been air-conditioned. The new Milo, incidentally, will be thoroughly modern in every respect, with all of these new gadgets built in, in accordance with the original blueprints. The house, which already is under roof, will have a seating capacity of 750.

Recruits for "Merry-Merry."

The definite line-up of chorus members for the third annual all-Washington revue, "Going Native," to be presented on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater the week beginning Friday, August 9, was announced last night by Gene Ford, manager of the Fox, in charge of the production. Those who have been signed to execute the intricate chores of the line girls are:

Myrtle O'Connor, 2011 First street northwest; Loraine Flammer, 810 Otis place northwest; Peggy Owens, 1438 Meridian place northwest; Virginia White, 5819 Colorado avenue; Frances Kain, 600 Massachusetts avenue northwest; Elaine Fay, 1370 Oak street northwest; Mary Quimby, 7219 Blair road northwest; Beverly Tydings, 7133 Georgia avenue; Shirley Rose, 616 Massachusetts avenue northwest; Audrey Heathcote, 1971 Biltmore street northwest; Mary Hampton, 2622 Garfield street northwest; Susan Hall, 1419 Parkwood place northwest; Julia Cunningham, 1130 Fifth street northeast; Ruth Von Kriegor, 5230 Illinois avenue northwest; Virginia Howard, 2221 Naylor road northeast, and Lorraine Maust, 1419 Perry place northwest.

These ambitious and presumably gifted and graceful young women are rehearsing their numbers under the skillful tutelage of Marjorie Hartoin, ballet mistress at the Capitol Theater in New York. And they are all over the age limit prescribed by the rigid child labor law in force in the District.

A few attempted to camouflage real names and ages, but Mr. Ford and Miss Hartoin are old and accomplished hands at this business. No luck!

Mr. Dan Terrell, the amiable and prolific young scrivener attached to the publicity department of the local Warner interests, functioning under the general managership of John J. Payette and the immediate direction of Frank La Falce, today joins the oceanside blister brigade at Bethany Beach, Del., where he will soak up actinic and any other loose rays from the sun to the full extent possible in a single week. Mr. Terrell's aunt, it seems, has a cottage.

But about that other week. Mr. Terrell is saving the second of the customary "two with pay" for October, when, he confided yesterday, he hears it rumored he is is to join himself to a better 51 per cent in the holy bonds of wedlock. Pressed as to whether or not he believed these rumors to be true, he seemed a little on the affirmative side. The wedding will take place in Washington.

And October is a very elegant month, take it from one who was born in it. Or is that contrary proof?

New Beach to Open.

Announcement is made by B. B. Wills, owner and operator of Chapel Point Amusement Park, that work at Liverpool Beach, Washington's newest and closest river bathing beach and picnic ground, is rapidly being brought to completion and the new resort will be thrown open to the public tomorrow. The steamer Potomac will make regular trips to this new riverside beauty spot.

Liverpool Beach is located 35 miles down the Potomac from the National Capital. Bathing facilities are said to be ideal, with a vast sandy bech bordered by stately old trees that afford protection from the sun for those who wish it. Bath houses are conveniently placed and a new checking system for clothing and valuables has been installed. Tables and benches are provided for picnic parties.

Mr. Wills also makes known that the facilities of Liverpool Beach will be available to clubs and organizations desiring to arrange for the entertainment of their memberships. Special boat trips will be arranged for such occasions. Regular sailing hours will be announced in the advertising columns of this paper.

New Excursion Service.

Washington's newest excursion boat, while we are on the subject, the S. S. Southport, will begin regular weekly sailings to Colonial Beach, Va., tomorrow.

The new dance boat will leave her pier at Sixth and Water streets southwest at 2 p. m. This modern dance craft will take up the schedule of the old St. Johns. The Southport will take out a moonlight dance party from Colonial Beach every Saturday night.

The Southport formerly was owned and operated by the Eastern Steamship Lines, of Boston, Mass., and made regular trips between Bar Harbor and Rockland, Me. She has a total passenger capacity of 350, an abundance of deck chairs, maple dance floor, grill and taproom.

Reverting momentarily to the Roadside Theater, it will be of interest to many to know that the offering following "Trilby," which opens in the barn theater next Monday night, will be last season's outstanding hit, "Murder in the Red Barn." This was last summer's third production and still stands as the high mark of Roadside achievement in the field of melodrama. It will be revived with practically the same cast seen in it last year.

Race-Against-Time Note.

Another very close squeak yesterday. Had an awfully tough time getting the lawn sprinkled before it rained.

Those Fresh Kids Are in Again!

Reading in the usual direction, these would be Master Jackie Searl and Miss Jane Withers, two of the cinema's habitual pests, who happily undergo a complete metamorphosis in "Ginger," the vehicle for their joint talents opening today on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. In this subject, the rapidly maturing Jackie is a nice boy, living in luxury on Park avenue, and Jane the underprivileged youngster who comes up from Ninth avenue. Neither is the nuisance he is accustomed to be, which is a very happy circumstance, indeed!

George W. Page Is Dead at 75 In Owings Mill

Former Bank Commissioner of Maryland Victim of Heart Disease.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 26.—George West Page, 75, former State Bank Commissioner of Maryland, died at the home of his brother-in-law, George Ward, of Owings Mill, yesterday afternoon. His death was attributed to heart disease.

He was elected State bank commissioner in 1918, under Gov. Emerson C. Harrington, succeeding J. Duke Downes. He was appointed in 1921 and resigned in 1933.

Gas Valuations By Klein Barred

Data for Companies Ruled Irrelevant by P.U.C.

August C. Klein, testifying yesterday for the Washington and Georgetown Gas companies at hearings to fix rate-making valuations before the Public Utilities Commission, sought to show how badly the gas concerns have been treated by citing commission rulings against other utilities corporations.

His testimony, however, didn't get into the record. Hinman D. Folsom, commission counsel, objected that it was irrelevent and the commission sustained the objection.

Klein testified that studies he had made for the companies showed their "reproduction new" value was $2,000,000 higher at the end of 1934 than had been fixed by the commission The commission valued the companies at $16,993,000.

The hearings are to be resumed at 10 a. m. Monday. Klein will resume the witness stand.

Scouts Will Ride Navy Destroyers

Belcher Will Hang For Shooting Girl

Princeton, W. Va., Man to Die September 20.

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, W. Va., July 26. — Twenty-three-year-old Craft Belcher, of Princeton, must pay with his life for the slaying of a young woman he took for an automobile ride and brought back dying.

Judge John M. McGrath today denied him a new trial and sentenced him to hang September 20 for killing pretty Miss Myrtle Taylor, 19, of Princeton.

Belcher refused to stand to hear sentence. A bailiff lifted the young man from his chair and led him from the courtroom immediately after the judge pronounced sentence while Belcher's attractive young wife sobbed.

Belcher drove up to a Princeton hospital the night of last May 11. In his blood-stained automobile lay Miss Taylor, two bullet wounds in her head. She died a few hours later. He said then that they had been ambushed while riding on the Rock-Shawnee road. Later he pleaded insanity, but a jury reported him sane.

'Patent' Tongers Face Oyster Ban

Petition Is Circulated to Close More Beds.

By the Associated Press.

Urbana, Va., July 26.—Dissatisfied with the decision of the Virginia Fisheries Commission to close the Piankatank River and the Rappahannock River above Towles Point to patent tongers after next January 1, oystermen of lower Middlesex are preparing a petition asking that the Rappahannock below Towles Point also be closed to such tongers.

On the testimony of tongers and others from Middlesex and Essex Counties, the commission not only decided to close the two streams to patent tongers but also to prohibit the use of any mechanical device used for taking oysters from the natural rock.

The oystermens' decision is being circulated by Max Major, oyster inspector for District 12. It is understood that Commissioner Richard Armstrong had indicated to Major that the question will be considered when the body meets next on the Eastern Shore.

Price Cut Raises Potato Quotas

708 Instead of 560 Cars Bought in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Painter, Va., July 26.—Reduction in the price of Eastern Shore potatoes from $2, where it was pegged for some time by striking producers, to $1.25 has enabled the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation to stretch a $350,000 appropriation to cover purchase to date of 708 cars of the tubers instead of the 560-car quota for the Virginia end of the Eastern Shore Peninsula.

Eight per cent of the appropriation is being expended on the crop of Virginia Eastern Shore growers, with the remaining 20 per cent devoted to purchases from the Maryland end of the peninsula.

Lower freight charges than were estimated also have resulted in more liberal purchases than was anticipated.

Wilson Will Seek State Senate Seat

Clifton Forge Republican to Oppose Layman.

By the Associated Press.

Clifton Forge, Va., July 26.—Thomas J. Wilson, jr., Republican member of the House of Delegates from Alleghany County and the City of Clifton Forge, announced today he would accept the party's nomination to oppose the veteran Democratic incumbent, George W. Nats Win, 9-3, as Yanks Lose League Lead; Linke Is Injured

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

New York, July 26.

I SEE by the papers that Avery Brundage, president of the United States Olympic Commission said:

"I know of no racial or religious reasons why the U. S. should not be represented in the Olympic games at Berlin in 1936."

Why, Mister Brundage!

POVICH.

I am surprised that the Nazi Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment who ordered Jewish children driven out of hospitals, dissolved Catholic sports clubs, jailed priests and called Catholicism Germany's public ene- No. 1; as I was saying, Mister Brundage, I am surprised that the Nazis didn't file a complete report of their activities with you at your Chicago office.

Darn forgetful of them if you ask me. How else could you expect to know of the goings on in Germany? Certainly, it is too much to expect of you that you should read the papers. You might, though, have listened to the radio, or perhaps seen the pictures of Jews being driven through the streets with clubs and stones.

But, Mister Brundage, inasmuch as Herr Hitler neglected to advise you of all these developments by special courier, I don't suppose you would even have an inkling of what is happening over there. Anybody who could make the satement you did, Mister Brundage, would be naturally slow to catch on. Some day, somebody is going to flabbergast you with the red hot news that the 13 colonies have signed the Declaration of Independence.

If you are still innocent, Mr. Brundage, of what is taking place in Germany, and vote for American participation in the Berlin games, I wonder what your Olympic committee is going to do about raising the $200,000, or some such sum, that you always have to raise by public subscription to send the United States Olympic team abroad? Methinks that you will then discover that there are some folks over here who read the papers.

APPARENTLY, Babe Ruth, like the weather reports, can't be kept off the front pages. Out of baseball, Ruth is turning seriously to golf and New York sports writers are in a dither of excitement. The Babe's score of 81 qualified him in the Westchester Country Club tournament at Rye and it was Page One stuff in the New York afternoon papers.

But what caught the interest of this department was the item wherein the chief Babe announced his intention to compete in the National Amateur qualifying round. "Ho-Ho," said I to myself, "what's this?" If Babe Ruth is an amateur, then I'm Hitler's right-hand man. Yet the Babe can get away with it, if he wants to play amateur golf. It's all done by mirrors and the strange reasoning of the United States Golf Association.

The U. S. G. A. does not bar professional ball players from amateur golf. There is never any question of their amateurism. Yet, two months ago they barred Babe Didrikson from the Western Women's Amateur because she was a pro. I suppose, if a person plays baseball with the House of David team, as La Didrikson did, he or she is more of a professional than a guy like Babe Ruth who has drawn a half million dollars in salary from 20 years in the big leagues. It is slightly beyond the comprehension of this department.

Miss Didrikson got in Dutch with the amateur people when she unwittingly indorsed an automobile advertisement. Yet Babe Ruth has been indorsing cereals, clothes, bats, candy and anything else that offered emolument for y'ars and y'ars, but in the eyes of the U. S. G. A. he is still an amateur. Somehow, it doesn't add up.

UP in Morningside Heights, incoming sophomores at Columbia University are surreptitiously practicing for the football season . . . It is an old trick of Coach Lou Little to get the jump on the opposition . . . Babe Ruth is already beginning to talk like a golfer . . . After his round of 81 at Rye, he made note, "I'd ah had a 76 today, if I hadn't four-putted that fourteenth green."

Gallico Makes a Dead Stick Landing—and Writes About It

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 26.—There was a story in the papers the other day about a lady flier, a student at Roosevelt Field, who was up solo when her throttle jammed and she was unable to cut the power. She made 34 passes at the field with all sorts of ships bearing messages to her, flying around. Finally she got up the nerve to cut her switch and come in. She cut too far from the field, jammed into a fence, turned over and washed out the ship although she herself was unhurt. Every one said: "Why didn't she cut her switch right away and come in? The dame just lost her head?"

Forty-eight hours later the same thing happened to me. Oh, my sainted cross-eyed aunt, what a difference that makes. How simple it is to suggest what some one else should have done. And how strangely different it all looks when YOU have to make the decision, and make it in a hurry, and make the right one. Sure, all you do is cut the switch and land. But, brothers and sisters, I am apologizing to the little lady right now. The toughest gesture I have ever made was to reach to the instrument board and cut off that nice electric fan up front.

Yes, sir; that's different. Now you're on the spot. It's like being hitched to a comet and not being able to let go. One of two things will happen. You will fly around until your gas runs out, when she will stop, or you cut her yourself. Now there is nothing heroic or brave about a dead stick landing. You simulate them every time you come into the field by throttling down your engine. But there is always that lovely comfortable feeling—if you do make a mistake and undershoot, give her the gun and fly over the wires, or the hangars, or whatever the obstruction is.

The first thing you do is pull everything. The cockpit is full of knobs and handles and gadgets and dooflickers, and you give them all a yank, hoping that by some miracle the ship will throttle down. Then you pull them all again, and finally saw on the broken throttle handle

Minnesota Mentor Tops All-Star Coach Polling

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Bernie Bierman, whose Minnesota eleven won the Big Ten title and a claim to national gridiron honors last season, took over first place today in the poll to name a coach for the college all-star football team which meets the Chicago Bears at Soldier Field August 29.

Bierman had 114,526 points, with Frank Thomas, of Alabama, a close second with 113,408. Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame, had 113,206 for third, and Dr. Lawrence E. Spears, of Wisconsin, followed with 110,911.

Gold Cup Racers Await Starting Gun

By the Associated Press

Bolton Landing, N. Y., July 26.—Five speedy craft rested in their boathouse cradles tonight awaiting the gun that will send them skimming over Lake George tomorrow in quest of the 31-year-old Gold Cup, symbolic of American speedboat supremacy.

Observers on hand for the grueling 90-mile test looked for a smashing of existing records in view of the increased power and superchargers permitted under new rules of the American Speedboat Association.

On the eve of the race, which will be run in three heats, Wild Bill Horn, of Newport News, Va., pilot of Delphine IV, was considered the most dangerous challenger of George Reis, of Lake George, whose 13-year-old El Lagarto sped to victory in 1933 and 1934.

Nazis Defend Selection of Athletes

Only Six Jewish Men on Team; Incompetence Given as Reason.

Were Treated as if They Had Not Competed, Is Charge.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 26.—Charging persistent violation of Nazi pledges, Jewish leaders asserted today that the preliminary tryouts had been marked by such discrimination against Jewish athletes that it was unlikely any member of that race would gain a place on Germany's Olympic teams for the 1936 games here.

Nazi spokesmen, in turn, said the failure of any Jews to qualify for German terms thus far had been due to their own incompetence. A member of the staff of Hans von Tschammer und Osten, Nazi sports commissioner, pointed to the establishment of a training camp for Jewish athletes and opportunities given them for participating in the try-outs as evidence of Nazi fairness to all contenders for the various teams.

"Jews competed in the first tryouts," a Nazi official said, "but none survived."

Unfair Treatment.

Prominent Jews, on the other hand, said the factors of widespread anti-Semitic sentiment and restricted training facilities made satisfactory performances by Jewish athletes during the early eliminations virtually impossible.

"Jewish competitors throughout the eliminations were treated as though they had not participated," one Jewish spokesman said.

The latest flare-up over alleged discrimination against Jewish athletes came with the disclosure by the official German Olympic committee office that there were no Jews among the athletes so far chosen to compete for places on German teams. The Olympic office reported that eight or ten athletes already had been chosen for each Olympic sport for the try-outs that eventually will decide the make-up of each team.

Only six Jews, among hundreds of other athletes, competed in the trials in Berlin. Among the thousands throughout Germany who trained formally for the spring and summer eliminations only 20 were Jews, who were tutored by an Aryan instructor at Ettlingen Baden. These figures were given by the Reich's sport department.

One Jewish spokesman, however, said it was "extremely noteworthy" that those in charge of the Ettlingen camp allegedly refused to give out any information regarding the performances of the Jews.

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, today refused to get excited over the disclosure in Berlin that no Jews have been named so far among the athletes already chosen to compete for the German Olympic team.

"The fact that no Jews have been named so far to compete for Germany doesn't necessarily mean that they have been discriminated against on that score," he said. "In 40 years of Olympic history, I doubt if the number of Jewish athletes competing from all nations totaled 1 per cent in the games. In fact, I believe one-half of 1 per cent would be a high percentage.

"I do not imagine that the American team will have many Jews, either, but no one can say we discriminate against them. Every man with the ability is welcomed on the American team and German officials have promised us that all Jews with enough ability will get a chance on their team. Until there is a concrete proof of racial discrimination, I do not see how or why we should make a protest."

Lovelock Scores Over Gene Venzke

Wins 1,500 Meters Jaunt as Americans Bow.

By the United Press.

Stockholm, Sweden, July 26.—Jack Lovelock, of New Zealand, scored a smashing triumph over Gene Venzke, of America, in an international track and field meet tonight.

Lovelock captured the 1,500-meter run to give the touring Americans one of their few defeats suffered since arriving in Europe. Lovelock's time was three minutes, 57.6 seconds. Venzke tied for second with I. Haglund, of Sweden, at 3:58.2. Eric Ny, of Sweden, finished third.

Al Moreau, Marysville, La., continued undefeated when he slammed over the 100-meter hurdle distance in 14.4 seconds to whip H. Lidman, of Sweden, and Sten Petterson, Sweden. Eddie O'Brien, N. Y. A. C. middle distance ace, scored in the 300 meters. His time was 34.3.

England Faces U. S. Today In Singles

Budge Will Oppose Perry; Allison Meets Austin in 'Crucial' Test.

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 26.—A final spirited practice session today put America's Davis Cup warriors in fighting trim for tomorrow's big push when they encounter England's twin destroyers, Fred Perry and Bunny Austin, in the opening singles matches of the challenge round.

Scoffing at information that one of London's biggest commission houses was offering 7 to 4 against their chances, the veteran Wilmer Allison and his California teammate, Donald Budge, radiated calm confidence and resolve after each had played a pair of sparkling sets against John Van Ryn.

Allison, the 31-year-old Texan, who will start the ball rolling against Austin at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m. Eastern Standard Time) tomorrow in what may prove to be the key matcl of the climactic series, refused to get agitated over the betting odds.

Beaten Two Years Ago.

"If I play like I played against Von Cramm in the interzone finals, I'll not worry," Allison declared. "Austin beat me two years ago in the interzones at Paris, but that was on a hard court. We're playing on turf this time."

The sensational Budge, who celebrated his twentieth birthday only a few days ago, proved equally impervious to the electrified atmosphere, although he will be playing in a challenge round for the first time.

Asked if he were nervous at the prospect of meeting Perry, the youngester drawled:

"Nervous? What have I got to get nervous about? It's only a tennis match, isn't it?"

Doubles Monday.

After tomorrow's singles matches Allison and Van Ryn will meet the British pair of George Patrick Hughes and Charles Raymond Davys Tuckey in the doubles Monday. On Tuesday tomorrow's pairings will be reversed in the final two matches of the series.

It was the consensus of experts who watched the final practice sessions of both teams that the final decision would hinge on the outcome of Allison's match with Austin. The draw today, giving Allison his crack at England's second-string player while still fresh, was regarded as a big break for America.

Critics now concede the Texan a good chance of upsetting Austin provided he can charge the net often enough and long enough. If Allison can topple England's "Bunny" there seems to be a good chance of the cup's returning to the United States for the first time since France carried it away in 1927.

May Have to Wait.

If not, America probably will have to wait at least another year for there appears to be slight possibility that either Allison or Budge can take Perry's measure. Budge, who defeated Austin in the all-England championships and took Baron Gottfried von Cramm over the hurdles in the interzones, is figured to win over "Bunny" again when they clash Tuesday and Van Ryn and Allison are favored in the doubles.

Coach Dan Maskell, of the British team, after watching Perry and Austin play a two-set duel today, predicted England would retain the cup by the same 4-1 score as a year ago, conceding America only the doubles.

"There's even a possibility Hughes and Tuckey will win that point, too," Maskell said. "Don't forget, they beat your pair in the Queens Club tournament before Wimbledon. Allison and Van Ryn are not quite the team they used to be."

Nazi Paper Belittles Louis as Max's Foe

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 26.—Der Boxsports, official organ of German boxing authorities, frowned today upon a proposed Schmeling-Louis heavyweight bout.

"It's more than doubtful whether Louis is qualified to fight a boxer of Schmeling's significance," an editorial declared. "There is the same degree of uncertainty as in ball games. Then if Schmeling should lose, who would profit? Sport as such? Not at all.

"We do not want champions to shoot up like mushrooms. They ought to be selected on the basis of a long, unquestionable record. Thus far Louis has only a victory over Carnera. However, Schmeling is not interested in facilitating Louis' rise to the championship."

Schmeling Irks Mike Jacobs; Is Warned

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight who has suddenly become the most sought after fighter in the business, got his warning today that his time in the sportlight is short.

Dillydallying by long distance telephone from Berlin with First Promoter Jimmy Johnston, at Madison Square Garden, then Promoter Mike Jacobs, at the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, Schmeling finally ran Jacobs out of patience.

"I'll give him about 24 more hours to accept a fight with Joe Louis here in September, or as far as I'm concerned he can stay over there the rest of his life," fumed Michael. "I don't know what I'm getting het up about him for, anyway. He wants the moon and the sun and all the money there is for a chance to fight his way back to the heavyweight title."

Refused to Weaken.

Schmeling, in talks with both Mike Jacobs and the Garden, refused to weaken on his demand that $150,000 in cash be posted for him in a Holland bank before he will consider coming over here to fight either Louis for Jacobs or Max Baer for the Garden.

The Garden already has offered to post $100,000 abroad, even though the experts believe a Baer-Schmeling match wouldn't draw $200,000 in September. Two years ago, when both Baer and Schmeling were "hot" and the full power of Dempsey's personality as promoter was poured on the match, they drew $204,000, and Schmeling was knocked out.

Jacobs is willing to post $150,000 in Holland as security that Schmeling gets paid 33 per cent of the net receipts for a Louis match, which experts agree would draw upward of $500,000. Schmeling demands this $150,000 as an outright guarantee, however. Jacobs, realizing that Louis would want just as much, is bothered with severe headaches.

Cools Out Rapidly.

The Twentieth Century Club, despite the attractiveness of a Schmeling-Louis battle, was cooling out rapidly on the proposition tonight. There is considerable suspicion that the German has no intention of coming over here at all. Taxes will be tremendous on any sum that he earns here, and the matter of past indebtedness to his manager, Joe Jacobs, who received no share in several of Schmeling's foreign fights, bulks large in all the discussions.

The alternate plan under consideration was to pit Louis against several major heavyweights here in monthly shows, giving Art Lasky, Steve Hamas and Walter Neusel their chances in turn at the Brown Bomber if Louis disposes of King Levinsky, as generally expected, in Chicago August 7. Louis is considered such an attraction now that these fights might draw a total of $600,000, without any of the wear and tear of international complications or transatlantic telephone calls.

Cubs Win, 5-3, To Advance On Giants

Gain Half a Game on Idle Terrymen by Victory Over Cincinnati.

CHICAGO, July 26.—The Chicago Cubs, who were able to sit on the sidelines and chuckle during the last few days while the Giants and Cardinals were engaged in their throat-cutting series at St. Louis, found another cause for mirth today when they trimmed the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 1, in the series opener while their National League rivals were idle.

The triumph gave the Cubs a full game of second-place margin over the Cards and left them only 2½ games behind the Giants. The Reds, despite their defeat, clung to fifth place by a 1-point margin over Brooklyn.

The Cubs had little trouble ringing up their sixth victory in a row, although they were outhit, 9-8. The Reds tossed in three errors, two of which helped start Chicago off on the road to victory in the fourth after Cincinnati had scored its only run.

Hurls Steady Game.

French pitched a steady game after successive singles by Jim Bottomley, Ival Goodman and Ernie Lombardi had produced the Cincinnati tally. Stan Hack's fourth inning single cashed in on two Red misplays in the fourth, scoring Gabby Hartnett and Frank Demaree, Hartnett had reached first when Kiki Cuyler, making his first appearance in a Cincinnati unform against his old mates, muffed an easy fly and Demaree reached first on Lew Riggs' wild throw.

The Cubs then padded their margin by scoring a run in each of the next two innings. Augie Galan singled and Phil Cavarretta doubled in the fifth; Stan Hack hit a two-bagger and Bill Jurges a single in the sixth after Don Brennan had relieved Paul Derringer on the hill for Cincinnati in the seventh, Galan singled, took second on Bill Herman's infield out and scored the final run on Hartnett's base hit.

A ladies' day gathering of 15,500 augmented the 5,500 cash customers.

Shrine to Sponsor Md.-W. & L. Game

Meeting Held to Discuss Plans for Grid Fray.

The Shriners are going collegiate.

A delegation of nobles from Almas Temple, this city, and Boumi Temple, Baltimore, met with University of Maryland athletic officials yesterday and formulated tentative plans for the Terrapins' homecoming football game which the Shriners will sponsor.

Maryland plays Washington and Lee at College Park, November 16, in the homecoming attraction and a throng of at least 5,000 Shriners is expected to augment the usual crowd. A Masonic ceremonial will be held in the evening at Ritchie Coliseum, with a special entertainment for ladies.

H. C. (Curley) Byrd, acting president of Maryland, and Dr. L. B. Brought, recently appointed chairman of the athletic board, yesterday discussed the matter with Robert Smith, potentate of Almas Temple, and Whitney Jones, potentate of Boumi Temple.

Sir Malcolm Waits.

London, July 26 (AP).—A spokesman for Sir Malcolm Campbell said today the British sportsman had not yet definitely decided when he will leave for the United States to seek a new automobile speed record on the Bonneville salt flats in Utah.

Manush's 2 Homers Account for 5 Runs

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 26.—After three months as an American League nonentity, the Washington Club finally made its presence felt in the pennant race today before 5,000 paid witnesses in Yankee Stadium. With nothing to lose and very little to gain, it was seemingly out of pure cussedness that the seventh-place Nats hauled the Yankees out of the league lead.

Here in Yankee Stadium, the Nats collaborated with the Tigers out in Cleveland to oust the Yankees from the lead they had held since May 30. Later in the day, the Tigers checked in with an 8-2 victory over the Indians to bounce to the front by a margin of a game and a half over the backsliding Yanks.

Decisive Triumph.

There was nothing indecisive about the Nats' triumph over the Yankees. By the score of 9 to 3 the incorrigible Washington Club continued its strange misbehavior in the pennant race.

Washington won the game after Pitcher Ed Linke had been carried from the field on a stretcher in the second inning, felled by a vicious line drive off the bat of Jesse Hill, but as Linke lay in Roosevelt Hospital with a mild brain concussion, the Nats found in young Millard Hayes a pitcher who could beat the Yanks.

The Yankees today fell within the scope of German persecutions. Herr Heinie Manush, only a generation removed from the Fatherland, purged the game of all doubtfull elements with his big home run bat. His anti-Yankee drive first took the form of a home run with none on base in the fourth inning, but in the seventh with the bases loaded, Manush's purge increased in intensity.

Longer Than First.

He smacked another home run far into the right-field bleachers, a colossal clout that was even longer than the first. Jimmy Deshong, who had relieved Johnny Broaca earlier in the inning, was the victim of the wallop.

Herr Heinie thus made the Yankees rue their failure to remove him as a menace last month before the trading deadline expired. They spurned Clark Griffith's offer to trade Manush for a Yankee pitcher and today they saw him drive in five runs, make two sensational catches and otherwise contribute to the despair of the Yanks on a day when victory would have been sweetest.

For a few brief minutes tragedy appeared to have reared an ugly head out in the pitcher's box in the second inning. Linke, who had turned the Yanks back scoreless in the first inning, was pitching to Hill with men on first and second and one out when a terrific line drive heads-high, bounced off Hill's bat.

Linke's Injury Described.

Linke instinctively shot his hands up in front of his face, but too late. The hard-hit ball tore through his bare hand and struck him full on the right side of the forehead. Linke dropped to the mound and rolled off the slight incline toward the plate. The ball caromed from his head in a high loop into foul territory across the third-base line and the alert Jack Redmond snatched it up before it hit the ground.

With Linke still prone, Redmond thinking fast, threw to Kress at second base to complete a double play before Chapman was able to get back to the bag. Then the players again turned their attention to Linke.

He was carried from the field and laid on a stretcher in the Nats' dugout, where Trainer Mike Martin and Yankee physicians applied first aid. He never lost conscious-

Tigers Subdue Indians, 8-2; Take Lead

Triumph Climaxes Climb From Sixth Place, Begun in May.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, July 26.—The Detroit Tigers cleared up any doubts about their status in the American League pennant race which had been left after their series with the Yankees by trouncing the Indians, 8 to 2, in the series opener today and taking a clear hold on first place.

The victory and the Yanks' defeat by Washington put Detroit 1½ games ahead and provided a triumphant climax for its climb in the standings. On May 30, when the Yanks assumed the lead, the Tigers had just left sixth place and were tied with Boston for fourth. The move into first place today came a week ahead of last season's advance, when the Tigers took the lead August 2 and never were headed.

Lee Is Pounded.

Two rousing attacks on Thornton Lee in the sixth and seventh innings clinched the game for Mickey Cochrane's team, bringing in five runs to break up a tight mound duel between Lee and Elden Auker. Hank Greenberg led the attack, smacking a single and two doubles and driving in three runs. Auker was touched for ten hits but allowed only one unearned run up to the ninth when Ralph Winegarner's pinch double brought in the second.

Nightmare Shows Speed in Stretch to Win at Suffolk Downs

Sea Ted Runs Second by 3 Lengths

Victor Pays $9 Mutuel; Double Is Ridden by Jockey Wagner.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 26.—Displaying a great drive in the stretch and rated perfectly at the hands of Apprentice Joey Wagner, the Greentree Stable's Nightmare had no trouble today in capturing the Gardner, the 6-furlong sprint for 2-year-old maidens. The winner was second choice to Be Big, which was out of the money, and she went the route in 1:13 to pay $9 for a win ticket.

Nedvive showed early speed and had a nose out front in a start that saw the horses come out of the gate like a wave. She surrendered early, however, and the Bubbling Over filly, the favored Be Big, took temporary command.

Takes Lead at Turn.

Nightmare was placed badly during the early running but Wagner, who is giving Wayne Wright a fight for the honor of leading rider and who loses his "bug" tomorrow, hustled him into the contention. At the turn he took the lead and began to draw away from the field and under the wire was three lengths to the good of Sea Ted, which was a head in front of Nedvive. Barnsley showed early foot but could not hang on to the field and was beaten by a nose by Nedvive for the show.

The victory was the second of the day for Wagner, who rode the other Greentree victor, Jamboree, in the first race.

By the Associated Press.

Empire City, N. Y., July 26.—Lee Rosenberg's Dowdy Dell, winner of her last local start in a common jog, came right back with a game performance to capture top honors in the short six-furlongs of the fourth race, which headed a mediocre program here this afternoon. J. J. Conway's Sandy Bill, which breezed to a hollow triumph over Dowdy Dell in his last outing, trailed the filly by a length and a half on this occasion. Some Good, a 50-to-1 shot from the Ascot Stable, missed the place by a head.

Apprentice Eddie Yager, who has been riding in fine form at the Yonkers meeting, earned a double on Dowdy Dell. The Rosenberg lassie was a 3-to-5 favorite and covered the distance over a slow track in 1:10 1-5.

Sandy Bill, after opening at 7 to 5 and closing at 9 to 5, stopped all over in the final furlong. The son of Wise Counsellor broke like the wind and hustled into a five-length advantage, making Red Badge stop. Still far in front, Sandy Bill suddenly curled up after entering the last furlong.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMBOREE, $7.00, $3.40, $2.60; CHALLEPHEN, $3.40, $2.60; JUBILEE JIM, $2.60.

JAMBOREE, steadied along back of the pace, moved up on the outside when called upon, wore down the leaders and, hard ridden at the end, outlasted CHALLEPHEN. The latter followed in closest pursuit of JUBILEE JIM wore the latter down for the lead and, despite vigorous handling, was unable to withstand the winner. JUBILEE JIM, hustled to the front in the inside, showed good speed, but faltered through the closing three-sixteenths. LADY CARROT was unable to reach the leaders. JOY FLAG was outrun. WISE KING, in a jam soon after the start, stumbled and unseated his rider.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:09½. Winner, R. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEPAWAY, $6.00, $3.40, $3.20; FANCY FLIGHT $4.60, $3.80; ROBERT S., $10.40.

STEPAWAY, prominently placed from the outside, wore down the leaders nearing the stretch and drew clear in the final furlong. FANCY FLIGHT, a forward factor from the beginning while unable to stave off the winner, continued gamely to the end. ROBERT S. moved up gradually on the outside and came willingly on the outside through the stretch run. GIBBYS CHOICE, outrun early, came stoutly on the outside through the stretch. EPITAPH, under reserve while racing on the inside, was unable to improve his position when called upon and dropped back through the last quarter-mile.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:42. Off at 3:44. Winner, Mrs. H. T. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IMA GREENOCK $6.60, $3.60, $3.00; MOANE KEALA, $3.60, $3.00; PANA FRANKA, $3.60.

IMA GREENOCK, under slight restraint while racing on the outside for the first half-mile, came through on the inside in the stretch and, closing with a rush, was up in the closing stride. MOANE KEALA assumed a slight lead in the opening quarter-mile, drew clear near the stretch and, holding on well, just failed to hold on long enough. PANA FRANKA, a forward factor throughout and under steadying restraint moved up threateningly nearing the furlong pole, but was unable to keep pace in the drive. CHIEF'S PRIDE was in the first flight the entire way. TED HUSING moved up gradually on the outside, loomed up threateningly, but faltered in the closing drive. SUN TEATIME was unable to enter into serious contention.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:15. Winner, —— Tuckerman's b. g. (5), by Chance Play—Riga. Trained by R. Neander. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13, 1:38 2-5, 1:44.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RANGE FINDER, $30.00, $14.60 $4.80; SANTERNO, $7.20, $3.40; LOTTA AIRS, $3.00.

RANGE FINDER took command in the running to the first turn, drew clear, was rated along under slight restraint, was roused several times at the head of the stretch and, continuing gamely, held sway to the end. SANTERNO worked his way up steadily in the last three furlongs and closed with a rush through the stretch. LOTTA AIRS, well placed all the way, was unable to improve her position to any great extent in the drive. HIGHEST POINT weakened in the closing quarter-mile after having raced reservedly. TRAITOR moved up fast when straightened out on the back stretch, but weakened after going five furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:53. Winner, Greentree Stable's b. c. (2), by St. Brideaux—Tossabout. Trained by M. C. Lilly. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:46 2-5, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHTMARE, $9.00, $5.60, $4.20; SEA TED, $8.60, $4.60; NEDVIVE, $3.60.

NIGHTMARE, away fast but lacking speed to maintain her position, was eased back in the run to the far turn and, sent up on the outside, wore down SEA TED when reaching the stretch and drew out fast through the last furlong. SEA TED displayed speed from the start, went to the front leaving the back stretch, made a determined effort to keep pace when challenged, but was not good enough. NEDVIVE, prominently placed all the way, continued easily to the end. BARNSLEY, outrun for the first half-mile, closed willingly in the last quarter-mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:31. Winner, E. A. McMann's b. c. (4), by Dunbar II—Mary Maud. Trained by H. L. Cornwell. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:45 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENARES, $11.40, $5.80, $4.00; SOCIAL CLIMBER, $5.20, $3.40; PATCHEYE, $4.60.

BENARES, never far from the lead while racing on the outside, moved up when called upon in the last three furlongs, wore down SOCIAL CLIMBER for the lead when reaching the stretch and held him safe to the end. SOCIAL CLIMBER established the pace while under slight reserve, was given a breathing spell nearing the far turn, assumed the lead swinging from the back stretch, drew clear and, despite fighting it out determinedly, was unable to withstand the winner. PATCHEYE worked her way up gradually in the last half-mile and came gamely in the stretch drive. PASS, on the inside down the back stretch, assumed a brief lead, but was unable to maintain his advantage, dropping back in the last five-sixteenths. ALL BAYS moved up on the outside nearing the half-mile ground, but was never able to improve his position thereafter under punishment.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:04. Off at 6:05. Winner, R. Curran's ch. g. (5), High Cloud—Halicore. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13, 1:39 1-5, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIDSHIPMAN, $6.00, $3.00, $2.40; PROPAGANDIST, $3.40, $2.60; FLYING DERE $2.80.

MIDSHIPMAN moved through on the inside down the back stretch to gain a prominent position, held to a position on the inside and, closing stoutly, wore down PROPAGANDIST and was slowly drawing out at the end. PROPAGANDIST, taken to the outside in the run down the back stretch, wore down PRINCE POMPEY for the lead nearing the stretch and, well out in the track through the stretch, was unable to meet the closing bid of the winner. FLYING DERE, reserved off pace early, came gamely in the stretch run. PRINCE POMPEY took command in the run to the first turn, was steadied along in front, but weakened in the last quarter-mile. HOGANS FOX tired after showing brief speed. MORALIST was never a serious factor.

Discovery 1-2 Favorite in Big Race

To Carry 135 Pounds in $10,000 Arlington Meet Feature.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Discovery, globe-trotter of the American turf, goes sightseeing again tomorrow, but it's almost 1 to 2 that he'll win all the money while his rivals are seeing the sights.

The sensational 4-year-old, owned by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, of New York, carrying a load of 135 pounds, tonight was a 1-to-2 favorite to win the $10,000 added Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park tomorrow. The race will be at a mile and a quarter. Eight others, most of them with a little more than a feather on their backs, were named to oppose Discovery, which will be in quest of his sixth straight handicap victory in six weeks.

Among the opposition, Discovery will find the California horse, Riskulus, owned by Norman W. Church of Los Angeles, trying to repeat his victory in the handicap of a year ago. Riskulus, with a 19-pound pull in the weight, appears to be the one horse capable of stopping the furious rush of Discovery toward a new money-winning record.

Other Odds High.

There was some support for the Canadian champion, Stand Pat, the entry of E. F. Seagram, Montreal sportsman. The odds on the others, however, ran up to 30 to 1.

The number of times the heavy impost of 135 pounds has been carried to victory in important American stakes over a mile and a quarter route is less than a score. Yet it was done once before in the Arlington Handicap when the mighty Equipoise won it in 1933, beating Watch Him, which will carry the colors of Mrs. John D. Hertz, of Chicago, tomorrow.

Apparently still at his best, Discovery can pack weight without serious handicap. Carrying 131 pounds, Discovery made a runaway race of the Bunker Hill Handicap in Boston just a week ago. Picking up an additional 4 pounds for tomorrow's race will not slow him up, his backers feel.

Out Fishin'

By Jack Hawley.

WITH practically all fresh water changed into a deplorable chocolate color by the frequent rains of the past week, bass and other species will continue their present holiday for several days and perhaps longer. However, this condition will not prevent the enthusiast who wants to try out that new fly or bait casting rod from journeying down the Chesapeake and getting his revenge on the croaker family.

Although much despised by the majority of sport fishermen because of the ease and large number caught, the hard-head is no weakling when taken on light tackle and will surprise many that heretofore have given him little if any consideration. Salt water anglers who do not desire to add additional expensive tackle to their equipment can purchase a steel rod for less than $2.00 that will answer his purpose equally as well. Try it and be convinced.

Conditions Improving.

Reports from the upper part of the bay are spotty, but with clearing weather and favorable winds the fishing over this week-end should improve sufficiently to warrant the reservation of worthy boats and guides. During the day the fish are seeking the deep water, returning to shallow water in the early evening, which accounts for the rush of boats at 5 o'clock and the successful return at midnight. There is no doubt that at this season of the year the fish (other than bluefish) are feeding on schedule and no amount of persuasion can induce them to change for the pleasure and convenience of the daylight angler.

A safety pin (common variety) may save your next fishing trip if you have the misfortune in breaking one or more of your guides, whether agate or metal. By cutting both ends close to the head or opening of the pin, bend back each end with pliers and form into a loop. Slip over the rod and bring both loops underneath and tie with fish cord. The closed end will then furnish you with an excellent guide and will stay in place until renewed. Fasten a few pins on your belt loop for such an emergency.

The above will do for the rod but what about the last drone, feather or spoon that the bluefish caused you to lose when your line snapped or perhaps because you neglected to replace last year's line with a fresh and stronger line. I am passing this on to you because it does the trick in fine style. Purchase two short lengths of both white and red rubber tubing such as is used around the house for medicinal and sanitary purposes. On a 3-inch sinker (use the long tapering type with line hole at each end) slip over the red piece of rubber and bring it down to the center of the sinker, cut the white piece about twice the length of the sinker and slip it up to meet the red rubber and fasten by tying or cementing the rubber together.

Fishing Bureau.

Cut numerous slits in the remaining white rubber up close to the bottom of the sinker and fasten the hook through the sinker loop. No other lead is required. The above device is excellent for deep trolling and can be used for surface trolling by increased speed of the boat or by using a smaller sinker.

Details for establishing a fishing bureau for full information to anglers (both fresh and salt water) who do not possess transportation, few acquaintances, limited funds, is now in the process of completion. This will also include a list of open dates that room is available for one or more anglers desiring to make up a complete party or parties. Full details will be announced through this column at an early date.

Note to boat captains: It is requested that you inform your guests who are fortunate in securing good action pictures of their catch to forward same to this writer for use on this page. In addition, those of you who are willing to furnish authentic and reliable information and interested in business seven days a week during the season, write me giving the number of boats for hire, rates, accommodations, etc. The writer is seeking honest co-operation in return for his pledge to make "Out Fishin'" a dependable service to all that seek out-door-recreation.

Charles Town Sets 4-Day Race Meet

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 26.—Arrangements have been completed by the Charles Town Horse Show Association with the West Virginia Racing Commission for a four-day race meet here early next month, to be held in connection with the annual Charles Town Horse Show.

The amount of bond required as deposit by the commission to guarantee payment of State taxes on pari-mutuel betting has been set and will be met by the local association.

The horse show, now dwarfed by the pari-mutuel racing to where it is no longer important here, will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, August 7 and 8, while racing will be held August 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Gallico Describes Hurried Landing

again just in case it fixed itself. Nothing happens.

Now! What are you going to do, cut right away, or fly around a while and think it over? Nope, better cut it now before you get panicky. You look at the field. There are two of them at Roosevelt, perfectly huge ones. Now they look like postage stamps. And you have to come in over the telegraph wires and hangars. A thousand feet altitude. Remember now, NO MISTAKES. If you undershoot, you're in the wires. Overshoot and it's worse. Go on cut the damn thing and get it over with. Click! Hmmm, the prop is still turning. At least your passenger won't know the stick is dead. Now glide . . . glide . . . Is the distance right? You seem awfully high. You slip a little! Whoa! Not too much. You're not over those wires yet. Gee whiz, did you slip too much? Should you dive a little to get more speed? Are the controls getting sloppy? Whee, over the wires and hangars. . . . Looka that pit and embankment and broken ground beneath. Have you got enough speed to sail over. You should have. Whee! Over that too . . . Now, here's the ground . . . Level off . . . Ease back . . . ease back . . . back . . . THUMP! You're in! and brother, and sister too, is THAT a grand and glorious feeling . . . You get out, kneel down, and kiss the ground tenderly and lovingly. Then you get the throttle fixed, and go back up again. The lady too.

Virginians Buy Ksar, Famed Stallion

Sire's Get Have Won 320 Races Worth 11 Million Francs.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

MIDDLEBURG, Va., July 26.—Ksar, one of the finest stallions ever produced in France, has been purchased by Kenneth N. Gilpin, of Boyce, Clarke County, and A. S. Hewitt, of Montana Hall, Clarke County. The imported stud arrived in Virginia Wednesday and is at present being stabled at Montana Hall.

A chestnut horse (colt of 1918, by Bruleur-Kizil, out of Kaurgan), Ksar stands 16.1 hands. He was purchased from the Haras de Jardy, owned by Eddie and Francois Edmond Blanc, near Paris.

The price paid by the Virginians for the stallion has not been disclosed, nor is it known yet what his stud fee will be. A great many mares already have been booked to this stud, whose fee in France was $3,000.

Ksar brought 151,000 francs as a yearling. He started to race as a 4-year-old and in two seasons won more money than any other horse ever has within that short a period. His total winnings mounted to $350,000, placing him fourth on the list of money winners. Ksar is the sire of three French Derby winners and his get have won 320 races and 11,000,000 francs.

Kenneth Gilpin, some years ago, with Wallace Armstrong, bought Teddy, another famous French stallion, who stands at Kentmere Stud, Clarke County. This gallant old thoroughbred is the grandfather of Omaha, 3-year-old champion of America. Gilpin is selling at Saratoga, in August, 12 yearling colts, nine of them by Teddy. Many believe they will bring the highest prices of any colts placed on the block at the Spa this season.

Welsh-McElvenny to Meet Mitchell-Markey in Net Final

Teams Clash For Crown Today

Both Veteran Pairs Are Given Hard Battles in Semifinals.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE heated rivalry between the doubles teams of Barney Welsh and Ralph McElvenny and Dooley Mitchell and Bud Markey is set for a vigorous renewal this afternoon. The two veteran combinations slashed into the final of the Public Parks championships yesterday, and for the third time will slam it out in spectacular eye-opening fashion that has made their duels fixed features of the local tennis seasons.

Welsh and McElvenny, defending champions and finalists in the National Public Parks championships last year, weathered the stubborn opposition of Bill Breese and Hugh Lynch, to win, 7—5, 7—5, in a match that brought forth more fine smashing than the city has seen in a semifinal in years.

Mitchell and Markey fought an uphill battle in the third act to survive their match with the 1933 champions, Frank Shore and Tony Latona, 8—6, 3—6, 6—4.

Women Vie in Final.

The final is slated for 3 o'clock. It will be preceded by the final for the women's championship, with Sara Moore, local women's sensation of the season, meeting Bobsey Turney at 2 o'clock.

The semifinals of the women's doubles will begin at 4 o'clock. Admission is 25 cents. The receipts will be used to defray expenses of the men's finalists to the national tournament in New Orleans.

The more decisive volleying of Welsh and McElvenny and a frequent weakness of Breese off the ground spelled the small margin of difference between the two teams. Breese offset his driving errors by brilliant work overhead, but neither he nor Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, volleyed with the finality of the champions.

Breese and Lynch went to a 4—2 lead in the first set by breaking McElvenny's service twice, despite a loss of delivery by Lynch. Welsh and McElvenny proceeded to rip off five of the next six games, breaking Breese's service twice and swept the set, largely through Welsh's smashing.

Brilliant Rallies.

Games went to 5-all in the second set, with neither team leading by more than a game, despite loss of a service by Lynch and Welsh. At 5-all, Breese lost his service when Lynch smashed in the net at deuce and the big former Harvard left-hander double-faulted. The last game brought out several brilliant rallies, but two untouchable smashes by McElvenny at deuce carried the champs to the finals.

Lobs played an important part in the Latona-Shore—Mitchell-Markey fracas, both teams often resorting to the strategy offensively as well as defensively. In the third set Latona dropped his service to make it 2-all and games went on service to the tenth game, when Shore was broken. He opened it by smashing outside and Dooley smashed for a placement. Shore volleyed for 15-30, but then smashed outside and Markey drove for a placement for set and match.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Men's Doubles.

Semifinals—Barney Welsh and Ralph McElvenny defeated W. L. Breese and Hugh Lynch, 7-5, 7-5; Dooley Mitchell and Bud Markey defeated Tony Latona and Frank Shore, 8—6, 3—6, 6—4.

Yearlings Shipped To Saratoga Ring

Six in Vanguard, 17 More Thoroughbreds Follow.

By the Associated Press.

Leesburg, Va., July 26.—The vanguard of Loudoun County thoroughbred yearlings, six animals from the Morven Park Stud of former Gov. Westmoreland Davis, moved to the Saratoga, N. Y., sales ring this week, with 17 others to follow from the Rockbridge Stud of David H. Rust and the Raspberry Plain menage of W. H. Lipscomb.

The Davis consignment consisted of two colts and four fillies, each in superb condition. Four of the six are sons and daughters of the veteran campaigner and successful sire, Lucillitte.

Mr. Rust is sending up 15, most of them the get of his brilliant young sire, Time Maker. Mr. Lipscomb is shipping two handsome sons of the great Teddy, the imported French stallion that heads his stud.

Tri-City Regatta Under Way Today

THOSE enlarged egg beaters known as outboard motors will whip the Severn into a froth today as the eighth annual Tri-City regatta gets under way at Herald Harbor, Md. Nine events, all outboard races, will start at 2:30 p. m. and are scheduled to run until 5:30.

Outboard entries have broken all records in the Chesapeake Bay country. Fred Jacoby and Sammy Crooks, New Jersey aces, are entered in four classes with as many boats. J. C. Walier, holder of the New York State title for three seasons will be represented. Gar Wood, jr., son of the famed speedboat king, has the largest number of outboards entered with five boats. Wood is high in points scored this season and the Tri-City meet will have great bearing on his chances for the national championship.

Ace Pilots Entered.

Lew Carlisle is among others with four entries. Joel Thorne, holder of the three principal trophies and medals for high point scoring in 1934, probably will rule a favorite for first place honors in the Tri-City affair. Approximately 100 champions and contenders are entered in the outboard group. The entry list is studded with such names as Marshall Eldridge, Ed Hoffman, Al Doeman, Fred Chase, Don Flowers, Morton Daller, Flinton Ferguson, Bob Heape and Mully Scull among others.

Maryland Codd, one of the country's best women drivers, will be called upon to face some severe competition from a member of her sex in the Class M (midget) race. Mollie Tyson, another outstanding feminine star, will provide the opposition for Miss Codd.

Practically the entire personnel of the President's Cup Regatta, one of the most efficient organizations of its sort in the United States, will assist in handling the regatta.

Taneytown Victorious Over Hanover Nine, 7-6

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Taneytown, Md., July 26.—A base on balls and a double by Blettner provided the run in the seventh inning that enabled Taneytown, of the Frederick County League, to defeat the Hanover (Pa.) Black Cats, 7 to 6. The home team got a good start in the first inning when four singles, two errors and a base on balls counted for 4 runs. Grove then settled down and held Taneytown to three hits the remainder of the game. Hanover evened the score with 2 runs in the sixth inning.

Sarron, Boils Victim, Cancels Bernard Bout

THE Pete Sarron-Roger Bernard featherweight bout scheduled for Griffith Stadium Monday night was canceled yesterday. Cancellation of the contest, which had aroused tremendous local interest, was made necessary when Sarron was forced to undergo an operation for boils at his training camp in Asheville, N. C.

Joe Temes, a Greek featherweight who is well known to local ringworms, will be substituted for Sarron against Bernard. Since reporting here from Florida, Temes has participated in ten bouts, winning nine and recording one draw. Three of the nine victories scored by Joe were via the knockout route, and Temes avenged the draw by spanking Julie Katz in a return match.

Sarron had been suffering from boils on his arm for a number of days, but felt that they would in no way interfere with his fighting Bernard. Yesterday, the Syrian sizzler's physician advised the operation, which will keep Pete from fighting for at least two weeks.

Wild Bill Howell will attempt a comeback in a four-rounder against Gene Harrington, Marine welterweight. Andy Martin and Patsy Severo are booked for the eight-round semifinal, while in a pair of sixes Dave Barry will meet Eddie Burl and Ray Ingram has been booked against Bill Temes.

Staunton Defeats Harrisonburg Nine

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 26.—Staunton went on a hitting rampage here last night to defeat Harrisonburg, 12 to 9, in an exhibition game staged for the benefit of Rotarians attending the State assembly. It was the first setback for Harrisonburg in the last eight starts.

Bill Schmidt and Bob Long were thumped for 16 hits which produced the dozen runs in three innings. Harrisonburg tapped Via, Stephens and Conger for 12 safeties, but Conger held them after he took the mound in the seventh with the score tied at 9-all.

Via, while not faring so well on the mound, drove in five runs with a double and single, each with the bases loaded. Bud Kibler and Floyd Baker hit home runs for Harrisonburg.

Mangin-Hines To Meet for Net Title

By the Associated Press.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 26.—The jinx which always has ridden the favorites in the annual Seabright Invitation tennis tournament continued to function today, two outsiders galloping into the final round of the men's singles division. Also, a comparative newcomer to Eastern court circles reached the last bracket of the women's singles.

Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, the National indoor champion and No. 13 in national ranking, and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., ranked eighteenth, were the survivors among the men. They will meet tomorrow for the silver bowl.

Mangin defeated the top-seeded Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, 6—4, 8—6, 3—6, 4—6, 7—5, while Hines eliminated Berkeley Bell, of New York, the winner last year, in another stirring five-set match, 6—4, 5—7, 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

Miss Wheeler Wins.

Gracyn Wheeler, Santa Monica, Calif., defeated Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3, to climb into the final of the women's singles. Her opponent tomorrow will be Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold, of Los Angeles, a certain choice for a position on the U. S. Wightman Cup team.

The women's doubles tournament was completed during the day, with Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, and Carolyn Babcock, of Los Angeles, winning the silver platters by beating Miss Wheeler and Mrs. Arnold in straight sets, 6—1, 7—5.

The defeat of Parker and Bell was indicated yesterday when rain halted their matches at a time when they were far behind.

Mangin led Parker, ranked fourth nationally, 6—4, 8—6, 2—1, when play resumed today, but Frankie staged a stirring rally that first brought him up even and later ahead. He won the third and fourth sets with brilliant backhand placements and was leading 3—0, 40—15, in the final set when Mangin came to life.

Rushes Net.

For the rest of the match, he played as if inspired, rushed the net repeatedly, went ahead in the eleventh game by breaking through Parker's service and took the set and match on his own service in the twelfth.

Hines had a lead on two sets to one over Bell when showers interfered yesterday. Bell, fighting desperately, won the fourth set today, but was an easy victim of Hines' powerful strokes in the deciding one.

The Wheeler-Van Ryn engagement also started yesterday, each taking a set before the rain. Miss Wheeler quickly finished the match today to qualify to meet Mrs. Arnold, who defeated Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind., in the only contest that was completed yesterday.

Directors Are Named By Loudoun Golf Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Purcellville, Va., July 25.—At the annual meeting of the Loudoun Golf and Country Club, Inc., which was held at the clubhouse in Purcellville, the following directors were elected for a term of three years each: George J. Babson, W. C. Hall, Lloyd Slack, M. N. Lyon, F. H. James and E. L. McFarland.

The stockholders heard the report of the secretary-treasurer for the year ended June 30.

America Will Send Three Men To London Olympics for Deaf

FOR the first time in history, the United States will be represented this year in the Olympic games for the deaf to be held in London August 17-24.

The American delegation will be a small band, it is true, consisting of only three members, but those responsible for sending them to the wars hope to do much better next time.

Representing the United States will be S. Robey Burns, athletic director at the State School for the Deaf in Jackson, Ill., who will be a good-will representative, and John Chudzikiewicz and John Cannon.

Chudzikiewicz, a naturalized American, won the World Polish Olympic javelin title in Warsaw last summer. He is expected to figure prominently in the javelin and shot-put and generally is conceded a good chance of taking a place in the discus throw. Cannon is a runner from Sterling, Ill.

The committee in charge of this year's Olympics, in which 60 nations will participate at the White City Stadium, sent a special request to Percival Hall, president of Gallaudet here, asking that the United States be represented.

Unable to take any action in the matter, Hall forwarded the request to Burns. The State school athletic director decided to attend the games himself as a good-will delegate, and finally succeeded in raising funds through prominent Midwestern business men to take the two athletes selected.

Burns at present is in Clarendon, Va. He sails with the athletes from New York next Tuesday.

THE three-day-old record set by Norman Baulsir, of Johnson Playground, in the 100-pound playground broad jump, fell yesterday under the Mercury-blessed heels of Ozzie Cooksey, representing Rosedale Playground, who jumped 18 feet and 9 inches for a new playground record. Baulsir, competing in the Northern Conference meet of the annual Department of Playgrounds Conference track meet, had jumped 17 feet 11 inches Wednesday to break the record of Natheson, Henry D. Cooke Playground, which was established in 1926.

Cooksey was a participant in the Eastern Conference meet held yesterday in Eastern Stadium under the direction of Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds. It was the largest conference meet held to date in the series, the final of which is the city meet, August 20, in Central Stadium. Altogether, 570 boys participated.

Jockey Club Creditors To Pay $7,000 Lien

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 26.—Lien creditors of the Charles Town Jockey Club held a meeting in Baltimore recently, with virtually all interests represented, and voted to pay the $7,000 lien held by Mrs. Lambert Mason, who owned the land on which the greater part of the Jockey Club was built.

A fund of $15,000 was retained in the club's treasury as a deposit for the next race meet in December. Interest on all lien debts was ordered paid to August 1, in addition to a payment of 10 per cent on the principal due lien holders.

U. S. Trackmen Win.

Helsingfors, Finland, July 26 (U.P.). United States athletes won four out of six events in today's track and field meet with Finland, Japan and Esthonia.

Eagles Seeking Strength for Celt Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., July 26.—John Travers, manager of the Alexandria Eagles, is making every effort to put a ball club on the field at Baggett's Stadium Sunday that will give the St. Mary Celtics a real battle in their championship series. Travers hopes to sign either Lefty Stevens or Ray Davidson to hurl.

Under direction of Coach Russ Kidwell, the Celtics will practice at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Baggett's.

Next Saturday and Sunday the Celts will meet the Cutters of Lynchburg, Va., on the latter's diamond.

An interesting pitchers' battle is expected Sunday afternoon at Fort Belvoir when the Mount Vernon Independents and Fort Belvoir clash. Dick Ayers, University of Virginia pitcher, and Bill Rahn, speed-ball hurler, will oppose on the mound.

"Lefty" Pharr, former American Legion Junior ball player, has been signed by Alexandria Eagles and will be seen in the outfield Sunday against the Celtics.

Two Camp Youngsters Sweep Track Classes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Springfield, W. Va., July 26.—For the first time in the history of the Central Y. M. C. A. boys' camp, two boys made a clean sweep of all events in their respective classes in the fourth week track and field meet. These boys were John Kallmyer competing in the Junior A class and Herbert Dawson in the Sophomore A group.

Leaders in other classes were Orville Shirey, senior, 14 points; Harry Landis, junior B, 13; Jimmy Foreman, sophomore B, 11, and Bobby Walker, freshman, 14 points. This was the final track meet of the 1935 camp.

Berkeley Takes Lead.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 26.—The Berkeley Club, of the Bi-County Industrial League, went to the top of the standings following an 8-5 victory over the Bakerton entry at Bakerton. The game was a postponed affair and the scheduled contest will be played next Tuesday at Berkeley.

Wins Liverpool Race.

Liverpool, England, July 26 (AP).—G. F. Annesley's 4-year-old, His Reverence, won the Liverpool Silver Jubilee Cup today, defeating Lady Nuttal's Guinea Gap by three-quarters of a length. Lord Astor's Law Maker was another three lengths back.

Nats Win, 9-3, Over Yanks; Linke Hurt

ness, according to Martin. With the arrival of an ambulance ten minutes later, he was taken to the hospital, where X-ray pictures revealed no fracture but a slight concussion. He was resting comfortably tonight, but, according to doctors, had escaped death by inches. The same blow on the temple would have been fatal, they said.

Early Two-Run Lead.

The Nats didn't tarry in staking Linke to a two-run lead. Jake Powell drove a long triple to center to score Buddy Myer in the first inning and Bluege's single and Redmond's fly scored Kress in the second. Linke extricated himself from a threatening position when, after walking three batters with one out in the first, he threw three straight called strikes past Bill Dickey.

The Yanks got a run off Hayes in the third on three straight hits, but the Nats found Broaca for two more in the fourth. Manush's healthy homer accounted for the first and Gehrig helped to boot in the second when he fumbled Redmond's roller after Kress had singled. Hayes singled to drive Kress home.

With the aid of Ossie Bluege's wild throw on Hill's grounder, after Crosetti had opened with a double, the Yanks picked up two more runs against Hayes in the fourth to narrow the score to 4-3, but after that they were at the mercy of the young Chattanooga graduate.

Hayes Is Effective.

In those last five innings Hayes surrendered only three hits to the Yankees and not until the ninth did the Yanks get a man to third. He was mixing a bristling fast ball with a clever change of pace.

The Nats put the clincher on the game in the seventh. Redmond singled to right and Hayes sacrificed. Kuhel walked and Stone's long double against the right-field wall drove Redmond home.

At this point Deshong relieved Broaca and intentionally passed Myer to fill the bases and bring Powell to bat. Deshong was seemingly nicely out of a troublesome situation when Powell grounded to Rolfe and Kuhel was forced at the plate, but along came Manush.

He came along with probably the longest home run of his big league career—a tremendous drive over Selkirk's head half way to the top of the right-field bleachers and the last four Washington runs joyfully clattered across the plate.

Camp Meeting Opens.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 26.—The annual Potomac Park Camp meeting of the Assemblies of God, Inc., opened today at the Marlowe camp grounds on the West Virginia side of the Potomac River and will continue for three weeks. Harry V. Schaeffer, pastor of Bethel Tabernacle, Washington, with 25 Bible students, opened the meetings.

Royal Wonder Wins 3 Blues At Orange

Allen's Entry Also Takes One Yellow; Small Crowd Present.

By the Associated Press.

ORANGE, Va., July 26.—Dr. L. M. Allen's 3-year-old Royal Wonder, was the individual star of the thirty-sixth annual Orange Horse Show here today, winning three blue ribbons and a yellow in four classes.

The horses of L. R. Colbert, of Fredericksburg, and J. J. McIntyre, of Hollins, also were oustanding.

Young Dickie Kelly, of Richmond, 14-year-old rider in the silks of Colbert, was the favorite of the crowd as he rode two blue ribbon winners.

Small Crowd Looks On.

Fear of infantile paralysis, combined with a steady rain throughout the morning, restricted the crowd to a mere handful.

Wet and slippery turf proved a dangerous handicap to the horses, but although there were some narrow escapes, no accidents occurred.

THE SUMMARIES.

Suitable to become hunters—First, Royal Wonder, Dr. L. M. Allen, Winchester; second, Sir Greystone, Edwin Vaughan, Fredericksburg; third, Claws, Mrs. Allen Potts, Gordonsville; fourth, Thundercloud, Gen. William Mitchell, Middleburg.

Woodstock Bows To Strasburg, 8-7

Ousted From Second Place in Shenandoah Loop.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., July 26.—A last-minute rally spelled defeat for Woodstock at the hands of Strasburg today in a nip-and-tuck battle, 8 to 7.

Ritenour went the route for Strasburg allowing them eight hits and fanning seven batters, while Coffman, his rival, allowed nine hits and fanned eight.

As a result of the game today, Woodstock toppled from the runner-up position in the Shenandoah County League, being a full game behind Strasburg.

Richmond Golf Fans To See Cruickshank

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—Sam Parks, jr., gets the best billing because he's National Open champion, but most of the customers will have their eyes centered on long-driving Jimmy Thomson and Bobby Cruickshank in the exhibition golf match here tomorrow.

Parks, the winner, and Thomson, who might have won if his putter hadn't failed on Oakmont's homicidal greens, will be teamed against Cruickshank and Benny Loving, of Charlottesville, with the Virginia representatives conceded at least an even chance to whip the invaders.

Mining Alone Reports More Employed Than in June, 1934.

New York, July 27.—The total number of unemployed workers in June, 1935, was 9,804,000, according to the regular monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board made public today. This is an increase of 95,000, or 1.0 per cent, from the preceding month, and an increase of 552,000, or 6.0 per cent over June, 1934.

From May to June, 1935, the increases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: Manufacturing and mechanical industries, 64,000; domestic and personal service, 32,000; trade, 11,000; miscellaneous industries, 2,000. Unemployment showed a decrease of 20,000 in transportation and 21,000 in mining.

Compared with June, 1934, unemployment in June, 1935, increased 12.7 per cent in domestic and personal service; 4.0 per cent in transportation; 2.1 per cent in trade; 1.5 per cent in manufacturing; and 1.9 per cent in miscellaneous industries. Unemployment in mining decreased 2.4 per cent. The conference board's allowance for the net annual increase of gainful workers available for employment accounts for 320,000 of the 552,000 increase in unemployment as compared with June, 1934.

Number of Unemployed.

Industrial Group.	June, '34.	June, 35.
Mining	444,000	433,000
Manufacturing & and mechanical	3,465,000	3,518,000
Transportation	1,246,000	1,296,000
Trade	1,015,000	1,037,000
Domestic and personal service	857,000	966,000
Industry not specified	474,000	483,000
Other industries (1)	296,000	296,000
All industries (2)	7,797,000	8,029,000
Allowance for new workers since 1930 census	1,455,000	1,775,000
Total unemployed	9,252,000	9,804,000

(1) This group includes agriculture, forestry and fishing, public service, and professional service. The numbers given are the unemployed workers in 1930, satisfactory data being unavailable from which later changes in unemployment can be computed.

(2) Industrial classification includes 3,188,000 listed as unemployed in census of April, 1930.

Cotton Rallies 8 to 15 Points

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Early declines were followed by rallies in cotton today with near months leading the advance on trade buying and covering. The general market closed steady 8 to 15 points net higher. Early declines of 5 or 6 points were attributed to liquidation and foreign selling following easy Liverpool cables. These offerings were absorbed by trade buying to fix prices, or a scattering demand, however, and prices later advanced on covering.

$689,880,000 Paid By Closed Banks

Payments to depositors in banks which remained closed after the bank holiday of March, 1933, have totaled $689,880,000, President Roosevelt was told today by J. F. T. O'Connor, Controller of the Currency. He said 85 bank receiverships had been concluded since last October 31, of which 12 paid depositors in full. He estimated that 52,000,000 depositors were now protected by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Retail Trade Gains in Week

Upward Trend Persists Despite Widespread Hot Weather.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Additional gains were registered for retail trade during the week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in a weekly trade review, in spite of high temperatures which prevailed in nearly all parts of the country.

"Instead of being forced to offer resistance to the awaited midsummer recession, most divisions of trade have been enabled to better their showing of a year ago without much effort," it was stated.

"Fall buying at wholesale also made more headway, as retailers advanced their earlier budget estimates, in view of the improved outlook. * * *

"The steady broadening of consumer demand since the first of the month is proceeding unmindful of weather conditions, the postponed buying of May and a part of June being released in larger volume with each successive week.

"Losses of the spring months rapidly are being nullified, as summer stocks dwindle and early fall lines commence to attract attention.

"Although daily totals fluctuated with the weather, the intense heat interfering with planned shopping tours at times, retail sales for the country were estimated at 15 to 35 per cent ahead of those for the corresponding 1934 week."

Wholesale markets reflected the broadening trend of retail distribution, it was declared, and the broadening of industrial operations, which started two weeks ago, contrary to all expectations for this period, has been further extended, and rapidly is outstripping all records for the last few years.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Fri.	Thu.
Advances	356	211
Declines	200	396
Unchanged	184	179
Total issues	740	786

Stocks—Scattered profit taking failed to deter a steady upward trend of the market. Utilities, metals and scattered industrials were in the lead. Firmest in the final hour. Trading slackened to 989,480 shares.

Bonds—Brisk rallies in Italian dollar bonds and wide gyrations by some utilities were the main features. Federals were inactive and little changed. Transfers were off to $8,034,000.

Curb—A demand for utilities near the close turned the trend skyward. Trading approximated 201,000 shares.

Grains—A late stampede of buying shot wheat 4¼ cents upward, 5 cents in Minneapolis on startling reports of black-rust damage. Wheat closed at near the top levels, with corn and oats also higher. July wheat last at 89⅞, July corn 83⅞.

Cotton—Early declines were followed by rallies which lifted closings 8 to 15 points above the previous ones. July 11.47.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.20, while the refined closed at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Santos No. 4 final at 8 and Rio No. 7 last at 6¾.

Bar silver—Unchanged in New York at 67¾ cents per ounce. In London last prices were also unchanged, 30 3-16d (67.50 cents).

Treasury to Sell $50,000,000 Bills

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 273 day bills; and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m., Eastern Standard time, on Monday, July 29, 1935.

The bills will be dated July 31, 1935, and will mature on April 29, 1936, and on the maturity date the face amount will be payable without interest.

Scrap Steel Up to $13.

Pittsburgh, July 26 (AP).—Scrap steel prices show further gains in the Pittsburgh market, according to reports to steel trade quarters. Sales of number 1 heavy metal material have been made around $13 a ton, or 50 cents above the recent range.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Hold Firm Tone in Less Active Trading With Utilities Coming Forward—Italian Bonds Recover—Wheat Prices Jump.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 26.—Financial markets could not recover their former activity, but prices strengthened in most sectors. Government bonds were dull but steady and foreign issues improved a bit. Stocks in the smallest dealings of the week, volume falling under the 1,000,000-share mark, did little more than mark time. Grain hardened. September wheat closed 3 cents a bushel higher at 89¼ cents.

In stocks the trading trail wound around a number of quicksand holes and over numerous hard surfaces. Consolidated Gas after sleeping through the advance of the past two weeks came to life in the afternoon and advanced a point or so on active dealings. Some of the other public utility stocks turned a little harder. The dividend meeting on gas, postponed from yesterday, will be held Monday. The market looks for no change at this time in the current $1 yearly rate.

Some profit taking appeared in the steels, but most of them made small gains. Bethlehem, U. S. Steel, Inland, National and Otis picked up a little. Bethlehem reported second quarter earnings under a year ago, but better than in first quarter, and the market is expecting a fairly good report from U. S. Steel to be issued next Tuesday afternoon, but without any change in the usual 50-cent dividend for the preferred. Arrears on Steel preferred now total 12½ per cent and are cumulative.

Baldwin Shares Strong.

Sink holes appeared in California Packing, United Fruit, Cluett Peabody, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Westinghouse Air Brake. Their losses ranged from 1¼ to 2¼ points. On the strong side were Baldwin common and preferred, active and buoyant, the preferred rising more than 4 points; and the preferred issues of Foreign Power, American Power, Certain-teed and Warner Brothers, Westinghouse Eletric, Greyhound, Libbey-Owens and Sharon hardened. Motor shares held around the previous day's closing quotation.

Foreign exchange was steady in spite of further trouble in Holland. Guilders failed to rise on the cue given by the Netherlands Bank, which again lifted its discount rate, this time to 6 per cent, the action being timed with the fall of the cabinet. If the prospect for a new government less intransigeant on the subject of the gold standard and deflation worried the market, enough support was given to avoid the appearance of a flight of capital.

Anyhow, the Netherlands Bank in the last week has lost nearly all the $50,000,000 in gold it regained since the time of quieting the last devaluation scare of several weeks ago. A month ago the discount rate began to climb down from the top of 6 per cent at which it was placed in the first effort to stop the golf efflux. In the past two days the charge has been boosted twice, from 3 to 5 the first time.

On the Italian front the position was judged to have been strengthened by the overtures made for conciliation on the part of the Italians. The latest diplomatic maneuvers indicated that the door was not yet heavily barred against a peaceful settlement of the Abyssinian dispute. At least the market for Italian dollar securities seemed to feel that way about it. They rallied briskly, but their activity failed to rouse other sections of the bond market.

Trade News Reassuring.

Week-end trade news was of no great help in predicting the future, but its general tenor along with foreign developments was somewhat reassuring. Further contraction in currency circulation was shown by the Federal Reserve Bank, a seasonal movement, and the monetary gold stock rose. Shortly money in use should expand, but the peak of excess reserves of the member banks probably has not yet been climbed.

Industrial production in June, the Federal Reserve Board reports, adjusted for seasonal variation, rose from 85 to 86 on the index of measurement. In June of last year the board's index stood at 84. That slowly rising trend seems to have continued into this month, and markets are counting upon the better harvests and brisk automotive business to give a filip to August and September that was lacking a year ago.

Wholesale commodity prices are up only about 1 per cent since the beginning of the year. That element of stability is proving to be beneficial to business, although prices where mostly needed to decline are firm of advancing, namely in foods. Meanwhle the reduction in unemployment is less noticeable, taking account of outdoor work, than is the rise in production. Perhaps as suggested the old code hours are being lengthened here and there.

If so the net result probably is an advantage all around, and in the end greater employment will come as operating costs go down and profits go up. With a high tax rate in view, including excess profits tax, and larger corporation assessments, the danger of a splurge of corporation earnings is indeed remote.

House Passes Bill For Grading Tobacco

Compulsory government grading of tobacco on markets where two-thirds of the growers favor it was approved late Thursday by the House on a voice vote.

Opposition crumbled when supporters of the bill sponsored by Representative Flannagan, Democrat of Virginia, defeated by a 70-to-55 standing vote an amendment to eliminate the compulsory feature even though government grading was wanted by two-thirds of the farmers.

The measure now goes to the Senate. The grading service is designed to prevent speculation in tobacco and unfair manipulation of prices.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Principal foreign currencies remained steady in terms of the dollar today in world exchange dealings, despite the resignation of the cabinet of Premier Colijn in The Netherlands and the raising of the bank rate to 6 per cent at Amsterdam.

The guilder fluctuated uncertainly in New York and was off .07 of a cent at 67.33 cents in the early afternoon. There was general selling of the guilder in London and the unit closed at 7.34¾ guilders to the pound, compared with 7.35½ on Thursday.

The pound sterling was unchanged in New York at $4.96½, while earlier in London the dollar had been about steady at 4.96⅜ to the pound.

The French franc likewise held even in the American market at 6.60¾ cents, while earlier in Paris the dollar had been slightly firmer at the equivalent of 6.607 cents to the franc.

Work and Pay Rolls Taper Off in June

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—The National Industrial Conference Board states that seasonal declines of slightly less than the usual proportions were noted in June in employment, man-hours and pay rolls in the 25 manufacturing industries reporting to it. Employment fell off 0.5 per cent from May to June; total man-hours worked, 1.6 per cent, nad pay rolls, 1.9 per cent.

Reserve Funds At Peak Record

Rise Is Due to Gold From France, Says Federal Board Statement.

By the Associated Press.

An increase of $260,000,000 in gold stocks in June brought member bank reserve balances and excess reserves to the highest levels in the history of the Federal Reserve system.

The Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly bulletin, reported a $150,000,000 increase in reserve balances, which totaled $5,006,000,000 June 29, and said the rise "was entirely due to further large imports of gold"—mostly from France. Excess reserves reached $2,400,000,000 on the same date.

"On February 1, 1934," the board explained, "immediately after revaluation of the dollar, excess reserves of member banks were about $800,000,000 and were largely the consequence of purchases of United States Government securities by the Reserve banks in 1932 and 1933.

"Since that date the increase in the monetary gold stocks of the country from about $7,000,000,000 to $9,100,000,000 on June 19, 1935, has been the principal factor in the growth of $2,260,000,000 in member bank reserve balances. In the same period required reserves increased by $660,000,000, the remaining $1,600,000,000 being added to excess reserves."

The bulletin revealed that four-fifths of the June gold stocks increase came from France when the United States stepped in with American dollars to save the tottering franc late in May.

The board said elimination of national bank notes from circulation is being carried out by a method which will result in a minimum of disturbance to the money market.

Silver a Boomerang, Says Trust Company

New York, July 26.—The silver purchase program of the Government has had effects exactly the opposite of those forecast by its sponsors and may possibly endanger our national currency, the New York Trust Co. declares in commenting on the first year of operation of the plan.

While the program has served little purpose in the United States, its ill effects on China have been so serious that any solution of that country's economic crisis appears difficult, the bank statement says.

Should silver purchases be continued until the reserves amount to one-third the gold reserves, basic danger to the national currency of the United States is foreseen by the bank.

Corporations Reduce Loans From Banks

New York, July 26 (AP).—The American Metal Co., Ltd., it was announced today, has reduced its bank loans from $5,000,000 to $2,750,000. The repayments were made during June.

Sharon Steel Hoop Co., during the first half of this year, paid off $700,000 in notes to banks and called for redemption $90,396 in scrip certificates which were dated February 1, 1933, and were not due until February 1, 1936. The company now has no bank notes or loans.

Retail Grocery Chains Hold Sales Steady

New York, July 26 (AP).—Sales of Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. during the 4 weeks ended July 13 amounted to $17,014,381 compared with $16,792,328 in the same period a year ago, an increase of 1.3 per cent.

Sales of the National Tea Co. during the 4 weeks ended July 13 amounted to $4,588,974 against $4,626,518 in the same period a year ago, a decrease of slightly less than 1 per cent. In the 28 weeks ended the same date, sales aggregated $33,544,367 compared with $32,518,338, an increase of 3.1 per cent.

$293,000 Proposed For Wide Trade Study

The Advisory Committee on Allotments Wednesday recommended to the President allocation of $293,000 to the Bureau of the Census for a proposed national survey of retail trade.

An enumeration would be made of all retail places of business, numbering approximately 280,000 in selected areas comprising 17 large cities and 258 small cities of from 2,500 to 10,000 population.

Manufacturers Trust Trustee for Mo. Pac.

New York, July 26 (AP).—The Manufacturers Trust Co. of New York has announced its appointment as successor corporate trustee under the first and refunding mortgage, dated April 2, 1917, of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co.

The Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, former corporate trustee under this mortgage, has resigned.

Wheat Whirls 4¼c Upward On Blight Peril

Buying Stampede Follows Startling Reports of Damage by Rust.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—In stampede buying that abruptly started late today, the Chicago Wheat Market sky-rocketed 4¼ cents a bushel and Minneapolis 5 cents, the maximum limit allowed.

Startling reports of sensational increase of crop damage to spring wheat, Canadian as well as domestic, accompanied the upward whirl of prices. An outstanding feature was news that a full 100 miles of wheat acreage in Saskatchewan Province, Canada, was practically a total loss from black rust.

Contributing to buying furor was a suggestion from one of the foremost unofficial crop authorities that the August 1 Government estimate of domestic spring wheat production would not exceed 200,000,000 bushels at the outside, whereas the July 1 official forecast indicated 273,000,000.

Wheat in Chicago closed strong near the day's top level, 3 to 3⅞ cents above yesterday's finish, September, 89¼@89½; corn, ¼ to ⅞ up; September, 76⅜@76½; oats, ⅝ to 1¼ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

Corn, oats and rye responded to wheat strength, despite favorable weather for corn growth. Lard scored new seasonal high prices.

Building Demand Expands Plants

Cleveland, July 26 (AP).—George A. Bryant, jr., executive vice president of Austin Company, large industrial builders, asserted today that manufacturing industries are being forced into the market for construction and machinery "in order to meet production requirements for their own goods."

"Proof of this fact," Bryant said, "is to be found in expenditures involving more than $10,000,000 for expansion and modernization of equipment of plants in active building construction. The first half of 1933 yielded 100 per cent more industrial construction than the first six months of 1934, which represented two years of recovery from the low of 1932. The advance bids fair to continue."

Utilities Lead Upturn on Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—A late demand for utilities turned the curb market upward at the close today. Several oil shares and scattered industrials, however, failed to regain early fractional declines. Transfers approximated 201,000 shares compared with 213,000 the day before.

American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share both advanced more than a point each. Fractional improvement was registered by Niagara Hudson Power, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Swift International, Sunshine Mining and Pioneer Gold.

On the negative side of the list, Parker Rust Proof slipped 2 points, while Gulf Oil, Humble and International Petroleum eased.

Foreign Markets.

London, July 26 (AP).—Gilt-edged securities and industrials were supported by investors in a quiet session on the stock exchange today. Home rails eased on disappointing dividend announcemets while gold mining shares and transatlantic issues held steady. The market closed irregular.

Paris.—Trading was inactive throughout the list on the bourse today and rentes declined fractionally. Royal Dutch recovered as a result of the orders from Amsterdam. The market closed dull.

Berlin.—After a dull opening, a few small orders created an upward trend on the boerse today. The closing was irregular.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our Own Guest Columns.

(During the absence of Mr. Phillips, who is on a vacation from a vacation, his column is being done, as is the rage this season, by guest columnists. Today's conductor is Haile Selassie, the Lion of Judah.)

By Haile Selassie.

Addis Ababa.—Well, if anybody had told me two weeks ago that I would have time to be doing a guest column you could have knocked me over with a feather. Which would have been O. K. with the League of Nations. But when my old friend, George Phillips, whose column, "The Ailing House," is known the world over, asked me to step in and substitute for him, who was I to refuse? So here goes:

There are people who do not mind an anaesthetic, but what prominent European ruler is going to have great trouble coming out of the Ethiopia? (This is not very good, but I'm under terrible pressure.)

* * * *

Old Man Mars and the calamity girl are that way again . . . What organization dedicated to protecting the rights of small nations is about ready to be taken over as a Geneva bicycling club? . . . People who look alike—Mussolini and Mussolini.

* * * *

Thoughts while strolling . . . When in Rome, do as the Romans do . . . (But suppose you just don't feel like fighting anybody?) . . . What ever became of the war to end war? . . . Nobody gives better dinner parties than Fannie Hurst and Addis Ababa.

* * * *

* * * *

Some of my warriors are talking of turning lions loose on the enemy . . . The story is true in the "mane." . . . There I go punning again . . . The use of acid to burn my warriors' feet and the use of lions to chew up the foe makes it a battle of "cats" and dogs," so to speak . . . When you speak of Somaliland, remember there is a French Somaliland, a British Somaliland and an Italian Somaliland . . . All God's chillun got Somalilands.

* * * *

It is certainly hot in Ethiopia in the summer . . . But so far as the invader is concerned, it isn't the heat . . . It's the cupidity . . . An Ethiopian tribesman goes to war in white robes . . . My big job is to get a loan to finance the laundry bill . . . Well, as the radio comic says, "So long! Abyssinia."

Epitaph.

Here lies the body of
  Marmaduke Custic McRaft;
While resting from his golf
  He wed to sleep in a draft.
DEE MEADE.

Would you say that these politicians who are digging up new candidates for the Presidency are boom-doggling?

What's become of the old-fashioned girl who was afraid she would freckle or burn?

The corn-on-the-cob season is here again and once more it is hard to tell when a face is just naturally greasy.

A fellow who must feel pretty foolish these days is the man who predicted a few years ago that the world had learned its lesson and would tolerate no more wars.

Justice Luhring Cites Nolan in Alimony Case

Justice Oscar R. Luhring in the District Supreme Court yesterday signed an order requiring William J. Nolan, local automobile dealer, to show cause by August 5 why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for alleged failure to meet an alimony payment due his estranged wife, Mrs. Alice M. Nolan, on July 15.

Nolan recently was ordered to pay his wife $450 a month alimony and also was directed to pay his wife's attorneys a fee of $4,000 for representing her in the divorce suit, which resulted in her being awarded a limited divorce. In addition, Mrs. Nolan was given custody of their two children.

From that order Nolan has appealed to the United States Court of Appeals.

Committee Posts Filled.

Lanier P. McLachlen, chairman of the Board of the Better Business Bureau, yesterday appointed Herbert J. Rich, of B. Rich & Sons, chairman of the membership committee of the bureau.

He also anonunced the appointment of H. T. Bisselle, of the Riggs National Bank, chairman of the publicity committee.

1,000 Nazi Foes Riot in N.Y., Rip Flag From Liner

New Blood Purge Fear Sweeps Berlin in Hitler's Drive.

American Editor Ordered to Leave

No Jews Are Chosen for Olympic Games in Germany.

The German Situation.

Rioting Communists in New York ripped the German flag from the liner Bremen and hurled it into the Hudson River during a pitched battle with police at the pier.

Mayor LaGuardia quoted State Department press releases to support his contention Americans have been discriminated against by Germany.

Fears of another "blood purge" grew in Germany as leaders pressed their drive on "reactionaries."

The German Olympic committee disclosed there were no Jews among the athletes chosen to compete for places on the nation's team.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—More than 1,000 Communist sympathizers and scores of police engaged in a battle around the pier from which the German liner Bremen sailed late tonight after an anti-Nazi demonstration.

Three of the demonstrators gained the bow of the crack liner, ripped the German flag from its pole and threw it into the Hudson River while hundreds cheered on the pier and in the streets below.

A force of 150 patrolmen, 100 detectives and 25 mounted policemen fought to disperse the demonstrators. Two shots were fired in the melee and one man was reported to have been wounded.

Detectives of the alien squad who boarded the ship arrested the three who tore down the flag and the man who had been shot. He was carried away on a stretcher.

The flag incident apparently had been prearranged. It was preceded by lusty singing of the "Internationale" and shouts of "Down with Hitler!"

Banner Restored.

The banner, flung into the current, floated rapidly downstream. Members of the Bremen's crew quickly put out in a small boat, however, retrieved it and restored it to its staff.

Hundreds of automobiles parked around the pier by crowds of visitors who had come to see their friends off furnished hiding places for the demonstrators and all available patrolmen from the four stations nearest the pier, at West Forty-sixth street, were ordered out to disperse them.

The demonstrators were seen to wield no weapons and all the fighting was done with fists.

A squad of policemen and detectives was sent into the third-class compartment of the ship to search all the passengers there and take into custody any suspected Communists.

The Bremen's sailing was only slightly delayed. She got away at 11:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Cites Releases.

Earlier today Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia quoted from five State Department news releases in an effort to refute the department's contention that it had no record of any discrimination against Americans in Germany.

LaGuardia, who has aroused the German Consulate by refusing to grant a masseur's license to a citizen of the Reich, argues that Nazi discrimination against Jewish Americans has invalidated the commercial treaty under which the license was sought.

Commenting on the State Department's disavowal of any record of such discrimination, the mayor said:

"No responsible official of the State Department could have stated that there is no discrimination on the part of the German government toward American citizens."

Jewish organizations meanwhile were applauding the mayor's stand,

ICELAND.

Snob in Her Igloo.

IT was winter night [Rockwell Kent, the illustrator, told the story himself when he returned yesterday on the liner Deutschland after another adventure in the North] when he decided to leave the igloo of Salamina, the Eskimo hostess of himself and son, Donald, 14, for a year. This she had forbidden him to do. A terrific fight ensued in the 11-by-16 hut of ice.

Kent and son.

There was tumbling among Salamina's four children, 3, 7, 9 and 12 years old. It was rough, for the Eskimos are hardy.

Salamina was unaccustomed to having her orders disobeyed. She was an aristocrat of the village of Igdlorssuit, an island with a population of 175 and she ruled her igloo as she did most of the town. She was a fine character [Kent said], but she was a real snob. Worse than some of our best families. She warned me of some persons in town I was not permitted to talk with. She warned me against going out alone at night.

It was on the question of going out at night that the artist clashed with the primitive snob. He started out to take a walk and Salamina ordered him back from the exit of the igloo. He went ahead and she sprang at him. All the furniture in the place was broken, the artist said, and his little finger was smashed.

"I was about to brain her when my American chivalry got the best of me," he said.

He did not say whether he finally went out or not.

"The Eskimos are fine people," he said. "They are unhappy, but they don't know it. I wrote a book about Salamina. My son learned much and developed into a man there. I am glad he picked up some of the character of the Eskimos."

VIGO, SPAIN.

In a Little Spanish Town.

SENORITA ELENA RAMOS BARRO, beautiful and proud, seemed happy when she was reunited with her fiance, Jesus Filloy Godoy. After a quarrel, he called at her home in response to her note. She asked her sweetheart to let her tie him to a nearby tree to see if he could free himself. It was a joke, she said.

Jesus agreed, Elena blindfolded him and tied him to the tree.

Then she cut his throat with a large knife.

Elena told police she planned the murder because her fiance defamed her character.

MOBILE.

Sun Sets in Alabama.

UNCLE CUJO LEWIS—105 years old—America's oldest former slave, died in his cabin on the outskirts of Mobile. Uncle Cujo, son an African chieftain and only survivor of the last slave cargo brought into Mobile in 1859 aboard Schooner Clothilde, died without realizing his fondest desire, to some time visit his native Nigeria. One of the best loved old slaves, Cujo had high degree native intelligence and exhibited remarkable memory. Snatched from the tribe of Dahomeys, he often told of torture and abuse on the trip across the Atlantic. He was once visited by a Baptist missionary who had spent 18 months in Nigeria and they had a long talk in native tribal language.

Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.

LESTER A. WALTON, Minister-designate to Liberia, is planning a musical quest in the African jungle. In the lands where the American slave came from, he said he intends to look for the missing link of musical creation between "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and "The Deep Music of Africa." "I am going to keep my ears open, and I hope I shall have some of our leading Negro musicians to listen with me," he said.

U. S. to Keep Out of Row In Ethiopia

Roosevelt Says America Will Stay Clear of Controversies.

Congressmen Press for Diplomatic Action on Nazi Persecution.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

President Roosevelt announces cardinal principles in this country's peace policy are "good neighbor" attitude and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern America. In the latter category he placed the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

European diplomats made eleventh-hour attempts, apparently without success, to obtain Mussolini's approval of wide economic concessions in Ethiopia, rather than a military victory.

Mahatma Gandhi appealed to his followers to finance a Red Cross unit in Ethiopia.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday declared that the two cardinal principles of this Administration's policy to keep the Nation out of war were maintenance of friendly relations through observance of the "good neighbor" policy and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern the American people.

In reply to a question, the President said the Italo-Ethiopian controversy would fall in the latter class. He also thought preparedness for defense was a third point in the country's keep-out-of-war program, but he regarded this as subordinate to the other two principles.

Mr. Roosevelt did not indicate that this Government would wash its hands of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. His point was that it did not concern this country, aside from general interest in maintaining world peace and except for personal feelings of some Americans regarding the controversy. The latter, however, could not be controlled by Government decrees, he said.

No Policy Change.

The President's qualification of his answer that this Nation was not concerned with the plight of Ethiopia, aside from our general interest in world peace, was taken to indicate there would be no change of policy in regard to the threatened Italo-Ethiopian war. That policy has been to deprecate resort to hostilities and to support every step toward a pacific solution of the dispute without involving this country.

Shortly before the President spoke, pressure was brought on Capitol Hill and at the State Department to have this Government take steps to discourage Adolph Hitler's Germany from further persecution of religious groups—actions which might well come under the President's ban of becoming involved in controversies which do not concern this country.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, introduced a resolution in the Senate calling for an investigation of German discrimination against Jews and Catholics. King would have the Senate Foreign Relations Committee conduct the inquiry and would direct that

Banks Show Deposit Gain; Relief Wanes

Reserve Board Joins in Optimism; 6.6% Cut in Needy Listed.

D. C. Leads Nation in Drop in Aid, Hopkins Report Shows.

Bank failures have practically ceased, banks have recovered a large part of the deposits lost in the early stages of the depression, and the number of families on relief declined 6.6 per cent from May to June.

The Federal Reserve Board's July bulletin disclosed that deposits in the 24,630 operating banks in the country declined from the peak of $55,289,000,000 on December 31, 1929, to a low of $37,998,000,000 on June 30, 1933, a decrease of $17,291,000,000. However, by December 31, 1934, deposits had climbed again to $44,771,000,000, a gain of $6,773,000,000, although the number of banks had fallen to 16,042.

Along with the recovery in bank deposits, the Reserve Board reported a virtual cessation of bank failures. In the first six months of this year only 16 banks, with combined deposits of $3,299,000, closed their doors, as compared with 56 banks having deposits of $36,944,000 in 1934, and several thousand banks with several billion dollars of deposits in 1932.

Relief Burden Cut.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, reported the decline in the number of families on relief. He said 4,100,932 families were depending on the Government aid in May and 3,830,871 in June. Expenditures declined 9.8 per cent, from $188,323,706 in May to $169,840,125 in June.

The percentages of decline in the District of Columbia were even greater than the average for the country. The number of families on relief here dropped from 13,159 to 11,941, or 9.3 per cent, and the expenditures fell off from $932,353 to $785,444, a percentage of 15.8.

Another announcement by Hopkins was on the appointment of four technical assistants to direct formulation of white-collar projects in four major arts, music, the theater, writing and painting.

Directors Named.

Nikolai Sokoloff, of Connecticut, was appointed to direct music projects; Holger Cahill, of New York, to direct art projects; Hallie Flanagan, of Vassar College, to direct theater projects, and Henry G. Alsberg, of Washington, to direct projects for writers.

Sokolai won fame as a conductor of major symphony orchestras in Cleveland, San Francisco, Cincinnati and New York.

Cahill has contributed extensively to the literature on American art. He was on the staff of the Newark Museum under the late John Cotton Dana, and later organized numerous exhibitions, including the Exhibition of American Painting and Sculpture from 1865 to 1932, which brought Whistler's "Portrait of Artist's Mother" to America.

Hallie Flanagan, in private life the wife of Prof. Philip H. Davis, of Vassar, for nine years has been professor of English and director of the Experimental Theater at Vassar.

Dillinger Nemesis, 151 Others Face Deportation From U. S.

A wholesale deportation order, one of the greatest in the country's history, was approved yesterday by President Roosevelt to rid the Nation of 151 counterfeiters, narcotics offenders, postal law violators and other criminals, all aliens.

At the same time it was learned that Mrs. Anna Sage, the "woman in red," who is said to have "put the finger" on John Dillinger, also is scheduled for deportation. Now living in Chicago, she will be sent back to her native Rumania next month, Labor Department officials said.

Only one woman, Bessie Murray, is among the 151 who will be released from Federal prisons and sent back to the countries whence they came. A native of Ireland, she is serving a term in Alderson penitentiary for violation of the postal laws.

Twenty-seven countries in Europe, Asia and South America are represented on the list of deportees. Italy supplied 62 prisoners. There are 16 Chinese, all of whom were sentenced under the anti-narcotics laws.

Criminal aliens from Canada and Mexico, contiguous countries, were not included in the roundup, the Department of Justice explained, because past experience has proved it is not difficult for them to slip back inside the United States.

The surprise move by the Government was attributed to economy reasons. Length of sentences, prison records and offenses of every alien confined in a Federal prison were studied by Attorney General Cummings' office before the selection was made.

Recommendations submitted to President Roosevelt for riddance of the 151 were authorized by the recent statutes which state that any alien is subject to deportation who violates the narcotic laws, commits a felony within the first five years after entry or commits two felonies over any period of time.

The conflict of Mrs. Sage, the "woman in red," with the immigration laws hinges on her arrest in East Chicago, Ind., on a charge of operating a disorderly house. Officials are said to have given her one month to settle her affairs. The Bureau of Investigation has refused consistently to confirm reports that it was she who pointed out Dillinger so he could be shot down by Federal agents.

Narcotic offenders account for 64 of the 151 names. Fifty are convicted counterfeiters and the remaining 37 were sentenced on charges ranging from auto theft across State lines to murder. Their sentences, which will be terminated by deportation, run from a year and a day to life. There is only one murderer, an Englishman, in Alcatraz Prison.

With Italy leading the list of countries represented in what is expected to be the first of a series of deportations, the other homelands rate as follows:

China, 16; Poland, 9; Greece and England, 8 each; Austria, Ireland and Germany, 6 each; Jugoslavia and Spain, 3 each; Lithuania, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, Japan, Bulgaria, Scotland and India, 2 each, and Chile, Norway, Albania, Syria, Holland, Colombia, Portugal, Brazil, Estonia and France, 1 each.

The criminal aliens will be removed from the following Federal penitentiaries:

Glass Scores Sweeping Victory As Senate Passes Banking Bill

Associated Press and Harris & Ewing Photos.

Indignant words were used in hearings and conferences in the Capitol yesterday. Left to right, Frank E. Speicher, who, before the House military hearing, said Joseph Silverman, Army surplus supplies dealer, told him he had the Assistant Secretary of War's office "in the palm of his hand;" Representative Patton, who, before the Senate Lobby Committee, admitted buying $3,000 bonds in a period his salary totaled $3,100, and Representative Huddleston and Senator Wheeler, who called each other names in conference on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Central Bank Proposal Sponsored by Nye Beaten 59 to 10.

Routed Liberals Turn to Conferees

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's banking bill, minus central bank features and without a single liberalizing amendment, yesterday was approved by the Senate by a resounding voice vote, following three days of brisk debate.

The measure was sent to conference, where Administration forces will make a last stand to strengthen Federal Reserve Board credit powers, and recoup losses suffered at the hands of Senator Glass, of Virginia.

The 77-year-old former Secretary of the Treasury and veteran of 32 years in Congress won one of the most sweeping victories of his career, in the final draft of the measure, despite "concessions—concessions even of convictions."

In the end no Senator demanded a record vote. Glass, a bit weary and hoarse from continuous debate, shuffled slowly from his seat to receive the congratulations of colleagues—friends and foes alike of the banking bill.

Priest's Plan Swamped.

Of less than a dozen amendments, only three were pressed to a Senate vote, and all of these were overwhelmingly defeated.

Shortly after the Senate met yesterday, Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, called for a test on Father Charles E. Coughlin's Government-owned central bank proposals. On a roll call vote, the substitute was beaten, 59 to 10.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive, met a similar fate in moving to eliminate authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues. His amendment was voted down, 39 to 22.

A day earlier, Senator Louis Murphy (Democrat), of Iowa, had failed by a voice vote to scrap a section of Title ', which requires State banks with deposits of $1,000,000 and more to join the Federal Reserve system by July 1, 1937, or lose their deposit insurance.

In the parade to passage, a number of amendments were offered for the record, and never pressed to a vote. Among these were two amendments advanced by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, authorizing the Government to buy all stock in the 12 regional Reserve banks, and the Goldsborough "commodity dollar" proposal, favored by the Committee for the Nation.

LaFollette Quits Fight.

LaFollette likewise failed to press amendments that would have denied Federal Reserve banks voting representation on the open market committee, and stricken the section permitting a director of a Federal Reserve member bank to be a director also of not more than one other bank.

LaFollette charged there was "a virtual gentleman's agreement, which makes it impossible for senators to vote their convictions."

"I have just learned that I cannot get a real test of strength," he asserted. "Many who agree with me would vote against me. The reason is that there has been a long controversy in the committee, and these senators do not want to jeopardize the bill in further protracted argument."

The Wisconsin Progressive, however, insisted upon an "aye" and "no" vote on his amendment to strike out authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues.

He declared that this authority was one of the chief factors in bringing on the 1929 market crash.

Opposing the LaFollette amendment, Glass recalled that he had condemned conditions that made the rigid restrictions in the banking act of 1933 necessary; that he had deplored the flooding of the country with worthless foreign securities, and had denounced the State Department for approving such flotations.

"But it was represented to the committee by responsible persons that the consumptive goods industries had declined only 5 per cent during the depression," he said.

Utility Conferees in Deadlock; Bid to Swing Army Deal Told

O'Connor Warns New Deal Lobbyists to Keep Away.

By James D. Secrest.

Senators and Representatives very nearly came to blows yesterday in one of the bitterest rows of the session, further tightening the deadlock on the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill, as the Senate lobby committee pressed Representative Patton (Democrat), of Texas, to explain how he bought $3,000 worth of Government bonds when he had drawn only $3,100 in salary.

Statements flew thick and fast during the afternoon as Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, made another attempt to regain the spotlight for the House lobby inquiry by issuing a statement which in effect warned Administration lobbyists to stay clear of the House lobby and cloakrooms.

Senate and House conferees were agreed on only one thing, that they had reached an impasse which probably can be settled only by taking the bill back to both chambers for a vote on the "death clause" or for appointment of new conferees.

Cohen Is Issue.

The point at issue between the Senators and Representatives was not the death sentence, however, but the question of whether Benjamin Cohen, Administration legislative aid, should be permitted to participate in the conference. Dozier A. DeVane, solicitor of the Federal Power Commission, whose presence was also opposed on Wednesday, did not appear yesterday.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, was the focal point of the conference row, first clashing with Representative Cooper (Republican), of Ohio, and then with Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama.

He is reported to have threatened to invade Cooper's district during the next campaign in an effort to defeat him. To this the Ohioan replied: "I told him to come ahead. I would welcome it."

With Huddleston the argument became more personal after Wheeler had insinuated that the Alabaman was playing into the hands of the public utilities. Huddleston is reported to have retorted with an attack in which the epithet "fourflusher" was used.

Senate, House Divided.

The conference broke up after the Senate conferees voted unanimously to insist on Cohen remaining, while the House managers voted 3 to 2 to refuse to participate in the conference so long as he was present. Only Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, voted with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, to accept the Senators' ultimatum.

"The position of Mr. Holmes, Mr. Cooper and myself, constituting a majority of the House conferees, is that under all circumstances it would be manifestly improper for a representative of the executive branch to be present during our confidential deliberations," Huddleston said subsequently in a formal statement.

"We hold that it is fundamental to our system of government that the legislative branch should be permitted to function without influence from the executive branch * * *

"As servants of the House we are charged with the responsibility of upholding its dignity and prestige. This can not be done with a representative of the Administration sit-

New Yorker Says Silverman Planned to Split $10,000,000 Order.

By the Associated Press.

The purported inside story of a plan to split a $10,000,000 Army motor car order between Chrysler and Chevrolet was related yesterday to the House Military Committee.

It was told by Frank Speicher, New York dealer in inner tubes. He said that back of the plan was Joseph Silverman, jr., who at one time conducted a huge business in excess Army supplies.

For a 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman sought to arrange with Norman K. Haig, General Motors Co. official, to set up a General Motors agency in Washington to which, through his alleged influence with the War Department, Silverman was to swing the truck and automobile contract.

Federal agents hunted Speicher for months last year as a witness in the inquiry, now being continued by the committee.

Yesterday he told the committee that Silverman claimed to have influence with the War Department because Ralph O'Neal, past national commander of the American Legion, "the closest man to Woodring in the United States," was on the Silverman pay roll. Harry W. Woodring is Assistant Secretary of War.

Silverman claimed, too, Speicher asserted, that he had been able to obtain inclusion in the specifications for the motor equipment—mostly for the CCC—of a provision which would have blocked Chevrolet bids.

But for the 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman proposed to Haig that he, Silverman, could have the provision eliminated and divide the contract between Chrysler and Chevrolet.

Speicher said he was interested in seeing Chevrolet obtain Army orders so that Haig would give him inner tube business.

Despite the fact that Silverman offered both Haig and himself a 2½ per cent cut, Speicher said, he warned Haig he might get in trouble with Silverman because he had learned the 7½ per cent commis-

President Cool To Complaints Of Steel Trade

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated that he believes the complaint of domestic steel manufacturers against a PWA order which would give them a 15 per cent preferential over foreign competitors is unjustified.

Through Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the domestic industry complained not against the preferential granted to them, but because it was not much greater. Indeed, Grace indicated he did not think that foreign steel makers should be permitted to compete at all on PWA or other Government projects under the $4,000,000,000 works fund, since the latter was designed to help American employment.

The President pointed out that under previous administrations the domestic steel industry had enacted tariff rates which they wanted and which it was contended would equalize the difference between production at home and abroad.

Is General Rule.

The PWA had in effect added 15 per cent to these tariff rates to aid the domestic industry, he said, by providing that unless the bid of a foreign manufacturer was at least 15 per cent less than a domestic bidder it should be disregarded. He said that this had been adopted as a general rule in making Government purchases.

The rule recently was set aside, the President said, in the case of a purchase of airplane cloth. In that case the bid of a Japanese manufacturer, he explained, was exactly one-half of the bid of the only American concern engaged in the business. Although it meant the Government would pay twice as much as necessary, it was decided to accept the American bid on the ground that airplane cloth is an

Rare Disease Akin to Burning Is Fatal to Dr. Rufus Choate

The death that Dr. Rufus Choate felt laying hold of his outer body a month ago entered the inner man at 3 p. m. yesterday.

Late last month Dr. Choate called a reporter to his bedside. He said he had a "death statement" to make. He told of a strange skin disease; a malady that was slowly breaking down outer tissues, turning his body brown, giving it the appearance of a severe case of burning. The reporter quoted Dr. Choate as saying:

"I have been on a bed of white-hot coals for six days. I am being skinned alive, but life is stronger than death and will win out, and I shall have made a discovery beyond anything ever imagined by man before."

Dr. A. E. Craig, of 1330 Thirtieth street northwest, who attended Dr. Choate in his last illness, gave his patient a chance to live, providing the phenomenal strength of the inside body was able to overcome the ravaging disease without. But Dr. Choate was almost 89 years old.

Dr. Choate began the practice of medicine as an Army surgeon during the Indian campaigns and for 45 years afterward prescribed for ailing Washingtonians in his home at 1401 Thirty-third street northwest, where he died and where he maintained one of the city's largest practices until the skin disease sent him to his bed of fire about six weeks ago.

Strangely, almost as if fate were pointing a finger at the last weeks of his life, Dr. Choate nine years ago gained considerable prominence as the discoverer of the "12 tissue remedies," blood tonics to be taken by the patient for each month of the year. Members of his family recalled that he had worked on the remedy 50 years before perfecting it to his satisfaction.

"The battleground between the opposing foes—life and death—lies between the skin and the internal organs," Dr. Choate was quoted in his "death statement."

"Life is stronger than death in the human body, because death must enter from the outside, while

1,000 Nazi Foes Riot in N.Y., Rip Flag From Liner

New Blood Purge Fear Sweeps Berlin in Hitler's Drive.

American Editor Ordered to Leave

No Jews Are Chosen for Olympic Games in Germany.

The German Situation.

Rioting Communists in New York ripped the German flag from the liner Bremen and hurled it into the Hudson River during a pitched battle with police at the pier.

Mayor LaGuardia quoted State Department press releases to support his contention Americans have been discriminated against by Germany.

Fears of another "blood purge" grew in Germany as leaders pressed their drive on "reactionaries."

The German Olympic committee disclosed there were no Jews among the athletes chosen to compete for places on the nation's team.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—More than 1,000 Communist sympathizers and scores of police engaged in a battle around the pier from which the German liner Bremen sailed late tonight after an anti-Nazi demonstration.

Three of the demonstrators gained the bow of the crack liner, ripped the German flag from its pole and threw it into the Hudson River while hundreds cheered on the pier and in the streets below.

A force of 150 patrolmen, 100 detectives and 25 mounted policemen fought to disperse the demonstrators. Two shots were fired in the melee and one man was reported to have been wounded.

Detectives of the alien squad who boarded the ship arrested the three who tore down the flag and the man who had been shot. He was carried away on a stretcher.

The flag incident apparently had been prearranged. It was preceded by lusty singing of the "Internationale" and shouts of "Down with Hitler!"

Banner Restored.

The banner, flung into the current, floated rapidly downstream. Members of the Bremen's crew quickly put out in a small boat, however, retrieved it and restored it to its staff.

Hundreds of automobiles parked around the pier by crowds of visitors who had come to see their friends off furnished hiding places for the demonstrators and all available patrolmen from the four stations nearest the pier, at West Forty-sixth street, were ordered out to disperse them.

The demonstrators were seen to wield no weapons and all the fighting was done with fists.

A squad of policemen and detectives was sent into the third-class compartment of the ship to search all the passengers there and take into custody any suspected Communists.

The Bremen's sailing was only slightly delayed. She got away at 11:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Cites Releases.

Earlier today Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia quoted from five State Department news releases in an effort to refute the department's contention that it had no record of any discrimination against Americans in Germany.

LaGuardia, who has aroused the German Consulate by refusing to grant a masseur's license to a citizen of the Reich, argues that Nazi discrimination against Jewish Americans has invalidated the commercial treaty under which the license was sought.

Commenting on the State Department's disavowal of any record of such discrimination, the mayor said: "No responsible official of the State Department could have stated that there is no discrimination on the part of the German government toward American citizens."

Jewish organizations meanwhile were applauding the mayor's stand,

It was winter night [Rockwell Kent, the illustrator, told the story himself when he returned yesterday on the liner Deutschland after another adventure in the North] when he decided to leave the igloo of Salamina, the Eskimo hostess of himself and son, Donald, 14, for a year. This she had forbidden him to do. A terrific fight ensued in the 11-by-16 hut of ice.

There was tumbling among Salamina's four children, 3, 7, 9 and 12 years old. It was rough, for the Eskimos are hardy.

Salamina was unaccustomed to having her orders disobeyed. She was an aristocrat of the village of Igdlorssuit, an island with a population of 175 and she ruled her igloo as she did most of the town. She was a fine character [Kent said], but she was a real snob. Worse than some of our best families. She warned me of some persons in town I was not permitted to talk with. She warned me against going out alone at night.

It was on the question of going out at night that the artist clashed with the primitive snob. He started out to take a walk and Salamina ordered him back from the exit of the igloo. He went ahead and she sprang at him. All the furniture in the place was broken, the artist said, and his little finger was smashed.

"I was about to brain her when my American chivalry got the best of me," he said.

He did not say whether he finally went out or not.

"The Eskimos are fine people," he said. "They are unhappy, but they don't know it. I wrote a book about Salamina. My son learned much and developed into a man there. I am glad he picked up some of the character of the Eskimos."

Roosevelt Says America Will Stay Clear of Controversies.

Congressmen Press for Diplomatic Action on Nazi Persecution.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

President Roosevelt announces cardinal principles in this country's peace policy are "good neighbor" attitude and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern America. In the latter category he placed the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

European diplomats made eleventh-hour attempts, apparently without success, to obtain Mussolini's approval of wide economic concessions in Ethiopia, rather than a military victory.

Mahatma Gandhi appealed to his followers to finance a Red Cross unit in Ethiopia.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday declared that the two cardinal principles of this Administration's policy to keep the Nation out of war were maintenance of friendly relations through observance of the "good neighbor" policy and keeping out of specific controversies that do not concern the American people.

In reply to a question, the President said the Italo-Ethiopian controversy would fall in the latter class. He also thought preparedness for defense was a third point in the country's keep-out-of-war program, but he regarded this as subordinate to the other two principles.

Mr. Roosevelt did not indicate that this Government would wash its hands of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. His point was that it did not concern this country, aside from general interest in maintaining world peace and except for personal feelings of some Americans regarding the controversy. The latter, however, could not be controlled by Government decrees, he said.

No Policy Change.

The President's qualification of his answer that this Nation was not concerned with the plight of Ethiopia, aside from our general interest in world peace, was taken to indicate there would be no change of policy in regard to the threatened Italo-Ethiopian war. That policy has been to deprecate resort to hostilities and to support every step toward a pacific solution of the dispute without involving this country.

Shortly before the President spoke, pressure was brought on Capitol Hill and at the State Department to have this Government take steps to discourage Adolph Hitler's Germany from further persecution of religious groups—actions which might well come under the President's ban of becoming involved in controversies which do not concern this country.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, introduced a resolution in the Senate calling for an investigation of German discrimination against Jews and Catholics. King would have the Senate Foreign Relations Committee conduct the inquiry and would direct that

Reserve Board Joins in Optimism; 6.6% Cut in Needy Listed.

D. C. Leads Nation in Drop in Aid, Hopkins Report Shows.

Bank failures have practically ceased, banks have recovered a large part of the deposits lost in the early stages of the depression, and the number of families on relief declined 6.6 per cent from May to June.

The Federal Reserve Board's July bulletin disclosed that deposits in the 24,630 operating banks in the country declined from the peak of $55,289,000,000 on December 31, 1929, to a low of $37,998,000,000 on June 30, 1933, a decrease of $17,291,000,000. However, by December 31, 1934, deposits had climbed again to $44,771,000,000, a gain of $6,773,000,000, although the number of banks had fallen to 16,042.

Along with the recovery in bank deposits, the Reserve Board reported a virtual cessation of bank failures. In the first six months of this year only 16 banks, with combined deposits of $3,299,000, closed their doors, as compared with 56 banks having deposits of $36,944,000 in 1934 and several thousand banks with several billion dollars of deposits in 1932.

Relief Burden Cut.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, reported the decline in the number of families on relief. He said 4,100,932 families were depending on the Government aid in May and 3,830,871 in June. Expenditures declined 9.8 per cent, from $188,323,706 in May to $169,840,125 in June.

The percentages of decline in the District of Columbia were even greater than the average for the country. The number of families on relief here dropped from 13,159 to 11,941, or 9.3 per cent, and the expenditures fell off from $932,353 to $785,444, a percentage of 15.8.

Another announcement by Hopkins was on the appointment of four technical assistants to direct formulation of white-collar projects in four major arts, music, the theater, writing and painting.

Directors Named.

Nikolai Sokoloff, of Connecticut, was appointed to direct music projects; Holger Cahill, of New York, to direct art projects; Hallie Flanagan, of Vassar College, to direct theater projects, and Henry G. Alsberg, of Washington, to direct projects for writers.

Sokolai won fame as a conductor of major symphony orchestras in Cleveland, San Francisco, Cincinnati and New York.

Cahill has contributed extensively to the literature on American art. He was on the staff of the Newark Museum under the late John Cotton Dana, and later organized numerous exhibitions, including the Exhibition of American Painting and Sculpture from 1865 to 1932, which brought Whistler's "Portrait of Artist's Mother" to America.

Hallie Flanagan, in private life the wife of Prof. Philip H. Davis, of Vassar, for nine years has been professor of English and director of the Experimental Theater at Vassar.

Dillinger Nemesis, 151 Others Face Deportation From U. S.

A wholesale deportation order, one of the greatest in the country's history, was approved yesterday by President Roosevelt to rid the Nation of 151 counterfeiters, narcotics offenders, postal law violators and other criminals, all aliens.

At the same time it was learned that Mrs. Anna Sage, the "woman in red," who is said to have "put the finger" on John Dillinger, also is scheduled for deportation. Now living in Chicago, she will be sent back to her native Rumania next month, Labor Department officials said.

Only one woman, Bessie Murray, is among the 151 who will be released from Federal prisons and sent back to the countries whence they came. A native of Ireland, she is serving a term in Alderson penitentiary for violation of the postal laws.

Twenty-seven countries in Europe, Asia and South America are represented on the list of deportees. Italy supplied 62 prisoners. There are 16 Chinese, all of whom were sentenced under the anti-narcotics laws.

Criminal aliens from Canada and Mexico, contiguous countries, were not included in the roundup, the Department of Justice explained, because past experience has proved it is not difficult for them to slip back inside the United States.

The surprise move by the Government was attributed to economy reasons. Length of sentences, prison records and offenses of every alien confined in a Federal prison were studied by Attorney General Cummings' office before the selection was made.

Recommendations submitted to President Roosevelt for riddance of the 151 were authorized by the recent statutes which state that any alien is subject to deportation who violates the narcotic laws, commits a felony within the first five years after entry or commits two felonies over any period of time.

The conflict of Mrs. Sage, the "woman in red," with the immigration laws hinges on her arrest in East Chicago, Ind., on a charge of operating a disorderly house. Officials are said to have given her one month to settle her affairs. The Bureau of Investigation has refused consistently to confirm reports that it was she who pointed out Dillinger so he could be shot down by Federal agents.

Narcotic offenders account for 64 of the 151 names. Fifty are convicted counterfeiters and the remaining 37 were sentenced on charges ranging from auto theft across State lines to murder. Their sentences, which will be terminated by deportation, run from a year and a day to life. There is only one murderer, an Englishman, in Alcatraz Prison.

With Italy leading the list of countries represented in what is expected to be the first of a series of deportations, the other homelands rate as follows:

China, 16; Poland, 9; Greece and England, 8 each; Austria, Ireland and Germany, 6 each; Jugoslavia and Spain, 3 each; Lithuania, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, Japan, Bulgaria, Scotland and India, 2 each, and Chile, Norway, Albania, Syria, Holland, Colombia, Portugal, Brazil, Estonia and France, 1 each.

The criminal aliens will be removed from the following Federal penitentiaries:

Glass Scores Sweeping Victory As Senate Passes Banking Bill

Central Bank Proposal Sponsored by Nye Beaten 59 to 10.

Routed Liberals Turn to Conferees

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's banking bill, minus central bank features and without a single liberalizing amendment, yesterday was approved by the Senate by a resounding voice vote, following three days of brisk debate.

The measure was sent to conference, where Administration forces will make a last stand to strengthen Federal Reserve Board credit powers, and recoup losses suffered at the hands of Senator Glass, of Virginia.

The 77-year-old former Secretary of the Treasury and veteran of 32 years in Congress won one of the most sweeping victories of his career, in the final draft of the measure, despite "concessions—concessions even of convictions."

In the end no Senator demanded a record vote. Glass, a bit weary and hoarse from continuous debate, shuffled slowly from his seat to receive the congratulations of colleagues—friends and foes alike of the banking bill.

Priest's Plan Swamped.

Of less than a dozen amendments, only three were pressed to a Senate vote, and all of these were overwhelmingly defeated.

Shortly after the Senate met yesterday, Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, called for a test on Father Charles E. Coughlin's Government-owned central bank proposals. On a roll call vote, the substitute was beaten, 59 to 10.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin Progressive, met a similar fate in moving to eliminate authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues. His amendment was voted down, 39 to 22.

A day earlier, Senator Louis Murphy (Democrat), of Iowa, had failed by a voice vote to scrap a section of Title *, which requires State banks with deposits of $1,000,000 and more to join the Federal Reserve system by July 1, 1937, or lose their deposit insurance.

In the parade to passage, a number of amendments were offered for the record, and never pressed to a vote. Among these were two amendments advanced by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, authorizing the Government to buy all stock in the 12 regional Reserve banks, and the Goldsborough "commodity dollar" proposal, favored by the Committee for the Nation.

LaFollette Quits Fight.

LaFollette likewise failed to press amendments that would have denied Federal Reserve banks voting representation on the open market committee, and stricken the section permitting a director of a Federal Reserve member bank to be a director also of not more than one other bank.

LaFollette charged there was "a virtual gentleman's agreement, which makes it impossible for senators to vote their convictions."

"I have just learned that I cannot get a real test of strength," he asserted. "Many who agree with me would vote against me. The reason is that there has been a long controversy in the committee, and these senators do not want to jeopardize the bill in further protracted argument."

The Wisconsin Progressive, however, insisted upon an "aye" and "no" vote on his amendment to strike out authority for commercial banks to underwrite security issues.

He declared that this authority was one of the chief factors in bringing on the 1929 market crash.

Opposing the LaFollette amendment, Glass recalled that he had condemned conditions that made the rigid restrictions in the banking act of 1933 necessary; that he had deplored the flooding of the country with worthless foreign securities, and had denounced the State Department for approving such flotations.

"But it was represented to the committee by responsible persons that the consumptive goods industries had declined only 5 per cent during the depression," he said,

Associated Press and Harris & Ewing Photos.

Indignant words were used in hearings and conferences in the Capitol yesterday. Left to right, Frank E. Speicher, who, before the House military hearing, said Joseph Silverman, Army surplus supplies dealer, told him he had the Assistant Secretary of War's office "in the palm of his hand;" Representative Patton, who, before the Senate Lobby Committee, admitted buying $3,000 bonds in a period his salary totaled $3,100, and Representative Huddleston and Senator Wheeler, who called each other names in conference on the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Utility Conferees in Deadlock; Bid to Swing Army Deal Told

O'Connor Warns New Deal Lobbyists to Keep Away.

By James D. Secrest.

Senators and Representatives very nearly came to blows yesterday in one of the bitterest rows of the session, further tightening the deadlock on the Wheeler-Rayburn utility bill, as the Senate lobby committee pressed Representative Patton (Democrat), of Texas, to explain how he bought $3,000 worth of Government bonds when he had drawn only $3,100 in salary.

Statements flew thick and fast during the afternoon as Chairman O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, made another attempt to regain the spotlight for the House lobby inquiry by issuing a statement which in effect warned Administration lobbyists to stay clear of the House lobby and cloakrooms.

Senate and House conferees were agreed on only one thing, that they had reached an impasse which probably can be settled only by taking the bill back to both chambers for a vote on the "death clause" or for appointment of new conferees.

Cohen Is Issue.

The point at issue between the Senators and Representatives was not the death sentence, however, but the question of whether Benjamin Cohen, Administration legislative aid, should be permitted to participate in the conference. Dozier A. DeVane, solicitor of the Federal Power Commission, whose presence was also opposed on Wednesday, did not appear yesterday.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, was the focal point of the conference row, first clashing with Representative Cooper (Republican), of Ohio, and then with Representative Huddleston (Democrat), of Alabama.

He is reported to have threatened to invade Cooper's district during the next campaign in an effort to defeat him. To this the Ohioan replied: "I told him to come ahead. I would welcome it."

With Huddleston the argument became more personal after Wheeler had insinuated that the Alabaman was playing into the hands of the public utilities. Huddleston is reported to have retorted with an attack in which the epithet "fourflusher" was used.

Senate, House Divided.

The conference broke up after the Senate conferees voted unanimously to insist on Cohen remaining, while the House managers voted 3 to 2 to refuse to participate in the conference so long as he was present. Only Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, voted with Chairman Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, to accept the Senators' ultimatum.

"The position of Mr. Holmes, Mr. Cooper and myself, constituting a majority of the House conferees, is that under all circumstances it would be manifestly improper for a representative of the executive branch to be present during our confidential deliberations," Huddleston said subsequently in a formal statement.

"We hold that it is fundamental to our system of government that the legislative branch should be permitted to function without influence from the executive branch * * *

"As servants of the House we are charged with the responsibility of upholding its dignity and prestige. This can not be done with a representative of the Administration sit-

New Yorker Says Silverman Planned to Split $10,000,000 Order.

By the Associated Press.

The purported inside story of a plan to split a $10,000,000 Army motor car order between Chrysler and Chevrolet was related yesterday to the House Military Committee.

It was told by Frank Speicher, New York dealer in inner tubes. He said that back of the plan was Joseph Silverman, jr., who at one time conducted a huge business in excess Army supplies.

For a 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman sought to arrange with Norman K. Haig, General Motors Co. official, to set up a General Motors agency in Washington to which, through his alleged influence with the War Department, Silverman was to swing the truck and automobile contract.

Federal agents hunted Speicher for months last year as a witness in the inquiry, now being continued by the committee.

Yesterday he told the committee that Silverman claimed to have influence with the War Department because Ralph O'Neal, past national commander of the American Legion, "the closest man to Woodring in the United States," was on the Silverman pay roll. Harry W. Woodring is Assistant Secretary of War.

Silverman claimed, too, Speicher asserted, that he had been able to obtain inclusion in the specifications for the motor equipment—mostly for the CCC—of a provision which would have blocked Chevrolet bids.

But for the 7½ per cent commission, Speicher said, Silverman proposed to Haig that he, Silverman, could have the provision eliminated and divide the contract between Chrysler and Chevrolet.

Speicher said he was interested in seeing Chevrolet obtain Army orders so that Haig would give him inner tube business.

Despite the fact that Silverman offered both Haig and himself a 2½ per cent cut, Speicher said, he warned Haig he might get in trouble with Silverman because he had learned the 7½ per cent commis-

President Cool To Complaints Of Steel Trade

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated that he believes the complaint of domestic steel manufacturers against a PWA order which would give them a 15 per cent preferential over foreign competitors is unjustified.

Through Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the domestic industry complained not against the preferential granted to them, but because it was not much greater. Indeed, Grace indicated he did not think that foreign steel makers should be permitted to compete at all on PWA or other Government projects under the $4,000,000,000 works fund, since the latter was designed to help American employment.

The President pointed out that under previous administrations the domestic steel industry had enacted tariff rates which they wanted and which it was contended would equalize the difference between production at home and abroad.

Is General Rule.

The PWA had in effect added 15 per cent to these tariff rates to aid the domestic industry, he said, by providing that unless the bid of a foreign manufacturer was at least 15 per cent less than a domestic bidder it should be disregarded. He said that this had been adopted as a general rule in making Government purchases.

The rule recently was set aside, the President said, in the case of a purchase of airplane cloth. In that case the bid of a Japanese manufacturer, he explained, was exactly one-half of the bid of the only American concern engaged in the business. Although it meant the Government would pay twice as much as necessary, it was decided to accept the American bid on the ground that airplane cloth is an

The death that Dr. Rufus Choate felt laying hold of his outer body a month ago entered the inner man at 3 p. m. yesterday.

Late last month Dr. Choate called a reporter to his bedside. He said he had a "death statement" to make. He told of a strange skin disease; a malady that was slowly breaking down outer tissues, turning his body brown, giving it the appearance of a severe case of burning. The reporter quoted Dr. Choate as saying:

"I have been on a bed of white-hot coals for six days. I am being skinned alive, but life is stronger than death and will win out, and I shall have made a discovery beyond anything ever imagined by man before."

Dr. A. E. Craig, of 1330 Thirtieth street northwest, who attended Dr. Choate in his last illness, gave his patient a chance to live, providing the phenomenal strength of the inside body was able to overcome the ravaging disease without. But Dr. Choate was almost 80 years old.

Dr. Choate began the practice of medicine as an Army surgeon during the Indian campaigns and for 45 years afterward prescribed for ailing Washingtonians in his home at 1401 Thirty-third street northwest, where he died and where he maintained one of the city's largest practices until the skin disease sent him to his bed of fire about six weeks ago.

Strangely, almost as if fate were pointing a finger at the last weeks of his life, Dr. Choate nine years ago gained considerable prominence as the discoverer of the "12 tissue remedies," blood tonics to be taken by the patient for each month of the year. Members of his family recalled that he had worked on the remedy 50 years before perfecting it to his satisfaction.

"The battleground between the opposing foes—life and death—lies between the skin and the internal organs," Dr. Choate was quoted in his "death statement."

"Life is stronger than death in the human body, because death must enter from the outside, while

'Public Interest' To Rule Silver, Says Roosevelt

Noncommittal Observation Purchase Plans Given Bloc Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

A noncommittal observation that "public interest" will dictate administration of the silver purchase act was President Roosevelt's reply yesterday to the Senate silver bloc.

His views on obtaining "our common objective of a wider monetary use of silver" were outlined politely but firmly in a letter to 46 Senators who had asked him to pursue the acts' goal "enthusiastically."

Some Senators hold the Treasury should buy silver until its price reaches $1.29 an ounce or enough is purchased to pile up one-third as much monetary silver as gold. Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, estimated that only the half-way mark of the $3,000,000,000 purchase goal has been attained.

The text of the President's letter, made public by Thomas follows:

"There has just come to me your joint statement dated June 20 on the general subject of silver, and I am glad to have the benefit of your observations and suggestions on this subject. As evidence of the broad objectives, I need only to refer to my message on silver to the Congress on May 22, 1934, which is but one of numerous statements I have made on the desirability of a wider monetary use of silver.

"I was glad to have that message supplemented by statements made on my behalf to the Senate to the effect that, if the silver purchase act were passed, it would be carried out vigorously and in good faith. The administration of this act has been and, of course, will be characterized by this spirit and purpose.

"When we come to such particulars as the amount and price of day-to-day purchases of silver and the issuance of silver certificates in excess of the cost of the silver, their determination is a duty which the Congress, by the provisions of the silver purchase act, has laid upon the Secretary of the Treasury.

"I know, from my frequent conferences with him on the administration of this act, surcharged with such great possibilities for our national welfare and the advantage of the world, that that duty has been, and will be, discharged in the manner most advantageous to the public interest, as the act itself enjoys, and in pursuit of our common objective of a wider monetary use of silver."

essential article of national defense and that its manufacture in this country should be encouraged.

The President said he did not think any foreign-made steel was being used on PWA projects. One of the correspondents at his press conference, however, contended that large quatities of foreign cement had been used in erecting Government buildings here.

The foreign cement, he insisted, was brought over as ship ballast and sold much under the price of the domestic product. When questioned by the President, he was unable to say how much foreign cement was used or its proportion to the domestic output.

PWA officials explained there were two statutes controlling Government contract awards. One required that the lowest and best bid be accepted. The other that domestic materials should be given preference except where unfeasible or against the public interest.

In reconciling these two provisions, the PWA prescribed that on purchases of $100 foreign competitors and products be ruled out. On orders up to $10,000 it was provided that domestic bidders should be favored unless the foreign bid was not at least 25 per cent under the lowest domestic bid. On orders above $10,000 foreign bids were outlawed unless at least 15 per cent under the lowest domestic bid.

Pilot Not Able to Jump, Dies in Bomber's Crash

The pilot, Second Lieut. Franklin Shroyer, had dropped ten bombs when his powerful pursuit plane went into a spin at an altitude of 1,500 feet. The field's ambulance crew found his mangled body in the wreckage of the plane with the pilot's partially opened parachute, indicating, officers said, he had attempted to leave the falling craft.

Between You and Me

Domestic Lobbies Hastening Adjournment; Coughlin Brain Child Born on Wall Street.

By Raymond Clapper

FORCES more powerful than the public is aware of are driving Congress into a stampede for adjournment.

Quite understandably, people forget that Senators and Representatives are human beings. A number of legislators are summer bachelors who have let the used dishes pile up to capacity in the sink. For these, it is either wash the dishes now or adjourn Congress. Then there is the other group whose devoted wives and daughters have stood by. They are being nagged to hurry up with those silly old bills and get out of Washington.

This war of attrition in 500 congressional households is having its effect. In two days, the Senate finishes off what was to have been the great battle of the session. Senator Carter Glass and Governor Eccles, the midget contenders, had trained down for a finish fight. It went just one round when Glass won by a technical knockout. The debate that was to have taken weeks wore out before the second day was half over. Even the great Borah was almost inarticulate. Fighting Bob La Follette and Elmer Thomas surprised the Senate by a strategic retreat and did not insist on their amendments. Senator Nye, with Father Coughlin's central bank amendment, rallied only 10 feeble votes. After that the bill rolled through without even a final roll-call.

True, there remains a hard-fought conference to go through with the House and Senate widely apart. But when members finally begin to stampede, conferees can work with surprising speed.

The House is going into high gear on taxes. Drafting experts will have a bill in shape over the week-end, and it probably will be through the House before the end of the month. There are even hints that the Guffey coal bill, which has been stuck in the House sub-committee, will be dehorned and hustled out in relatively harmless form. They are talking about striking out the whole section of the bill which would authorize expenditure of $300,000,000 to buy up poor coal lands and make a Government reserve out of them.

The utilities bill is stalled in a curious quarrel in the conference committee. Senator Wheeler is insisting upon having in the conference committee room Benjamin V. Cohen, of PWA, who drafted a good deal of the language. Some House members object. They have walked out indignantly two days in succession. Any morning soon Mr. Cohen is likely to be detained downtown by a pressing engagement and the conferees will wade through the bill.

Father Coughlin's mighty influence turned out to consist of ten Senate votes when his central bank amendment, offered by Senator Nye, came to the showdown. Nye was supported by Gore, of Oklahoma; Caraway, of Arkansas; Holt and Neely, of West Virginia; Thomas, of Oklahoma; Wheeler, of Montana; Frazier, of North Dakota; Schall and Shipstead, of Minnesota.

And the curious thing is that the last time the central bank idea was up in the Senate it was towed in by Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, the most eminent reactionary of his day. The original idea was Wall street's. It was 20 years getting out to Main street.

The Administration is considerably put out with the steel people. They came to Washington to protest against the PWA rule that steel would be purchased from foreign buyers who bid more than 15 per cent below domestic offers.

The steel men said that steel imports have more than doubled this year over last year, in effect depriving 3,900 American workmen of full-time employment. In the first five months of this year, 73,836 tons of semifinished steel were imported. The figures sound frightful until it is explained that domestic ingot production for the first six months of this year was 16,024,691 tons.

The Administration's answer is that the steel industry not only has a fat tariff obtained in previous administrations, but, in addition, this Administration has given it a 15 per cent additional margin of protection. That is, if a foreign company, after jumping over the tariff wall, still bids 10 per cent or 14 per cent or even 15 per cent under the American firm, it does not get the business. It only gets the order if it can bid 16 per cent or more below our own producers.

The steel people want a still greater differential. The Administration thinks they have a nerve to ask that and privately feels that the steel industry ought to shake down its prices a little. Officials still remember what they regard as a holdup in steel rail prices when the Government was advancing money to the railroads to buy rails in the hope of stimulating the heavy industries.

The row is over a German company which has a trick process by which it can produce steel piling dirt cheap.

Department of Justice G-men have become so famous in fiction and movie that we are in danger of having a whole alphabetical series of "deteckative" heroes inflicted upon us, so many Government departments having their own private chekas. We will have the Interior I-men, the Treasury T-men, the Labor Department L-men, in addition to the President's own Etc.-men like Tom Corcoran and Ben Cohen and the other mysterious rubber-heel messengers of truth and light who operate around Congress.

J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men boast that they have solved practically all outstanding kidnaping cases, but they haven't been able to find out where the label G-men came from or who started it. They don't use it around the Department of Justice.

Next to the longest Senate day within memory of the oldest inhabitant came to an end last night when the Senate adjourned the legislative day which began May 13. The longest previous legislative day occurred during consideration of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, lasting from April 20 to August 3. The only reason the Senate adjourned then instead of continuing overnight recesses was that some member died.

One disgraceful thing about this long legislative day is that the Senate has not had an opening prayer since May 13. After an overnight recess, the Senate goes to work without benefit of clergy. For a while the Senate chaplain, the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, appeared in the chamber at noon as usual, but, not being allowed to deliver a prayer, he finally grew discouraged and went to Cape Cod. It will serve the Senate right if he doesn't come back to pray for it any more this summer.

life already is there. There is nothing wrong with my body. My strength is at its best for my age and my heart is pumping away as it did when I was on my feet, joshing my patients about their ailments."

At this point he gripped his interviewer's hand, causing pain, and further displayed his strength by asking the reporter to attempt to twist his hand, which he was unable to do.

"If death were touching me inside, could my strength hold up and my heart be practically normal after such exertion?" Dr. Choate was quoted as asking.

"I have been living with death at my fingertips for 68 years and I am able to recognize it when I see it, and I tell you now that I have no disease. It is merely that death has laid siege to me, and that life is so strong within me that death is being stayed on my outer body."

Born Here in 1847.

Dr. Choate was born in Washington January 31, 1847, the grandson of Solomon Drew, who came to the city from England in 1818. He was a cousin of the late Joseph H. Choate, one-time ambassador to Great Britain, and of Joseph H. Choate, jr., Federal Alcoholic Control Administrator, son of the ambassador.

Among his closest friends were the late John Joy Edson and Mrs. Edson, who were frequent guests at the Choate home. The hostess at these gatherings, Mrs. Ellen Olivia Choate, preceded her husband in death by exactly four months. She died March 26.

Dr. Choate entered the Army as an assistant surgeon in 1870. Two years later he was awarded a War Department citation for unusual bravery in tending the wounds of casualties on the battlefield. Most of his ten years Army service were spent in the Indian campaigns.

Though an extensive practice required most of his time, Dr. Choate found opportunities for writing books on death, life, mathematical fractions, skin tissues and mythology, some of which were privately published.

The Choates had no children. Dr. Choate's immediate survivors are two nieces, Mrs. Katherine Talbott and Elizabeth Choate, of Rockville, where he set up an office for a few years immediately after leaving the Army, and a nephew, Conrad Choate, of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m., Monday, in the Choate home. Burial will be in Rockville Cemetery.

FERA Worker Admits Attempt to Kill Son

Colorado Springs, Col., July 26 (U.P.)—John Hull, 31-year-old FERA worker, today was hurried to the State penitentiary at Canon City for safekeeping, after he had confessed an attempt to murder his son, Corwin, 11, to collect a $1,000 insurance policy on the boy's life.

Hull was arrested at the bedside of his son, near death in a local hospital. Earlier the father told police the youth was beaten by hold-up men who assertedly robbed the elder Hull of $2 on the street.

O'Neill Resigns As NRA Head For N. Y. Post

President to Name His Successor Within Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

James L. O'Neill, the pleasant, intense New York businessman, who has headed the new NRA for two months, has resigned.

His resignation as acting chairman, effective July 31, was accepted yesterday by President Roosevelt, who said his successor would be named Monday or Tuesday.

"I talked with my New York office this morning," O'Neill said, "and was asked when I was leaving here. I told them I would get in New York next Thursday.

"'Well,' I was told, 'why don't you take Thursday and Friday off and come to work Saturday?' So that will be my vacation."

Old Job Beckons.

O'Neill will return to his old place as active vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. He has been with that organization for 17 years.

He predicted that the man who will replace him as head the NRA probably will be some one now in the organization.

O'Neill declined to discuss for publication his views of what would be the outgrowth of NRA. From other officials, however, came the view that the organization probably would be welded into the Federal Trade Commission through legislation at the next session of Congress.

"Anybody who expects to see new legislation setting up a separate agency to replace NRA is foolish," one official said. "I think we will see most of the practical functions of NRA and many of its employes transferred to the Trade Commission, which should have one or two additional members."

Many Detached.

Already quite a few NRA division heads and legal experts have been assigned to work with the Trade Commission. They are still on the NRA pay roll but are temporarily detached from that agency. President Roosevelt said at his press conference he had given no thought to additional legislation to give the commission greater authority over helping establish voluntary code agreements.

O'Neill, a Republican, said that the time he had spent in Washington had given him a wholesome respect for members of Congress and the manner in which they tackled the problems before them.

"You take the average business executive and sit him down with the amazingly complicated list of problems that falls to the lot of the Congressman and he would throw up his hands and go home," O'Neill said.

Quiz Told of Plan To Swing Army Deal

sion was to be added to the regular price of the cars for the Army.

Speicher said he refused then to become involved, explaining:

"I was not dumb enough to get in a conspiracy like that to hook the Government."

Speicher said he stayed away from Washington during the grand jury inquiry last year in order not to embarrass Col. Alexander Williams, former assistant quartermaster general, to whom he had made loans of $2,500 and $2,000. Williams recently was ordered dismissed from the Army for accepting the money.

At one time Williams told Haig "if he wanted the business to go along with Silverman," Speicher said.

The witness said Silverman suggested to Haig that "I will put you on the pay roll the same as all these Army officers down here."

Later, Speicher asserted, Silverman offered to make Haig the "biggest man in the United States" by arranging for Chevrolet to underbid the Ford company $1 per unit on 2,300 trucks and cars for the Agricultural Department.

All one evening at the Mayflower Hotel, Speicher declared, Silverman ran back and forth between the rooms of Haig and a representative of the Chrysler company trying to arrange for a way to divide up this business.

Finally Silverman gave up, he said, with an assertion that the award would go to the Ford company and would be announced at the "Little White House" at Warm Springs, Ga., where President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace were at the time. The award went through as promised, Speicher said.

The name of Frederick H. Payne, former assistant Secretary of War, was brought into the investigation.

Speicher testified flatly that Payne, in his hotel room here, told Haig he knew Silverman, had dealt with him a long time and that Haig had "better put him on the pay roll as he could do a lot of good for you."

Utility Plot to Oust Him Charged by Governor

Oklathoma City, July 26 (U.P.)—Gov. E. W. Marland said he had learned of a "plot" by utilities and oil companies to have him impeached. Marland took office six months ago.

He said America faces the question, "Do you want the people to govern themselves or the utilities to govern them?"

Marland formerly was an oil millionaire.

The impeachment movement started even before he was inaugurated, Marland told a meeting of State Democratic women leaders.

"Men gathered in hotels of this city whispered about impeaching me before I was inaugurated. This continued all through the legislative session. Lobbyists for utilities and oil men would carry it on in their hotel rooms at night with the boy legislators."

Marland said he would "drag this thing out into the open."

Senate Passes Glass Measure On Bank Credit

"while the heavy goods industries were declining 55 per cent. When we wrote the complete prohibition in 1933 it was with the avowed hope and expectation that these underwriting houses would supply the required capital for the heavy goods industries. We were disappointed in that expectation. No underwriting houses were organized, and there was a paucity of capital available."

Glass insisted the underwriting section was "hedged around" with safeguards to prevent recurrence of evils preceding the 1933 banking act. Referring to the bill, he pointed out that no bank under its terms may underwrite more than 20 per cent of any one security issue, or in an amount more than $100,000, whichever is the larger. The aggregate of underwriting is limited to twice the bank's capital and surplus, with the Comptroller of the Currency empowered to prescribe regulations.

Opposed By Roosevelt.

Although President Roosevelt was known to be opposed to the underwriting feature, 29 Democrats voted with 10 Republicans to defeat the La Follette amendment, while 13 Democrats, 7 Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite, voted "aye."

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, entered the debate to inquire what "safeguards" were provided against repetition of the 1929 crash.

"I do not profess to say that safeguards have not been written into the bill," he observed, "but I do say that I do not find them sufficient to avoid some of the catastrophes which we have encountered in the past."

Pointing out that there was evidence of trouble long before the 1929 panic, he said nothing was done by the board or regional banks to stop the movement.

Glass retorted that the banks and the board were not the only offenders.

"I stood here on the floor of the Senate two years before the crash came and warned the country that the crash would come, and two Presidents of the United States practically jumped into the stock pit and urged it on," added the Virginian.

Safeguards Described.

Glass cited safeguards against speculation in the 1933 banking act, and pointed out that under the pending bill, in the event any bank engages in excessive speculation, either the Reserve bank of the district or, ultimately, the Federal Reserve Board may put a stop to it.

Borah said he had no controversy with Glass. He conceded that the 1933 banking act provided remedies, but reiterated that in the period leading up to 1929 "most of the board and the bank sat silent and watched this saturnalia of speculation gather strength until it finally resulted in the utter ruin of millions of people, driving thousands to crime and to suicide."

"We are giving stupendous power here," he warned, insisting that adequate safeguards are essential to avoid abuse of currency and credit controls concentrated in a few hands.

At another point the Idahoan declared "this move to meet the situation going on in 1927, '28 and '29 had its beginning in conferences with the representatives of the central banks from foreign nations."

He said: "Our policy initiated in 1927 had its inspiration not in the protection of American industry, but * * *to protect the financial interests not alone in this country but in Europe. I do not know that might not occur again under similar conditions and in a similar state of facts."

Glass replied:

"It can not occur under the terms of existing law or under the terms of the bill, without the assent of the Federal Reserve Board, because in the act of 1933 we denied the right of any governor of a Federal Reserve bank to negotiate with a foreign banker without the express permisson of the Federal Reserve Board."

La Follette, in withdrawing his amendment to centralize Federal Reserve Board control over open-market operations, virtually admitted he was doing so to strengthen its chances in conference.

Ten Voting Yes.

"Through a vote at this time, conferees might get a false view," he said.

But the Wisconsin liberal contended that ultimately there must be complete control of credit and monetary policies by the Government.

"The banker has the wrong view at the wrong time," he shouted. "In the boom period, bankers were in the same frame of mind as the rest of the country. They believed the law of gravity had been suspended."

Senator Nye was the sole speaker in favor of his substitute for a Government owned and operated central bank. Its defeat was conceded from the outset and there was so little interest that no one even offered to speak against it.

When the roll call on the Nye proposal was tallied, 41 Democrats, 17 Republicans and 1 Progressive were recorded against it.

Following passage of the bill, Vice President Garner named as Senate conferees Glass, Fletcher, Bulkley and McAdoo (Democrats), and Norbeck and Townsend (Republicans).

With some hope of success, the Administration will make a conference attempt to alter the Senate bill's open market committee set-up, which constitutes seven members of the Federal Reserve Board and five representatives of the Reserve banks, in control of open-market operations.

Bank Law Changes Proposed

Following are a few of the 150 changes in existing bank laws ordered in the bill which yesterday passed the Senate, compared with the measure which passed the House.

Changes name of Federal Reserve Board to Board of Governors of Federal Reserve system. Board would comprise seven members, instead of six as now constituted, with members, appointed by President, serving 14 years at $15,000 a year. Not more than four could be of same political faith. Secretary of Treasury and Comptroller of Currency removed as ex-officio members. President would designate chairman and vice chairman to serve for four years. House bill retains present personnel.

Reconstitutes open-market committee, which influences credit flow by purchase and sale of Government bonds by Reserve banks on open market. Committee would comprise seven members of Federal Reserve Board and five representatives of Reserve banks. Policy would be mandatory on the banks. House bill gives Federal Reserve Board complete voting control of open-market operations, although five bank representatives would serve in advisory capacity.

Speculation Regulations.

Statutory requirements governing maintenance of reserves against deposits by member banks, as a check on use of funds for speculation, could be changed only by vote of five of seven board members. Reserve requirements could be doubled, but not decreased. House bill permits change in reserve requirements, without minimum or maximum.

Reserve banks could propose changes in rediscount rates, subject to approval by board. Rates would have to be announced at least every two weeks. Board would retain power to approve, disapprove, or change the rates proposed. House bill gives board full authority to initiate rates, with operation mandatory.

Titles Are Changed.

Hereafter head of each Federal Reserve bank would be designated "president" instead of "governor." Each bank would have a president and vice president, to be appointed for five-year terms by the bank's board of directors, with approval of Board of Governors of Federal Reserve System. House bill combined offices of chairman of board and governor of banks and provided for annual appointments.

Authorizes real estate loans by national banks not to exceed 50 per cent of appraised real estate value and limited to five years. If loan is secured by an amortized mortgage, providing for 50 per cent retirement in 10 years, loan may be made up to 60 per cent of appraised value over 10-year term. House bill left regulations to Federal Reserve Board, permitting loans up to 60 per cent of appraised value.

Prohibitions against underwriting of securities by commercial banks would be relaxed. Under regulation by Comptroller of Currency, banks could underwrite up to 20 per cent of any one issue, or $100,000, whichever is greater. For any one issue, would be limited to 10 per cent of bank's capital and surplus. Aggregate of all bank's underwriting engagements, limited to twice bank's capital and surplus. House bill retains existing ban on underwriting.

Insurance Established.

Makes permanent the present temporary law fully insuring bank deposits up to $5,000. Annual assessment of one-twelfth of bank's total deposits authorized. Assessments would continue until fund reached $500,000,000. When the fund was impaired by 15 per cent, assessments would be resumed again. House bill provided assessments of one-eighth of 1 per cent.

Under Senate bill, all State banks organized after bill becomes law would have to join the Federal Reserve System by July 1, 1937, in order to get deposits insured. All State banks now in operation with deposits of $1,000,000 or more would have to meet this requirement in order to remain insured. House bill carries no Reserve membership requirements.

Director, officer or employe of a Reserve member bank prohibited from being private banker or from serving in similar capacity in more than one other bank. House bill flatly bars interlocking directorships.

Philippine Post Likely to Open For MacArthur

He May Become Military Adviser to Insular Government.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the Army, will go to the Philippine Islands as military adviser to the new island government, according to a report here yesterday.

His appointment is said to hinge on the election of his old friend, Manuel Quezon to the presidency. Observers in Manila report that Quezon's election now is assured.

President Roosevelt smiled broadly yesterday at his press conference when asked about the rumor. He added it was his understanding that the Philippines want Gen. MacArthur but that reporters should talk with the general about the appointment.

MacArthur has refused to comment. It is understood that he will make no decision until the new government is set up and the other chief appointments made.

If Gen. MacArthur goes to the Philippines it will be his third tour of service there. Following his graduation from West Point in 1903 he was stationed on Guimaras Island with the Corps of Engineers.

From October, 1922 to January, 1924, he served there again, commanding the district of Manila, the Twenty-third Infantry Brigade and the Philippine Division. His tour of duty as chief of staff of the Army expired last November, but at the request of Secretary Dern it was extended. There has been no announcement concerning its termination.

Should Gen. MacArthur go to the Philippines it would not be necessary for him to retire from the Army, although he is eligible, having completed more than 30 years active duty.

Under a recent act of Congress officers may be assigned to duty with the Commonwealth government. If MacArthur stays on active duty in the Army he still has eight more years before he must quit for age.

Inflation Bill Dead, House Chiefs Say

By the Associated Press.

House Administration leaders passed the word around yesterday that the inflationary Frazier-Lemke bill to refinance farm mortgages with $3,000,000,000 in new money "is dead for this session."

They based this prediction on the fact that they had made new progress in their campaign to remove signatures from a petition to force a House vote on the measure. The total stood at only 203 signers, 13 short of the 216 signatures needed to force the bill out of the Rules Committee.

That was a loss of half a dozen signers this week alone, and at one time there were 210 names on the petition. Party leaders got busy about that time and, while denying they were working on instructions from President Roosevelt, brought the strongest pressure against Democrats to scratch their names.

Fight Foreseen On House Floor Over Tax Bill

Corporation Charity Gift Exemption Source of Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

A major congressional scrap was forecast yesterday with the disclosure that Democratic drafters of the President's tax bill had agreed to retain the law which makes corporations pay taxes on gifts to charities.

President Roosevelt openly opposed any change. Charitable organizations insisted that unless corporations were allowed some sort of deductions for charitable donations the amount of gifts would drop off.

There has been considerable discussion of the question among House Ways and Means Committee Democrats, now busily at work putting Roosevelt tax ideas into bill form. It was reported that earlier in the week an agreement was reached to let a corporation deduct up to 5 per cent of its income for gifts to charities.

Then came the President's statement, followed by authoritative word yesterday that committee Democrats would not include an exemption feature in their bill.

Scores of members, however, continued to receive dozens of letters from individuals and charitable organizations urging the change. Consequently it was forecast that if the bill emerged from the committee without deductions attempts will be made to change it on the floor.

Under present law, a corporation may deduct from its income only the gifts which it can prove were necessary to its business. A recent Supreme Court decision narrowed the classification of such gifts.

At the same time, the Ways and Means Committee Democrats continued their work with administrative features of the bill. Already they have decided tentatively upon new taxes for inheritances and gifts in addition to those which already exist on estates and gifts; upon graduated corporation taxes ranging from 13¼ to 14¼ per cent, with the dividing line being $15,000 income; upon excess corporation profit levies of 5 to 20 per cent of all profits over 8 per cent; and upon increases boosting top individual surtax income rates from 59 to 75 per cent.

One detail reported accepted yesterday applied to life insurance. It was that up to $50,000 of life insurance left to a wife or husband, son, daughter, parent, grandparent, adopted child, and grandchild would be exempt from taxes. Only $10,000 left to others not so closely related would be exempt.

The same exemptions apply to other inheritances and to gifts.

The dispute over the financial aspects of the bill meanwhile continued. Republicans contended it would raise an "insignificant" amount compared with present expenditures. Some conservative Democrats expressed approval of the rates, but many liberals insisted they were too low.

Bankruptcy Quiz To Be Nation-Wide

Sabath Announces Itinerary; Sees Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

A country-wide investigation of bankruptcy proceedings was announced yesterday by Chairman Sabath (Democrat), Illinois, of the House Special Investigating Committee after a talk with President Roosevelt.

Sabath called at the White House to confer with the President on legislation to protect bondholders and said Mr. Roosevelt favored some action.

The chairman said that when Congress adjourns the committee will proceed to New York and thence to Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Cleveland, St. Louis, Newark, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle and Southern cities.

He described conditions in Philadelphia as "rotten." He predicted indictments in Chicago.

Macon Disaster Is Laid to Navy By De Forest

Reinforcements at Vital Point Denied, Investigator Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, July 26.—A statement by Prof. A. W. De Forest that the Navy was responsible for the crash of the dirigible Macon last February brought a variety of reactions tonight from officials attending a forum here on lighter-than-air craft.

Prof. De Forest, attending the conference, which is sponsored by the Daniel Guggenheim Airship Institute, made the statement today in an interview. He is a member of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology faculty. He served on an eight-man commission which investigated the crash.

His Best Friends.

Dr. Karl Arnstein, vice president of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, builder of the Macon, named by Prof. De Forest as "having begged the Navy to allow him to strengthen the dirigible while it was under construction," said:

"Don't, for heaven's sake, run down the Navy. Navy men are my best friends."

De Forest said that "the Navy's refusal to permit reinforcements of the Macon's ship structure at the vital point it gave way was responsible for the crash." He refused to amplify his statement.

Bradley Jones, professor of aerodynamics at the University of Cincinnati, said:

"There has been too much of this Hush! Hush! policy all along. Goodyear officials have been afraid to talk because the Navy is its best customer."

Report Is Cited.

Navy officials in Washington declined comment on De Forest's statement, but pointed to an official report signed by Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin and approved by Secretary Swanson.

The report was the verdict of the court of inquiry appointed to investigate the disaster. The report said some requested repairs had not been carried out when the ship crashed, but officials at the time said these were of a minor nature.

Norris Charges 'Power Trust' With Trickery

Says Falsehood Was Used to Hamper Tennessee Valley Enterprise.

By the Associated Press.

Charges that "falsehood and trickery" had been employed by the "power trust" to hamper the Tennessee Valley power enterprise yesterday thundered in the Senate.

They were voiced by the veteran public power advocate, Norris (Republican), Nebraska, and came as Senate-House coneferees made ready to resume ironing out points of dispute between House and Senate drafts of TVA legislation.

Norris told the Senate new evidence had been disclosed which "smeared" the "power trust" with "falsehood and trickery."

"Little by little the truth comes out," cried the Nebraskan, who is one of the Senate conferees on the TVA bill.

He reviewed evidence in the Birmingham case in which Federal Judge Grubbs enjoined the authority from selling power in competition with private business. As attorney for the power companies against TVA, Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, was declared by Norris to have elicited from a witness testimony that preferred stockholders in some coal companies paid the costs of the suit.

Norris then read from a press dispatch quoting Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Edison Electric Institute, as saying that organization had paid $50,000 to Johnston's law firm in connection with a test case in which a circuit court recently overruled Judge Grubb's decision.

"Deceit," said Norris, adding that Johnston had $50,000 in "power trust money in his pocket" while he was drawing from a witness testimony that others had borne the cost.

The power of TVA to finance municipalities in setting up distributing systems to use the Authority's electricity, was one of the hurdles Senate and House conferees had to leap to reach an agreement on the TVA bill.

The main other point in controversy was whether the TVA should have $50,000,000 bonding authority as approved by the House, or the $100,000,000 authority sanctioned in the Senate bill.

Ickes and West Act To Dispel Rumors

Express Mutual Esteem; Call In Reporters.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes and Charles West, the Undersecretary of the Interior, yesterday expressed their mutual admiration.

Calling in reporters after they had picked out an office and furniture for President Roosevelt's Capitol Hill contact man, they sought to dispel published reports that West's appointment indicates a decline in Ickes' prestige. Instead it was intimated that an active post was required for West after adjournment of Congress.

There was no denial, however, of other reports that West may not have been Ickes' first choice for the post. The Interior Secretary said yesterday that he had asked only one question, "are you conservation-minded, Mr. West?" before the appointment was made. And West declared he didn't know "anything particular" about specific Interior Department activities.

Hugh G. Grant Is Named Minister to Albania

By the Associated Press.

Hugh G. Grant, of Alabama, was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday as Minister to Albania.

Grant is a former secretary to Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, and has been serving in the State Department for the past two years.

Union to Delay Soft Coal Strike Till September

Roosevelt Successful in Plea for Extension of Wage Scale.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday pushed back the date of the much-threatened soft-coal strike to September 16.

The United Mine Workers and Appalachian producers agreed to extend the present wage scale when the Executive wrote them that "certainly by that time the situation will be clarified and you will be in a better position to resume your negotiations."

Without mentioning the Guffey bill by name, the President's letter said "the prospects for constructive legislation are so substantial that I am writing to ask you to again extend the present contracts for a further period up to September 16."

The Appalachian joint wage conference had been deadlocked in its attempt to write a new wage-and-hour contract to succeed the extension of the 1934-35 agreement expiring August 1.

The miners asked a 30-hour work week and pay increases averaging 10 per cent. The operators offered to extend the present wage scale and 35-hour week until next April 1, but many of them were dubious of the industry's ability to pay even present wages with coal prices tumbling.

Solution Seen.

One large group of producers and the miners see a solution in enactment of the Guffey coal stabilization bill, now before a Ways and Means sub-committee. This bill would set up a "little NRA" for the bituminous industry, and permit the operators to fix prices that would cover the wages the miners demand.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, said that the "uncertainty should be ended before September 16" in a statement to reporters after he had accepted the White House proposal.

If there were "nothing ahead for the mine workers" at that time but a "bitter fight for their existence," he added, the fight "may as well come on September 16 as at any other time."

Lewis said that Congress should act on the Guffey bill "at an early date in the public interest—favorably if it will, unfavorably if it must."

Another large group of operators, however, opposed the measure on the ground that it was unconstitutional, that it would make coal prices so high the industry would suffer through loss of markets to competitive fuels, and that the industry would be put in a Government "strait-jacket."

Extension Fought.

Five leading Southern producers, representative of the anti-Guffey bill group, urged Secretary Perkins yesterday morning to work against another extension of the old wage scale. They said they were willing to pay present wages at least until April 1, but that constant strike threats had "disrupted the coal markets."

These operators maintain that John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers, is using strike threats to club Congress into enacting the Guffey bill.

Immediately after her talk with the operators, however, Miss Perkins went to the White House and conferred with the President on the coal situation for nearly an hour. The letter to the joint wage conference followed.

Cameraman Lost in Sinking Of Film Barge

Coast Guard Seeks Body of Glenn Strong in Sea off San Miguel.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., July 26.—Rough seas near primitive San Miguel Island were searched today for the body of Glenn Strong, film cameraman who lost his life when a movie barge sank with $50,000 in film equipment aboard.

Heavy swells swamped the 80-foot barge, valued at $15,000, as it and other craft were returning to the picture expedition's base on the island, 50 miles southwest of here.

The craft had been fitted up to resemble the British warship Pandoro which figures in the story of "Mutiny on the Bounty," the picture being filmed.

Only meager information about the accident was received. Whether any one besides Strong was aboard the barge, and rescued, was not known. He was said to be the only person missing when the barge sank late yesterday.

Search for his body was undertaken by a Coast Guard cutter. Salvage equipment was dispatched to the island in the hope of saving some of the valuable film equipment which sank.

The company of about 75 persons which went to San Miguel Island included Stanley Fields, screen "heavy," Donald Crisp, director and actor, and Eddie Quillan, comedian.

It also included about 30 athletes from Santa Barbara State College playing as extras in the ship scenes. Stars of the picture, Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone, were not with the San Miguel company.

Most of the players, technicians and others afloat for scenes were believed to have been aboard the tug retriever and two water taxis, while Strong remained aboard the barge to care for his equipment.

Fake Narcotic Agents Get Turfmans' $20,000

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—George W. Leeds, of New York, wealthy racing stable operator, reported to police of suburban Arlington Heights that four men posing as Federal narcotics inspectors today bound and gagged him and robbed him of $15,000 in jewelry and $5,000 in cash.

Leeds, who has several horses running at Arlington Park, said the men took four platinum rings set with diamonds, one set with a large ruby, a platinum watch set with diamonds and rubies, valued at $5,000, and various other articles.

He said the men gained admission to the home where he is residing during the Arlington season, bound and gagged him and Mrs. William Neuman, wife of the owner of the house, and ransacked his personal effects. The money taken, he said, was in bills of $50 denomination.

Whisky Barrel Makers Charge Glass Monopoly

Senators Told Treasury Rules Give Advantage to Bottled Liquor.

By the Associated Press.

Keg makers charged yesterday that Treasury liquor regulations had given an "absolute monopoly" to the glass bottle industry.

Criticism by cooperage representatives at a Senate committee hearing on the Federal alcohol control bill also brought a denial that Dr. James M. Doran, former commissioner of industrial alcohol, had been "bought" by distillers.

Doran was defended by Joseph H. Choate, jr., chairman of the old FACA, outlawed by the Supreme Court's NRA decision, who said the bill just passed by the House was acceptable except for provisions permitting sale of liquor in kegs to hotels and clubs, and placing administration in the Treasury Department.

Choate listened silently while A. Sidney Johnson, of St. Louis, representing Associated Cooperage Industries of America, charged that Treasury regulations favoring use of bottles as liquor containers "constitute an absolute monopoly to the glass bottle industry."

Then F. P. Hankerson, also of St. Louis, secretary of the national legislative committee of the tight cooperage industry, discussed regulations he said Dr. Doran had sponsored, and which he said benefited such large whisky makers as National Distillers, and the Owens-Illinois Glass Co.

Observing that Dr. Doran had left Federal employment to head Distillers' Institute, Hankerson said "it would be interesting to know how many distillers are members of the institute."

"I object to the insinuation that the distillers bought Dr. Doran out because he was useful," interrupted Choate, swinging up to the committee table to confront the witness.

"I only stated facts," said Hankerson. "I made no insinuations."

Choate testified that the keg sale section of the new bill would "destroy" Treasury efforts at controlling bootlegging. Hankerson said "not one iota" of evidence could be produced to show bootlegging in barrels was easier than in bottles.

Lindbergh Visits His Boyhood Home

By the Associated Press.

Little Falls, Minn., July 26.—Turning aside from business cares to return to his boyhood home, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here late today accompanied by his wife.

Col. Lindbergh, on a business trip across the country, flew here from Davenport, Iowa, landing at the Camp Ripley Airport about 5 p. m.

Brought into town immediately, "Lindy" went first to the store of M. A. Engstrom, close friend of the flier's father, the late Representative Charles A. Lindbergh.

Expressing a desire to visit his childhood home, which is the central point of interest in a State park of 99 acres near here, the colonel and his wife motored to the house and spent considerable time in a tour of the building.

Mellon, Bishop Cannon Embark for Europe

New York, July 26 (AP).—Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, were among the passengers who sailed for Europe on the Berengaria today.

They boarded the ship shortly before sailing time, Mellon taking the suite once occupied by the Prince of Wales and Bishop Cannon being installed in an inside tourist cabin.

Neither the financier nor the clergyman was on the passenger list and neither would discuss his plans. Bishop Cannon was carried aboard in an invalid-chair.

Conferee Row On Utility Bill Brings Impasse

ting in our conference and influencing our deliberations. A calm and fair decision in conference would be impossible under such influences."

Wheeler likewise saw no prospect of agreement.

"If they don't object on that, they will object on something else," he said. "This is the first time in the history of Congress that either house has objected to an expert from one of the departments sitting in at a conference to act as drafting clerk."

Representative O'Connor lent further support to the House conferees and the objections of members to Administration lobbyists by issuing a statement calling attention to a House rule which bars from the Speaker's lobby and the cloakrooms any Government official not the head of a department and any former member who is interested "in any claim or directly in any bill pending before Congress."

The rule, he said, has been interpreted that "heads of departments" mean members of the President's Cabinet "and not subordinate executive officers."

It was recalled that Charles West, former liaison man for the President, just appointed Undersecretary of Interior, is a former member of the House.

The Senate lobby inquiry, which adjourned until Monday, when high officials of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. are scheduled to testify, was attacked in a statement by Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee on public utility executives, as the Senate group continued to weave a net of circumstantial evidence about Representative Patton.

"By innuendos and insinuations, which have their basis in malice and not in fact," Gadsden said, "Senator Black and his committee are now engaged in the practice of character assassination, to which the sponsors of the public utility bill have for some time resorted. The falsity and absurdity of these charges become apparent as the facts develop. * * *

"The use of a congressional investigation for this purpose is nothing more than a campaign of terrorism. It is apparently designed to silence any further protests from the public and thereby to influence the members of the House to abandon their courageous stand against the 'death sentence,' which would destroy the savings of so many of their constituents."

Senator Black revealed that the committee has issued subpenas for J. I. Mange, president of A. G. & E., and H. C. Hopson, former vice president, but that Mange is a patient in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and Hopson has not been located

The appearance of Representative Patton, husky Texan, veteran of the State Legislature, before the Senate committee came as a surprise, as he had previously stated he would not testify voluntarily and did not expect to be summoned.

Accompanied by Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, he went before the committee armed with two books and a cigar box, which he presented as Exhibits A and B of the mysterious box allegedly turned over to him by John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power & Light Co.

After telling his story without interruption and leaving the stand, he listened with obvious amazement to the story told by E. V. Sellers, an NRA employe, of Abilene, Tex., who has associated with Patton since his arrival here last winter.

When Sellers concluded his testimony, during which he related seeing Patton in the Mayflower Hotel with a newspaper-wrapped box on the Sunday before the vote on the "death sentence" and subsequently being shown a United States bond by Patton, the Texan returned to the stand with cries of protest and astonishment.

"I was never so chagrined in my life," he said.

He insisted that he had told "the honest-to-God truth" and advised the committee that it must believe one or the other—him or Sellers.

Sellers brought in the name of Patton's nephew, Norris Shook, as a supporting witness in his belief that the package Patton allegedly carried from the Mayflower Hotel was not cigars. He quoted the nephew as saying: "Hell, that wasn't cigars."

A few days later Shook remarked, according to Sellers, that Patton had bought another Government bond, "and it isn't pay day."

Later in the day Patton said he would insist that his nephew be called before the committee either to affirm or deny Sellers' story.

Patton's story of the books that he sent to John W. Carpenter, jr., and the box of cigars he received from him varied somewhat from the stories told by the elder Carpenter and Joseph A. Warsham, vice president of the Texas Power & Light Co. They all agreed, however, that Patton and Carpenter did not meet on the Sunday that Sellers said he saw Patton get the mystery package.

The Senators questioned Patton very pointedly regarding his income and expenditures since coming to Congress the first of the year. They said they were puzzled as to how he could buy four Government bonds at $750 each, or a total of $3,000, while supporting a family, paying $90 a month rent, when he drew only $3,100 between the time he came to Washington and the time he bought the bonds.

Patton explained that he had brought $600 in cash with him to the Capital, had collected more than $100 on a note, and had lived frugally. Later he recalled that he had collected about $300 mileage allowance at the rate of 20 cents a mile on 1,500 miles.

With frequent oratorical flourishes Patton opened his testimony by explaining that he came voluntarily before the committee because it was "only fair to the great State of Texas and to my family" to clear his name of insinuations made during previous testimony.

After exhibiting the books and cigars, and explaining the circumstances of the exchanges, he said:

"I hope to God I may be struck dead if that isn't the full expose of this business."

Went to See Friend.

He insisted that Carpenter is not a lobbyist but that he and the utility executive were old friends. Carpenter called Patton "Cousin Nat."

Sellers told the committee that he and Patton and Shook drove to the Mayflower Hotel on the Sunday before the House vote because Patton explained that he wanted to see a sick friend.

"He left us in the lobby and when he returned he had a little box and said, 'John gave me a box of cigars,'" Sellers recalled.

Sellers subsequently handled the box, which he said felt like pasteboard and was too small to be a cigar box. He said it was light and something inside it rattled.

Patton made a third appearance before the committee adjourned. He produced canceled checks to prove his statement that the four bonds were bought with checks issued on the sergeant at arms office. The bonds were bought on March 8, April 4, and two on May 8.

The Texas congressman continued to express amazement at Sellers' testimony, explaining that he and Sellers had been "splendid friends" and "I can't understand how he got mixed up in this transaction."

"The gentleman is mistaken some way," he concluded. "I've told the whole truth on this matter, so help me God."

Nice Perceives Politics Behind Delay in Works

Governor Makes Charges on Eve of Excursion With G.O.P. Chiefs.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 26.—Pausing at his desk between his return to Maryland and his departure on a cruise with Eastern Republican leaders on the Chesapeake Bay tomorrow, Gov. Harry W. Nice today charged politics caused the delay in the Federal Public Works program.

"There seems to be a general impression, probably with a strong basis," he said, "that the beginning of this work will be held back as long as possible in order to utilize it in the most advantageous way to insure political supremacy."

His statement, he said, boils down to "spending the money where it will do the most good in a presidential year."

The West more than the East, shows "the alienation of political affections of the people from the New Deal," Gov. Nice said. He saw Chicago as the pivot point of a spreading revolt against present Democratic policies.

The people, Gov. Nice declared, are not talking in terms of personalities, but in terms of national policies. There is no personal attack on President Roosevelt, but the fire is being directed on his policies, he added. These policies, said the Governor, "have the appearance of lacking political and economic sanity."

Asked about the locations of the 1936 national conventions, Gov. Nice said that the consensus was that "Chicago would continue to be the permanent home of the Republican Party with possibly the Democrats holding theirs in San Francisco."

The guest list for the cruise on the State yacht Dupont was swelled today when James J. Davis, United States Senator from Pennsylvania, accepted an invitation. Others who sent in their acceptances during the day were W. S. Hallanan, Republican national committeeman from West Virginia, and Col. Charles H. March, minority member of the Federal Trade Commission. The following Maryland Republicans also accepted: Nice Wilkinson, member of the State Roads Commission; Ralph Grier, of the Bay Bridge Authority and George Dierman, members of the board of election supervisors.

Other prominent Eastern Republicans who already had accepted included George H. Moses, former United States Senator from New Hampshire; Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee; Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover, and E. T. Clark, secretary to former President Coolidge.

Returning to Baltimore this morning, Gov. Nice was met at the station by State Republican leaders. He went at once to his office to go through the mass of work which has accumulated during his 13-day trip to the West Coast to attend the meetings of the American Bar Association.

Later he made the charges that political expediency was delaying the start of the Federal work-relief projects.

"Maryland has an elaborate public works project," Gov. Nice said. "The State Roads Commission has a program to which deep consideration has been given. Dr. George H. Preston, the commissioner of mental hygiene, has an elaborate program for the hospital group.

"Abel Wolman, State director of public works, has presented to the Government a very comprehensive plan. Various governmental units in the State have laid before the Federal Government plans for permanent improvements, which, if adopted by Washington, will be representative of the people's money for many years to come.

"We don't know when this work will start. We can't find out."

Gov. Nice was confident that the State would be able to care for its employables when Federal relief is cut off on November 1, pointing out that Maryland could rely on the income from the gross sales tax. Anent the Bay Bridge, he said that he would not call a special session of the Legislature to raise the money unless he had definite assurance from Washington that Federal funds also would be forthcoming.

Karpis Is Reported East-Bound in Car

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 27 (Saturday).—Police Station WPDU, Pittsburgh, broadcast a report early today that a man identified as Alvin Karpis, public enemy No. 1, was seen leaving Cleveland at 10 p. m., Eastern standard time. He was driving East in an Auburn roadster, New York license No. 3E8462, and had two men with him, the officers said.

Local police said they learned from Cleveland that Karpis was recognized by a Government operative. They quoted Cleveland authorities as saying the roadster disappeared before the operative had an opportunity to halt it.

Officers expressed an opinion that the trio were probably headed to some northern Pennsylvania city or New York.

Mexican Students Celebrate Garrido Downfall

Soldiers Rule Mexican States As Revolt Ends

Agrarian Siege Lifted as Government Officials Promise Ouster.

By the Associated Press.

Matamoros, Tamaulipas, Mexico, July 26.—The agrarian "siege" of Matamoros, begun four days ago, was lifted tonight when leaders were advised by the federal government that the political controversy in Tamaulipas would be settled satisfactorily within four days.

Roberto F. Garcia, representative of the agrarians, interpreted a telegram from Silvano Barba Gonzales, minister of the interior, as pledging federal favor to them in their drive to oust Gov. Rafael Villarreal and Mayor Rafael Munguia, of Matamoros.

"It means that Gov. Villarreal and Mayor Munguia will be removed within three or four days," Garcia said. "We feel that the cause of the agrarians has been vindicated."

Gonzales has held several conferences with Gov. Villarreal since the agitation for the latter's removal began early in the week, and had communicated with President Cardenas.

"I have given instructions to the commander of the Sixth Military Zone to give you all kinds of guarantees," the telegram read, "so that you may return to your task and your farms with the assurance that the political situation in Tamaulipas will be satisfactorily resolved within four days."

Mayor Munguia, political ally of Gov. Villarreal, refused to comment. The agrarians had sought his removal, spokesmen said, because he was affiliated with the Governor.

Immediately after receiving the telegram, agrarian leaders rushed to their followers, numbering approximately 1,000 encamped in groups near the city limits.

There were excited, happy smiles on the browned faces of farmers and peasants as they heard the news. A few minutes later trucks streamed away from the city, bearing them to their homes.

It was regarded probable that Gen. Gabriel R. Cervera, commandant of the federal garrison at Matamoros, would maintain military control over the city for several days. His soldiers took over the city hall three days ago, after the agrarians had delivered an ultimatum demanding the resignation of the mayor and threatening a march on the city.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, July 26.—Federal troops were on guard in two states tonight to preserve public order, and the governors of two other states found themselves bogged in difficulties.

One of the harried executives, Gov. Saturnini Osornio of Queretaro, was charged with homicide as the result of the death of Enrique Rio, a Spaniard who was concessionaire of the state lottery, but problems arising in the other states were directly traceable to political differences.

Reports from Chihuahua tonight said Gov. Rodrigo Quevedo, the other governor in trouble, was confronted with the demands of a large group of agrarians who had arrived in the capital to lodge a protest with the national revolutionary party headquarters against his administration.

The agrarians alleged favoritism and misgovernment in his political rule.

'Gretna Green' of Maryland Cracks Down on Clerics' Signs

Elkton Outlaws Outdoor Advertisements of Marrying Parsons.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., July 26.—Elkton's two "marrying parsons" will have to pull down their "marriage information" signs by August 5.

The town commissioners of Maryland's "Gretna Green," where 6,000 persons come for marriage every year, outlawed the information billboards in a round-about ordinance which permits erection and maintenance of advertising signs on practically any subject other than marriage. The ordinance is effective August 5.

Outlawing of the signs is effective only in the city limits of Elkton. Similar signs on highways outside the limits can be outlawed only by an act of the State Legislature.

The commissioners' action came on the heels of a record "marriage" month in June when more than 600 couples obtained licenses here. The town's population is only 3,500.

Only two ministers, who have no regular churches, are affected by the ordinance. They have ten signs erected in various parts of the town.

Pastors of churches here have been campaigning for years against the "marrying parsons." During the 1935 State Legislature, the regular pastors advocated a bill which would have outlawed all "marriage information" billboards. The bill passed the Senate, but was lost in the closing-day rush of the House.

Taxi drivers do a land-office business transporting bridal parties from the license clerk's office to the homes of the marrying parsons.

High Bankrupt Costs Blamed On Legal Fees

Solicitor-General Reed Gives Dinner Talk to Referees.

The American people are coming into a new concept of government, Stanley F. Reed, Solicitor General of the United States, last night told members of the National Association of Referees in Bankruptcy at their annual banquet at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Saying that this concept crossed party lines, he explained further that "the Borahs and the La Follettes in one party and the Wallaces and the Roosevelts in the other are trying to bring about a new justice for the common man."

Costs Too High.

Speaking of bankruptcy, he said he had become very interested in it through his work for the RFC and he had found that its administration was costing far too much. He cited figures to show that the administration of bankrupt estates in 1934 throughout the country cost approximately 22 per cent of the value of the estates.

He laid the blame for these high costs at the door of his "brethren at the bar." Cautioning the bankruptcy referees to use a check rein on these lawyers, he said the RFC, by careful checking, had been able to obtain legal work from the best law firms in New York for as low as $15 an hour.

60 Are Present.

Representative Mark Wilcox, of Florida, told the 60 assembled members and their wives that a broadening of the terms of the municipal bankruptcy act of 1934 would mean more than any one measure in the fight to restore prosperity. L. Earl Curry, president of the association, presided at the dinner.

The morning session was devoted to two symposiums on pending bankruptcy legislation and corporate reorganization problems. Most of the members took an afternoon boat excursion down the Potomac to Mount Vernon.

Col. Woodcock To Prosecute Aids of Long

Former Prohibition Head Will Press Louisiana Tax Cases.

By the Associated Press.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, former director of the Prohibition Bureau, has been named a special assistant to the Attorney General to push income tax evasion charges against four Louisiana men, known as associates of Senator Huey Long.

Authoritative sources yesterday said Woodcock was named at the request of the Treasury Department. He is president of St. John's College at Annapolis, Md.

The Justice Department said that Dan Moody, former Governor of Texas, remains in charge of New Orleans tax cases, but that Woodcock will work directly under the Treasury Department.

New Orleans, July 26.—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, newly appointed special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States, was here today presumably working on a group of Federal income tax cases involving political allies of Senator Huey P. Long.

Cases are pending against eight persons affiliated with Senator Long's organization, who are charged with income tax law violations. Included in the group are Abe L. Shushan, president of the Orleans Parish Levee Board, and Seymour Weiss, head of the New Orleans Dock Board and treasurer of Long's political organization.

Only one of nine persons indicated has been tried. A Federal district court jury last April found State Representative Joseph Fisher, also a Long ally, guilty on two counts. Fisher is now serving an 18-month sentence in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

Col. Woodcock said he would remain here until August 10, when he will return to Washington, and said he did not think his new duties would interfere with his work as president of St. John's College.

Glen Echo Woman Arrested On Charge of Cruelty to Dog

Mrs. Cecelia Shaffer, of Glen Echo, Md., was arrested by Montgomery County police yesterday on a charge of cruelty to animals. She was arrested on a warrant sworn by William Combs, also of Glen Echo, charging that she had abused a large German shepherd dog entrusted to her care.

The dog, police said, was originally the property of "Sonny" Workman, jockey, who gave it to a friend, George Chaillet, of 2138 California street northwest. Finding his apartment too small for the animal, Chaillett had Mrs. Shaffer keep him, police said.

According to police, witnesses said that the dog had been beaten with a chain and tantalized by having his food placed just out of his reach. These witnesses were Reginald and Cornelia Russell and Jack Martin, all of Glen Echo, police said. The Russells told police the animal frequently came to their house to be fed.

County police also obtained a search warrant and went to get the dog, which they could not locate. Mrs. Shaffer was released on $200 bond for her appearance at the Rockville Police Court on August 5.

Col. Brittin's Wife Found Dead in Bed

Death in Minnesota Occurs While Husband Is Here.

By the Associated Press.

Isle, Minn., July 26.—Mrs. L. H. Brittin, wife of Col. L. H. Brittin, pioneer aviation enthusiast, was found dead in bed at her home on an island in Mille Lacs Lake today.

Dr. H. T. Morrgard, Mille Lacs County coroner, said preliminary advices indicated the woman died of a heart attack.

Col. Brittin formerly was vice president and general manager of Northwest Airways.

Col. Brittin, nationally known in aviation ranks, served ten days for contempt of the United States Senate in February, 1934, as an outgrowth of alleged destruction of papers from the Northwest Airways file in an investigation of air-mail contracts.

Mahatma Gandhi Urges India To Aid Ethiopia in Conflict

Resents Mussolini Race Remarks; Asks Fund of Followers.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Calcutta, July 26.—Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, who organized a British ambulance corps for service in the Boer War, today called upon his people, who call him "saviour," to aid Ethiopia.

The Mahatma's appeals for funds to finance an Indian Red Cross unit in Ethiopia came while feeling ran high throughout the country because of Premier Benito Mussolini's outbursts against the dark races.

Indians resented Il Duce's statements that whites must be supreme in Africa. They were aroused by his charges that the yellows and the blacks are uniting against white supremacy.

Many Indians urged that if war comes, India can not remain aloof from the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

Gandhi, the idol of many of India's 350,000,000 people, made his appeal from his retreat at Wardha. The wizened Nationalist leader, disciple of peace and advocate of passive resistance, maintained India can not ignore Mussolini's racial threat.

"Although India is under British rule, she is a member of the League of Nations," he said. "She is entitled fully to assist another nation, even though she is a noncombatant."

Gandhi did not indicate whether he would participate personally in organization of an Indian Red Cross unit. His service in the Boer War was so distinguished that he won an expression of gratitude from the British government.

During the World War he aided in organizing Indian volunteers and he gathered recruits in India. He returned to the king a coveted medal when, in 1920, he turned against the government to wage his fight for Indian home rule.

Japanese Plan Loans to Meet Army Demand

Military Is 'Not Concerned' Whence New Revenue May Be Obtained.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, July 27 (Saturday).—Additional revenue must be found for increased military expenditures and the source of such funds is of no concern, army circles said today in statements reported by the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency.

The statements were in comments on Finance Minister Korekiyo Takahashi's loan policy to provide 900,000,000 yen (about $260,000,000) for a five-year armament modernization and expansion program.

The military officials were quoted as saying the prevailing international situation makes imperative the equipping of the army with "maximum armaments."

The authorities said they adhered to War Minister Hayashi's slogan, "armaments must come first in the budget."

If further bond issues are impractical, it was pointed out, there are new sources of taxation available.

The army's proposal was drafted by the general staff for submission to the cabinet. It was the first time since the Manchukuan campaign that a program for long-time expenditures had been announced.

Colby Assails Roosevelt, New Deal Policies

Says Platform Pledges of President Were Abandoned.

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., July 26.—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Woodrow Wilson and an active campaigner for President Roosevelt in 1932, today assailed the President and asserted he repudiated the Democratic platform "100 per cent."

"This high-falutin' junk that seems to be the vogue in Washington is something that the American people have little stomach for," he said in an interview.

"I heard Mr. Roosevelt say, in sincere tones, that he was for the Democratic platform 100 per cent. The only way he was 100 per cent was in repudiation of the platform," the former Secretary of State charged.

Colby, who says he traveled 11,000 miles in 1932 stumping for Roosevelt, said he looked "with grave misgivings and apprehension upon the friends of the Administration in Washington."

"Everywhere I go," he said, "the striking thing is the determination to get back to American fundamentals, freedom and individualism."

Nazis, Fascists Are Attacked At Red Meeting

Communist Leaders at Moscow Assail Nations for Aggrandizement.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 26.—The seventh Communist Internationale cheered loudly at bitter attacks on German Nazis, Italian Fascists and Japanese Militarists today.

"A defensive war by the national bourgeoisie of those countries will be a fair war in which Communists must take part," he said.

Pieck bitterly assailed Italians for their policy in Africa and lashed out at the Japanese for their encroachment upon China.

Loud applause greeted his statement that the most important choice facing humanity today was that between Fascism and Communism.

Communists will fight "for every inch of freedom that remains to the working classes" in countries governed by democratic parliamentary principles, Pieck said, in laying down the principle, new to Communism, that followers of Moscow should support "bourgeois" democracies.

A Store is More Than Just a Store

Few people, we believe, see or feel the genuine spirit of A Store that is established to render real service to the public and the community. A Store is a universally human, appealing, living thing. In this picture, the first of a series of 12, the famous artist, M. Leone Bracker, has illustrated graphically the human side of This—Your Store.

You will see this poster on display throughout the store. Mr. Bracker, the artist, created during the World War, many posters for the Government. His "Keep 'em Smiling" was the most widely printed poster of the war. Another, entitled "Behold Your Enemy," in the early days of the war, won the Government prize for Black and White posters. Mr. Bracker created America's National Peace Poster for the Geneva Conference. His posters hang in the collections of the late King Albert of Belgium, and of the Emperor of Japan. His "Ten Commandments" have been distributed all over the world. His series of Washington, for the B. & O. Railroad, is widely known. His background, then, well equips him to do this series for us.

We see a mother buying for her family—the hopes and joys of youth as typified by the boy, and the children of the family group—the love and ambition of young couples planning for their babies, to make dreams come true—and of old couples, now in safe harbor, but who find happiness in providing for the new generation. This, we think is the real human story of A Store Worthy of the Nation's Capital—Your Store.

The Girl From Home.

Although it was night, the eastern horizon burned crimson, and the windows of the long hut let in the menace. Although the weather reports read "Fair," the atmosphere trembled from what might have been mistaken for an endless thunderstorm.

The hut had a tiny stage at its far end. All the rest of the place was filled by rude benches, and all the benches by men in disheveled uniforms: all the benches, all the aisles, all the doorways. Men who had just been risking their lives, men who would presently be risking their lives again, men who would lie in their graves tomorrow—the eager mixing with the sullen, the ardent with the disgruntled, but everyone war-shocked, everyone an exile, nostalgic soldiers every one.

And then, on the stage, a slim, piquant girl, wearing a gray-blue cap, jacket and walking-skirt, sang to them.

She not only sang to them: she made them sing with her. She brought them the thing they wanted most: she brought America and Home to the homesick A. E. F., "Somewhere in France."

Mary Boland, Sydney Shields, Eleanor Cantor, Mary Hampton: there is a long and loved list of American theatrical women who captured the hearts and deserved the gratitude of the American Expeditionary Force. But Pennsylvania-Dutch Elsie Janis Bierbower was the one who won the most hearts and who holds the firmest place in the affections of that Army. The recent news of her injury in an automobile accident came to her military admirers like a flash from the casualty lists of old. The later news, which assures her recovery, will stimulate thousands of torpid pulses that beat time to the songs of Elsie Janis in the Big Parade.

Mr. McCarl's Ruling.

Several million dollars will be spent in Washington during the next year to create jobs. Local officials are trying earnestly to spend this money on projects that will be of lasting value to the community. Under the regulations laid down by the Works Progress Administration, however, they are finding it difficult to achieve that objective.

To some extent their task has been facilitated by Comptroller General McCarl's ruling that regular District appropriations may be used in conjunction with WPA funds. In other words, local funds set aside for the construction of streets, sewers, repair work, etc., may be spent for materials, while the labor on these projects can be financed through the WPA. That reasonable decision effectively counteracts the too frequent assumption that Mr. McCarl is a hard-boiled reactionary who finds delight in frustrating New Deal projects. It is his business, of course, to interpret the law as he finds it.

The immediate effect of the McCarl ruling is to open up a more substantial type of project for the expenditure of local WPA allotments. It is nevertheless a source of keen regret to citizens of the District that some of this community's most urgent needs cannot be included within the current spending program. Our deficiency in school buildings and branch libraries apparently will not be relieved. The acute need of the courts for new quarters is likewise ignored. And the hazards of air transportation from a port that is clearly recognized as a menace remain uncorrected while large sums are being frittered away in boondoggling.

Pretty Thin.

Whatever doubt lingered as to the political finaigling behind the appointment of T. Webber Wilson to the Federal Parole Board is dissipated by the explanation put forward by Attorney General Cummings. Even in the field of politics, it is a gem.

Mr. Wilson, it will not soon be forgotten, was the judge recalled from the Virgin Islands along with Gov. Pearson, as a result of the Senate investigation. Relieved of his duties in the tiny Caribbean possessions, he was immediately named to the Federal Parole Board. Before this was possible, however, it was necessary to make a vacancy on the board and Dr. Amy N. Stannard, an expert psychiatrist of long and faithful service, was selected as scapegoat.

Her resignation was occasioned, submits Mr. Cummings, by the fact that only 4 per cent of the Federal prisoners are women. The implication, as confirmed by subordinates in the Department of Justice, is that a woman member of the board should deal only with women, inasmuch as it might be embarrassing for a woman psychiatrist to have to hear testimony concerning some of the male cases.

Dr. Stannard, whose restraint in this sordid business is admirable, merely retorts that there was nothing embarrassing to her in the work. Indeed all the embarrassment in the matter devolves on the head of the Attorney General, where it will probably be concentrated as long as Judge Wilson holds parole board office.

Not Even A Face Saver.

The tentative tax plan of the House Ways and Means Committee is expected to add from $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 to the Federal revenues. With a budgetary deficit of about $3,500,000,000 recorded for the fiscal year just ended and a larger deficit anticipated during the present fiscal year, the program is palpably inadequate as a revenue measure. It should, however, help to spread realization that the cost of running the Government on present lavish lines can not be met merely by increasing taxes levied upon the rich. If that salutary truth can be forced home, the committee's labors will not have been altogether vain.

The meagerness of the anticipated returns from the proposed taxes is especially striking in view of the fact that the President's recommendations have been followed by imposing almost confiscatory levies upon large incomes and estates. The committee was less docile in responding to the suggestion that corporation income taxes should be graduated with reference to size of income. However, it provided for a limited range of 1 per cent instead of the present flat rate. By doing so, it set the seal of approval upon a thoroughly unsound proposal which should have been rejected outright as a matter of principle.

Graded taxes upon excess profits are recommended as a means of producing the bulk of the new revenue from corporations. Obviously, if any kind of graduated tax on corporations is contemplated it is more logical and reasonable to vary it with reference to the rate of profits rather than the amount of the net income. The latter method of procedure merely penalizes size as such and disregards the fact that many shareholders of large corporations are persons of small means.

It serves little purpose to linger over the deficiencies of specific proposals in view of the major defects of the tax program, viewed either as a plan for sharing wealth or producing revenue. New taxes which at the most liberal estimate would take $250,000,000 of current income from a small number of wealthy individuals and a few corporations can not by any stretch of the imagination be regarded as a wealth-sharing device. Even in the depression year of 1932 the national income was estimated to amount to approximately $50,000,000,000, while it probably exceeded $80,000,000,000 in 1929. As a measure of social reform, therefore, in the Rooseveltian sense, the tax program is a conspicuous failure. At the same time it may do much incidental harm by encouraging a flight of capital to tax-exempt securities and by forcing the break-up of large estates invested in productive enterprises.

Critics are generous when they refer to this tax bill as a "face saver" for the President. It is better described in the words of one exasperated Congressman as "a gesture at social reform and nothing at all as a revenue producer." The Administration will be hard put to excuse or explain its insistence upon prolonging the session for the sake of such negligible results.

The fiscal problems presented by our soaring public debt can only be solved by imposing heavier taxes, direct and indirect, upon all classes. The sooner that fact is brought forcibly to public attention, the better are the chances for enactment of a tax program that will assure a balanced budget and avert the dangers inherent in our present deficit financing.

Hat Martyrs.

The Government of Iran has ordered its male citizens to wear Western headgear, and serious riots have resulted. But the Occidental press reports them with tongue in cheek and with that superior smile which is always irritating when the occasion doesn't warrant any assumption of superiority.

After all, Shah Riza Khan Pahlevy has the example of President Kemal behind him. The subjects of both these rulers are largely Moslem, and the fez or turban of the Moslem is—or until lately was—a badge of his faith. The only worldly difference between the Persian and Turkish Moslems seems to be that, whereas the latter adopted the Western fashion without much demur, the former resist the sumptuary law as an invasion of civil as well as religious liberties.

Certainly there could be found something in favor of this resistence even by those Americans who care little for such liberties and are not Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Is the dwindling derby such a thing of beauty in comparison to the fez? Does the "soft felt" reveal qualities of joy forever when placed beside the turban? Moreover, if Western warriors are not so childish as to kill those of their fellow nationals who flout hat regulations, the cultured gentlemen of the New York Stock Exchange still find it amusing to bash the straw hat that ventures into Wall street after mid-September.

Backing The Bourgeoisie.

The decision of the Communist Internationale to abandon thoughts of world revolution, and to combine forces with unregimented bourgeois elements in countries opposed to Fascism, was not completely unexpected. Not long ago Communist deputies in France were urged to vote for increased military expenditures, the reasoning being that protection of France from the specter of Nazi Germany is more important to workers than any immediate conversion of France to Communism.

The superior force of political exigency over economic theory is thus once again demonstrated. But the development emphasizes particularly the Russian fear of German aggression, being clearly an attempt to placate the Soviet's potential capitalist allies. Reports from the Moscow congress indicate that a world labor party will be launched to bolster the forces of workers, particularly in those countries where democracy is threatened by dictatorships. This seems to mean that Communists will seek to align themselves in groups where they must be greatly outnumbered, and where their hope for control will be slight.

The practical success of the program will depend in each instance largely on the attitude of the local Communists. In this country, for example, it has been demonstrated time and again that co-operation between Communists and other political groups is impossible because of the Marxians' flat refusal to compromise, to consider action except on their own terms and under their own dictation. Moscow's repudiation of this disdainful attitude will have domestic political significance if it means furtherance of the "united front" so often discussed in radical circles.

The Liaison Problem.

Under a governmental system of checks and balances the relationship between the executive and the legislature is a matter of foremost importance. No Congress made up of representatives from many States, holding widely diverse viewpoints, can be expected to legislate intelligently without positive leadership. To a considerable extent that leadership must come from the President. In times like the present, when numerous measures of vital economic and social significance are under consideration, the working contacts between the Chief Executive and Congress constitute a problem of no little complexity.

The Constitution specifically assigns to the President the role of adviser to Congress. Moreover, his veto power gives him extensive influence over legislation, and his unofficial position as head of the party which elects him makes the Executive responsible for the initiation and promotion of measures constituting a national policy. Few would advocate diminution of these powers. On the contrary, there is general recognition of the need for some regularized policy to make cooperation between the White House and the Capitol more effective.

To a certain extent this function has been performed lately by Charles West, although he has been on the pay roll of the Farm Credit Administration. Now this former Congressman has been shifted to the newly created post of Undersecretary of the Interior. If he continues to function as a liaison between the President and members of Congress, his administrative status will be highly irregular. What is needed is an arrangement whereby the Administration may openly inform and advise congressional leaders without resort to devious maneuvering, secret propaganda or political influence.

In recent attempts to influence the judgment of Congress the Administration has resorted to intolerable procedure. Its agents have resorted to tactics not dissimilar from those employed by professional lobbyists. Too often political pressure has taken the place of frank and open discussion. Instead of guiding Congress, the President has tried to coerce that body in a manner that has aroused the resentment of all legislators who think for themselves.

The contacts established through Mr. West afforded an opportunity to place the relations between the President and Congress on a higher plane. Obviously one man could not supersede the miscellaneous political pressure emanating from many executive departments. But it was a start in the right direction. Now that Mr. West has been shifted, presumably to responsible executive duties, the question of beginning again to set up a legitimate and responsible liaison is immediately raised.

The bungling efforts of certain officials to "boss" Congress must not be allowed to discredit all plans to bring about more practical working arrangements. The line between political connivance to secure legislation without adequate analysis, and open presentation of data and arguments to sustain an Administration policy, should be sharply drawn. While that is being done, however, the need for some more adequate, above-board and trustworthy means of conveying to Congress the aims and viewpoint of the Administration may well be considered.

Another thing that retards the progress of man is that his architectural design so aptly fits him for sitting down.

Reform In Tennessee.

From The Houston Post.

Tennessee is exploring new trails through the wilderness of modern change and confusion.

In submitting to the people the question of a constitutional convention to rewrite the State's organic law, the Tennessee Legislature has taken a step which has been advocated for a long time. A powerful campaign is being made for a favorable vote on the issue on October 10, and its chances are considered good.

Its treasury overspent by $4,000,000 or more—a serious deficit for Tennessee—the Legislature of that State will consider, at a special session to be convened Monday, ways and means of raising needed revenues.

Another log awaiting the legislative saw and ax in the Tennessee woodpile is the question of prohibition repeal. Under an act of 1909 the State is dry, but the act has never been very well observed. In fact, there is a serious question in the minds of the State authorities as to whether new legislation is necessary to make Tennessee legally wet.

If Tennessee can get these issues and the TVA all settled to its satisfaction this year, it will feel that it has given itself a new deal from a new deck.

Ethiopia And The Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Abyssinia is now before the public eye, its romantic history from a biblical standpoint should be noted. In a general way it has been called Cush, Sheba, Ethiopia and Abyssinia. In days before the reputed time of Moses, the Pharaoh of Egypt (Thothmes I), who conquered it, made a high official of his court "the Prince of Cush." Some think Moses himself was offered that position, or filled it; anyhow, Josephus, the Jewish historian, says that Moses was sent to Cush and married a Cushite or Ethiopian princess named Tarbush.

This tradition finds an echo in the Bible when, after crossing the Red Sea and moving down toward Ethiopia, the sister and brother of Moses chided him for "marrying an Ethiopian," or Cushite. Tarbush did not, obviously, quit Egypt when Moses did, but afterward rejoined him.

The Queen of Sheba (Ethiopia) visited Solomon, not without reason. Some affinity or relation must have led her to do this. Tradition has it, and the present Abyssinian King believes it, that Solomon added to his many wives the Queen of Sheba. From her, so goes the story, he had a son, who was the progenitor of the present dynasty in Abyssinia.

Something of truth must be in these traditions, for we read that in apostolic days an Ethiopian chamberlain of Queen Candace had come to Jerusalem "for to worship." Evidently he had intimate knowledge of a relationship between his country and Palestine and its worship. This man was converted to Christianity by Philip the evangelist and in turn became the founder of the present Abyssinian (Coptic) Church.

Thus, while the different nations play politics and try to exploit Abyssinia, the church has a very definite interest in that romantic land. The church can not be silent and let Abyssinia be made the plaything of Mussolini or any other invader.

Jackson's "Stonewall."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with great interest in your issue of July 21 in the staff correspondence of The Post from Manassas, Va., July 20, an account of the observance of the seventy-fourth anniversary of the Battle of Bull Run; the first engagement of the Civil War. It reports the remarks of Maj. John K. Shawvan, of Clyde, Ohio, a student of the battle, where he says (perhaps it is the expression of the correspondent):

> It was in the Battle of Bull Run that Beauregard, while watching the operations of Gen. Jackson from a ridge, exclaimed to his aide de camp, "There stands Jackson like a stone wall." Thus started the name.

The last sentence is the only correct expression.

If you will turn to "The Drum Beat of the Nation," by Charles Carleton Coffin, the noted war correspondent, see page 99 and you will find:

If you will turn to the first volume of "Battles and Leaders of the Civil War," probably the most correct brief history, because it was written by actual participants, and look on page 210 (popular edition, four volumes, in eight parts), you will find in the article on the "Battle of Bull Run," written by G. T. Beauregard, general, C. S. A., this:

> "It was at this moment that Gen. Bee used the famous expression, "Look at Jackson's brigade! It stands there like a stone wall."

For Nonpolitical Referees.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: We are consistently told that the President and Mr. Hopkins are more concerned with the welfare of the unemployed than with the wishes of local political "machines;" but we have never been enlightened as to the method by which the said unemployed can get a square deal, with all administrative employes selected by local politicians, and all complaints made to Washington returned to the person or persons responsible for the injustice, and the person making the complaint allowed to be discriminated against—and told that "he (or she) has caused us enough trouble already."

It appears to me that, with so many "investigators," and so much money to employ others, that complaints might be referred to an investigator who has no connection with local or State political leaders, and said investigator interview the authors of the complaints, in regular trips over given districts. Certainly, the just complaint would receive fairer treatment by this method.

Chicago Laughter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago there appeared in your news columns an article covering the activities of our "gentleman farmer" Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgantheau, in connection with the current move on the part of the Administration to have the Government made immune to lawsuits against itself for alleged damages incurred by private individuals or companies as a result of the incredible repudiation of the gold clauses in bonds. The article stated that Mr. Morgenthau offered to be "personally responsible" for the consequences if Congress would agree to enact the necessary legislation.

Our sides are sore from laughing. We might consider it more seriously if only somebody were responsible for Mr. Morgenthau.

Praises Rep. Jenckes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a native of the District of Columbia I wish to give praise for the stand of Representative Virginia Ellis Jenckes during the District committee meeting with reference to the bill on the bond holdings of the District.

I was present when she arose accusing Mr. Prettyman of malfeasance and I mentally registered praise and thankfulness to our Indiana neighbors for sending a brave conscientious woman to Congress who upholds the principles on which the crime investigation was conducted this winter in Washington.

More 'Married Clause' Arguments

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Married Clause" should be struck out and the marital status should not in itself prevent any couple from holding Government positions.

Government work is or should be maintaining and rendering essential services to the public. Therefore, under present conditions, it should offer opportunities of employment to two general classes of workers, namely, scientists and highly trained men and women as well as executives and clerks who seek Government positions but being economically able are willing to accept a salary of $1 a year in order to work on a contractual basis, as during the late war; and all those of proper qualifications who have to work for a living.

It follows that the law in specifying a maximum for the combined salaries of the couple should allow an amount adequate to maintain not only the couple themselves but the actual or prospective number of children upon the basis of an average-size family, say, five. Specific increment of income for the couple, with proper safeguards of tenure and efficiency, may be made on a progressive periodical scale in terms of years, or outright before or upon the birth of a new member to the family, or upon a combination of these two methods.

This brief description is only one of many social policies the Government could make possible or encourage through its laws dealing with Government work and compensation therefor. Thus the Government, the people's final resort, could test as well as eventually set a standard for private industry. Then, in the selection of workers, the English system of civil service wherein only the relatively few higher officials responsible for carrying out policies are appointed could well be adopted and adapted to American conditions.

AMBROSE JULIAN FAHY.
Washington, July 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The discrimination against married women should work inflexibly against all or none. The fact that some of the opponents of the discrimination are willing to have it apply to higher salaried persons makes it manifest that the matter is based upon envy and that it serves only to appease unhealthy states of feeling.

Applying the discrimination to higher salaried women and not to others would make the discrimination more pointed and meaner and would penalize the very few women who have achieved some measure of success. Such an untoward discrimination would discriminate against the very women who have fought hardest for women and who have done most to raise their estate as a whole.

The discrimination based upon sex or marital state is purely a provision of panic and pettiness and has no place in any merit system. It is rather unfortunate that those affected by the unwise discrimination, instead of fighting it as a principle, are willing to have it continue so long as it affects others and not themselves. Obviously one ought to be for or against it and not try to be for it for others and against it for oneself. That surely is an untenable position for anyone.

ANNA DEAN WILLIAMS.
Alexandria, Va., July 23.

The Post Impressionist

Pea-Soup Particular.

Post Office, Saturday.

When we make a mistake—and, oh, how rarely that occurs!—we always acknowledge it. We acknowledge it no matter if the mistake was made by somebody else, whom we quoted. In fact, we acknowledge it then even more freely and fully than when we happen to be a lonely offender.

So now, with perverted pleasure, we take back what we said some time ago about London fogs.

We said Londoners said London fogs had never been so bad as they were said to be. And we said Londoners said London fogs were decreasing in both frequency and power.

An English tourist concern was our authority. Now a second authority—Henry M. Robinson—says our authority erred. And traveler Robinson knows his England as well as Crusoe knew another little isle.

Well, from our own knowledge of London and human nature, we all along had some suspicion that the tourist concern might be just a trifle prejudiced. The London Pea-Souper—Dickens called it, you'll remember, "London Particular"—always struck us as very particular indeed. It seemed to us one of those "thoroughly English" things which England, the master-builder, has constructed to endure through ages:

"Age can not wither her, nor custom stale

The formula is severely simple: Coal dust, a local air warm and moist, and the intrusion of a cool breeze from the sea.

"Stir these together," Mr. Robinson writes, "and you get . . . a fog that no other city has ever attempted to challenge. The dust particles act as kernels upon which fog droplets are formed when the breeze condenses the moisture . . . Eight million Londoners light their soft-coal home fires—and, by 9 a. m., the city is a pall of brown soup."

Now the Post-Impressionist understands what the Londoners meant by a song that was popular among them during the World War. It was dread of air attacks and the desire for smoke screens that prompted the melodious command: "Keep the home fires burning!"

The perfect London fog rises to a height of some 200 feet—and why not? London's soft-coal fires daily pump 300 tons of sulphuric acid gas into London's naturally limpid atmosphere.

Mr. Robinson—he's writing in The American Traveler—says:

"On foggy days, a citizen inhales 200,000,000,000 of these gas particles—almost a million times more than are found in clear mountain air." No wonder "the effect on health is disastrous." No wonder that, "during one historic fog, the death-rate rose from 16 to 19.14 and lung-diseases increased 250 per cent." Although doctors wouldn't venture forth upon any except serious emergency missions, many outdoor workers were partially asphyxiated by the fog-fumes: the hospitals needed their oxygen-tanks.

"The fogs decreasing in power?"

Why, there was one particular less than three years ago which suspended all traffic within a radius of 30-odd miles of London. For hours, the great thoroughfares from Hammersmith to Hyde Park were a solid block of stopped vehicles. The Metropolitan Police sent out calls "for volunteers to control the traffic with searchlights"—but control was impossible. The ancient institution of the linkman (with a white handkerchief stitched between his shoulders) was temporarily revived—but at that you couldn't see two feet ahead of you.

Mr. Robinson was there.

On a comparatively recent election day, bell-ringers had to be dispatched to pilot Clapham voters. "In South London, a trail of white arrows was carefully chalked to show the way to the polls."

Mr. Robinson was there, too.

"Mail trucks could not collect mail . . . A couple returning from a wedding plunged into Wednesfield Canal. The royal musicians outside Buckingham Palace could not see their music during the changing of the guard. One airplane pilot got lost while taxiing from the center of the landing field to the hangar." And a searching party sent after him got lost, too. It all reminds us of a so-called day when we, in London, were due at the French front before nightfall, and our taxi lost the way to Waterloo.

But Mr. Robinson's instances are recent.

London fogs "decreasing in frequency?" Efforts to decrease them have failed through six centuries. Edward I forbade the burning of soft coal in London; there are smoke abatement committees today. But the Londoner likes soft-coal fires: they're traditional and they're cheap.

* * *

If London wants to get rid of its fogs, it will have to get rid of its Londoners.

Fair Enough

By

Westbrook Pegler

In God We Trust.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The interesting mind of Senator Long, of Louisiana, often a topic of discussion among his colleagues in Washington, appears to have entered a new phase. The Senator is now beginning to associate himself with God. The relationship is not exactly defined but appears to be that of a junior partner or special representative.

* * * *

On his arrival in New Orleans by plane a short while ago, the Senator exclaimed to the committee of armed guards who welcomed him, "Me and the Lord sure have been traveling fast." When he returned to Washington, he again referred to his new association in prescribing on the floor of the Senate three remedies for the ills which afflict the Nation.

"Back to the Lord," he said, "back to the Constitution and back to me."

To the casual observer, these remarks may seem to have been attempts at levity, questionable only on the grounds of taste. But those who have seen the Kingfish in action in the Louisiana State Legislature can detect a more ambitious intent. Huey has acquired all the power there is in Louisiana, short of divine authority, and he is one whose appetite for power cannot be content while there still is authority to be claimed.

If it is the next step in the development of Huey's mentality and his career to set himself up as a prophet, he will reverse the process which was followed by other great American holy men. Brigham Young, John Alexander Dowie, Benjamin Parnell of the House of David, Pastor Russell and the current Negro Messiah, Father Divine, of Harlem, whose followers regard him as God, no less, all began by claiming to be either God's special agent by direct appointment, with absolute authority over their followers, or God, Himself.

They first established firm control over the religious belief of their flocks and only then proceeded to dominate their political, social and financial affairs. All these wore whiskers, but they operated at a time when whiskers were regarded with more or less awe—the stained-glass window influence. In recent years, thanks to the comic artist and to failures of whiskered prophets who died without making good their claims, the deep-tangled beard has been abandoned. Mr. Wilbur Glenn Voliva, who took over Dowie's reign at Zion City, Ill., abandoned the master's make-up, and Father Divine's dark-brown countenance is nude. Aimee Semple McPherson, of course, would have been terribly handicapped as a bearded woman. Huey is smooth shaven.

Parnell, Dowie and Pastor Russell had no consideration for their successors. Parnell and Pastor Russell were going to live eternally, and it was an embarrassing task to explain why they had been taken off. Mr. Dowie had promised that when he went away he would leave this earth in a fiery chariot. This he did not do and the colony of Zion City has dwindled steadily, as a result.

* * * *

Senator Long, on the other hand, began as a politician and became dictator of the material affairs of Louisiana, answerable to nobody, before he began to suggest the existence of a working arrangement with God. His dictatorship is far greater than any of the others here mentioned. Utah is large in territory, but Brigham Young's domain was unimportant on any other basis of comparison with the Kingdom of the Kingfish.

But, like the others, even though he has reversed the order of things, Huey demands unquestioning faith and severely rebukes any challenge. Like Sister Aimee, he has a brass band except that his band is bigger and gaudier than hers and is, according to his claim, the loudest damn band in the world. And, like all of them, he is beset by enemies of the most sinister and malignant kind who do not hesitate to call him a faker and to question his disposition of the money.

* * * *

It is a distinct novelty to find a prophet acting as press agent for a brand of gin, as Huey did in New York the other day, but these are new times and gin is now a legitimate article of commerce, in addition to which Huey has originality. He is the only prophet who could publicize gin and get away with it, an evidence of the man's power in the land.

It will be fascinating to note the progress of the new trinity of the Lord, the Constitution and the Kingfish. All his previous alliances have gone to smash because he wanted to be head man. He was once content to be a follower of Franklin D. Roosevelt, but wound up calling him a liar and a faker. Huey will hesitate long before denouncing his new senior partner in similar terms, but anything is possible in a dictator. Stalin and Hitler did.

County's Population 2

By the Associated Press.

Pierre, S. Dak., July 26.—Two men—that's the adult white population of Armstrong County as disclosed today by the 1935 State census.

Leo O'Neal and Ethan Earl Alexander—both 38, ranchers and World War veterans—are the only white men living in the 530-square-mile county. Both are married to Indians. O'Neal has three children, Alexander one.

Lawrence K. Fox, census director, said the county probably has fewer Caucasian residents than any other in the United States.

The State census lists 20 Indians in the county, part of the Cheyenne reservation. The Federal census of 1930 gave the county a population of 80, but made no classification as to race. The 1925 State census registered 27 white men, 20 white women and 266 Indians.

Shaw Testy on Birthday

By the Associated Press.

Malvern, England, July 26.—George Bernard Shaw didn't want to be reminded that he was 79 years old today. He didn't want to talk about it. He didn't want anyone else to talk about it.

He wouldn't, in fact, take time off from his work on another play—"The Millionairess," to be produced in London this fall—to celebrate it.

"How would you like to be reminded that it was youth seventy-ninth birthday?" he demanded, testily. "If you are ever 79, you'll not want to discuss the fact.

"And who is interested in my birthday? I am not distinguished by having birthdays. The public interest in me depends on things I can do that nobody else can. Anyone can have a birthday."

His eyes as sharp and his beard as white as ever, G. B. S. looked in fine fettle as he pushed rehearsals of his latest work, "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles." It will be produced here Monday.

Europe Turns To Colonies

Franco-Italian Understanding In Respect To Ethiopia Is Counterbalanced By Bloc Composed Of Great Britain, Germany and Poland, The Latter With Eyes On Liberia.

By Stephane Botchev.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva (By Mail).

THE Franco-Italian understanding of the beginning of this year may be looked upon as having precipitated the crisis of colonial politics with which we are now confronted. It may be doubted whether such matters will completely occupy the stage to the exclusion of European problems such as that of Austria, but this is held, in some league circles, to be likely. What is certain is that the resumption of colonial politics will mark a further weakening of the league. All such affairs will be arranged outside its walls, and in a manner contrary to its principles. If by chance a colonial matter should happen to come before the league the consequences might be even more disastrous, involving possibly the dislocation of that institution.

To appreciate this point we need only look into the Abyssinian affair. Here, the league is faced with a clear choice—to intervene or not to intervene. If the league takes no steps to prevent Italy from conquering Abyssinia, war will break out, and we may expect to see Italian arms victorious. The result will be that a league member will have its territory seized in whole or in part without the intervention of the league. This is scarcely calculated to augment its prestige.

Now, suppose, on the other hand, that the league does intervene to prevent Italian action. Suppose that the council comes to deal with the Abyssinian question. Italy, for her part, may not even deign to appear at Geneva. If she does come, it will be with the intention, not of witnessing her own condemnation, but of claiming a mandate over Abyssinia. The attitude taken up by Signor Grandi in London and by the Italian press recently shows that this is the thesis that Italy is going to defend before the council.

Should the council wish to protect Abyssinia, far from giving Italy a mandate over the Negus' dominions, it will have to insist on the withdrawal of Italian troops from Abyssinian territory, and take whatever measure of compulsion will be necessary in case that Italy should disobey. Such decisions on the part of the council are for the present inconceivable. Still less conceivably could they be put into effect. All that could be said with certainty in such an eventuality is that Italy would march out of the league, banging the door behind her.

* * * *

IT is, therefore, improbable that there will be any serious league intervention in this African conflict where intervention could not have any positive results. Besides, there is another reason preventing action on the part of the league against Italy. France has bound herself to give Italy a free hand in Abyssinia. This is denied from the French side, but it is not only believed that such a promise was given, it is asserted that this promise was entrusted to paper, in a letter signed by Mr. Laval and handed over to the Italians. No league action is possible without France and still less against France. It is furthermore unthinkable that that country would abandon its new-found ally, Italy, after the Anglo-German naval agreement, and particularly after England's offers to Abyssinia which prejudice the development of French colonies (Djibouti).

The Franco-Italian understanding thus shows its worth for Italy. In fact, one can not see what other advantage Italy could get out of an arrangement which would allot her some hundred square miles of African desert. Abyssinia is beyond doubt Italy's share in the bargain.

It is now believed that the Franco-Italian colonial agreement involves not only a few French territorial concessions, nor yet a mere promise of support in the Abyssinian affair but envisages the setting up of a genuine united front on colonial policy. The reason for the establishment of such a bloc is to be sought in the German colonial claims. Italy and France have agreed, it is said, to oppose any revision of the colonial clauses of the peace treaties in favor of Germany.

* * * *

ALONG with the Franco-Russian alliance, this Franco-Italian entente rejecting all German colonial claims is given as one of the conditions favoring the Anglo-German naval agreement. Over against this Franco-Italian alliance for colonial purposes, which is aggressive with respect to Abyssinia, and leaves England to cope with German pretentions, there has formed, or is in process of formation another colonial bloc, Great Britain, Germany and, curiously enough, Poland.

Without doubt, it is to the colonial demands of Germany that we must look if we would understand the fundamental cause of the incipient stirrings in colonial politics. The Anglo-German naval agreement, it must be understood, is almost a concession of a colonial character by England to Germany, for though to have a fleet is not to have colonies, it is at least a good diplomatic argument for having them and an argument which will shortly pull its weight. In this way, England, by coming to an understanding in advance with Germany, is hoping to turn the German demands in the direction of the French colonies.

But there is the common front formed by Italy and France to oppose such claims. This is a grave situation, which becomes all the more serious with the increase of German strength, which must find an outlet either in Europe or in colonies. The possibility of eastward expansion is excluded by the Franco-Russian alliance, that of colonial expansion by the general refusal to make concessions—is not this a situation which threatens to end in an explosion?

* * * *

POLAND, which is joining the Anglo-German combination now in process of formation, has been led to do so for a curious reason. The Poles have taken up the idea of having colonies like ohter people—this idea finds clear expression in a speech made by the chief of the military general staff—and they appear to have picked on Liberia for a start. For some months there has been a Polish scientific mission in this country. The scientific character of this mission, however, did not prevent it from looking into other questions.

This fits in well with the prestige-politics of present-day Poland which looks upon itself as a great power. We are assured that one of the topics discussed by Beck and Hitler in their recent meeting at Berlin was this colonial question, and that Germany has promised its support.

Finally, one thing must be emphasized. The Abyssinian affair is a serious business. On the other hand, there exist German and even Polish colonial claims and ambitions, and colonial problems take up a great deal of attention. Still, it would be wrong to exaggerate the importance of all this and to believe that colonial politics is going to oust European politics.

The state which would establish a world power must be strong at home; and if Germany wishes to establish herself as a world power, she must first of all fortify her position in Europe. Hitler knows this well, and he has his plan—Ostpolitik and Anschluss. For Hitler's Germany, western policy is only the preparation of these two aims. And, if the former is yet distant, the latter, the Anschluss, is once more coming up for discussion, thanks to Italian preoccupations in Africa and the question now being raised of the restoration of the Hapsburgs.

Peery to Start Tour Of Institutions Tuesday

Richmond, Va., July 26 (AP).—Gov. Peery and his budget advisory commission will start their tour of State institutions Tuesday, the chief executive announced today.

No detailed itinerary has been mapped, but the Governor said the group would spend the first day in the Richmond area, visiting other institutions Wednesday, probably including Petersburg on this day, and Thursday would visit Fredericksburg and Newport News.

Don't Mention It.

About Paris

By

Andre Vulliet

THERE is at least one night in the year when dancing in the Paris streets not only gets the police official blessing but also is given precedence over traffic necessities. That is on the night of July 14, the French "Independence Day," when the whole country joyfully commemorates the day in 1789 when the people of Paris razed the hated Bastille royal prison, a symbol of tyranny.

Aside from the usual army parade along the Avenue Champs Elysees, the unusual display of an air armada in the Paris sky, and two huge political demonstrations held at both ends of Paris, this year's celebration was true to tradition. The great mass did not forget this was a popular fete and turned out in full force to preserve the most picturesque side of the French national holiday.

At nearly every important street corner, especially in the neighborhood of cafes, big or small, wooden platforms were erected, and tri-color decorations and long rows of paper lanterns strung from nearby houses. It was easy enough to drive around until 8 o'clock, but then traffic was stopped and chairs and tables sprang up along the sidewalks like mushrooms. Up jumped musicians, with plenty of accordions, on the patriotic platforms; the street itself was turned into a dancing floor and, by the force of circumstance, the cafe terraces expanded and expanded until they nearly joined each other.

Every now and then, especially in the Montarnasse section, near the students' quarter, Americans were seen apparently having the time of their lives. After a "real" dance among "real" Frenchmen they would sit at a terrace, sip a cheap drink and start out the next minute for a crazy whirl. In a little side street, near the Town Hall, far enough from possible onlookers but near enough to hear the music, we saw an old couple recall their happy days to the moving notes of a pre-war waltz.

This year, this went on well into the small hours, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. For three days, not only Paris, but the whole country danced, out in the heat of beautiful July nights. Joyfully but quietly, as no individual firecrackers were allowed, few drunkards were seen, no rows took place. Not a refined spectacle, if you like, but a popular one, both vulgar and intense, like most mass manifestations when people shout, kill or dance for a cause or a commemoration the meaning of which they do not know.

ACCORDING to old engravings, it seems that the enthusiasm that followed the surrender of the old Bastille fortress, in the summer of 1789, was paralleled only by the frenzy caused by the announcement of the Armistice, on the morning of November 11, 1918.

The first anniversary of such a symbolic event, July 14, 1790, was celebrated throughout France (and in other European cities as well) with an extraordinary display of official pomp and popular joy. It was the commemoration of this first Bastille Day which left its imprint on what was to become the French national holiday. On the site of the old prison, which in the meantime had been torn down to the last stone, 83 trees were planted representing the 83 departments of France and large posters with the words "Ici On Danse" (Here You Can Dance) indicated the people's determination to make merry on the very spot where the royal prison had raised its austere walls. On that night, all the streets between the Palais Royal and the Faubourg St. Antoine were illuminated and thronged with dancers. The tradition has been kept alive ever since.

A curious fact about street dancing is that it may be found in several localities in Europe, indulged in by their inhabitants on every festive occasion apparently with no rhyme or reason. In most of these places, it is purely a local custom, with no national or regional character, the origin of which would be hard to find were it not for historic records which show that Napoleon's troops had passed through those places on a 14th of July. The inhabitants had joined the soldiers in their street dancing, had liked it and kept it for their own fetes.

* * * *

ANOTHER fourteenth-of-July custom is that of giving free performances at most of the national (or so-called "subsidized") theaters in Paris, the Opera House, the Opera-Comique, the Odeon and the Comedie Francaise.

In spite of the weather, which is usually more suitable to outdoor pleasures, fans form up endless queues long before the show and wait patiently under the scorching July sun, eating sandwiches, making friends, talking "art." The most well-to-do among them bring folding chairs. If some of them are people who would stand anything just for the fun of getting something for nothing, most of them are destitute art lovers, or poor fellows for whom this constitutes the greatest treat of the year.

A great disappointment to them all, this year, was the inability of the Comedie Francaise, the French classical theater par excellence, to give its annual free performance, due to the fact that it is closed for repairs and remodernizing not to reopen until October.

The Academy

By

William Lyon Phelps

THREE hundred years ago, when King Louis XIII was on the throne of France, and the Three Musketeers were active, the French Academy was founded. Before 1635, the Academy had enjoyed a few years of precarious existence, in an amateur fashion; but in 1635, it received formal recognition from the King.

In the month of June in this present year, therefore, they celebrated in Paris the tercentenary; and our American Academy of Arts and Letters was represented by President Nicholas Murray Butler. Various receptions were held, music and drama were given by the State operas and theaters, and the French Academy added to its already great prestige.

* * * *

The 40 members, called the Immortals, have on the whole maintained the high level of excellence which was the ideal from the start. They represent—naturally with some glaring exceptions—Moliere, Alphonse Daudet, Guy de Maupassant—the best of French literature. The rules and the methods of election have remained without very much change. An Academician is elected for life, and the Academy is a self-perpetuating body, new members being chosen by a ballot of the existing ones. At present there are 38; with the exception of a few famous generals, men of letters constitute the majority.

The French Academy is probably the most influential and the most highly respected of all associations devoted to literature. Its main business has been the preservation of the purity, accuracy and dignity of the French language. A new grammar was recently published by the academy and over 200,000 copies have been sold. The Academy is now revising the dictionary.

while German-American societies were denouncing it.

The State Department press releases cited by LaGuardia dealt principally with the treatment accorded holders of German securities. One of them, dated June 28, 1934, purported to be the text of a note handed by Secretary of State Cordell Hull to Charge d'Affaires Rudolf Leitner.

In this note the American Government, referring to Germany's move for concessions on debt service, voiced its "grave regret" that "the losses already being borne by American investors in German securities are thus to be augmented."

Another passage read by the Mayor said:

"This Government is furthermore disturbed by the indications contained in the communication and in other declarations emanating from official German sources to the effect that discrimination is practiced between the various national groups of holders of German securities."

Another release, dated June 18, 1934, said the American Ambassador in Berlin had been instructed to inform the German government "that the Government of the United States would view with disapproval developments under which its investors would receive poorer treatment than the investors of other countries."

On May 5, 1934, the Mayor read, the State Department announced it had warned, in connection with German bonds, that the German government "can not escape the responsibility for any preferences it may sanction."

The National United German Societies sent a letter to the Mayor saying his "impulsive utterances" were endangering the friendly relations between this country and Germany.

Berlin, July 26 (AP).—Uncertainty and tenseness growing out of the Nazis' big drive against "reactionaries" brought whispered conjecture today that another "blood purge" might result.

Jews and some diplomatic quarters compared the tactics employed against Jews, steel helmet war veterans and "political Catholicism" to those which preceded the June, 1934, blood letting, in which Adolf Hitler and his helpers eliminated unwanted party leaders.

[A United Press dispatch from Berlin reported Nazi leaders prepared a law definitely prohibiting marriages between Jews and Christians. It was understood their plans were prompted by conflicting court judgments on the Jewish-Christian marriage question.—Editor's note.]

German and foreign observers were watching developments closely, apparently believing important changes in the cabinet and national socialism's leadership likely.

A welter of rumors, dire predictions and fears expressed sotto voce, like those of June, 1934, accompanied progress of the offensive against "reactionaries."

The Steel Helmets were today's worst sufferers. Gov. Erich Koch, of East Prussia, between Poland and Russia, dissolved their organization, adding the East Prussian units to those already under the Nazi ban in Silesia, Mecklenburg, Anhalt, Baden and Thuringia.

Catholics, too, were affected, Chief Heinrich Himler of the secret police ordering confessional youth groups to not wear uniforms or badges or carry flags. His decree duplicated that issued earlier this week by Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior.

New attention was focused upon Naziism's anti-Semitic campaign when the official German Olympic committee disclosed there were no Jews among athletes chosen to compete for the German Olympic team. Jewish spokesmen promptly charged discrimination. Nazi officials denied it.

The flood of rumors inundating the capital included reports, entirely unconfirmed, that:

Franz Seldte, founder and leader of the Stahlhelm and Hitler's minister of labor, was about to resign.

The anti-Jewish measures indicated increasing internal and financial troubles.

Dissension had arisen among Nazi leaders over questions of policies.

These were described officially as "nonsense." Nevertheless, they served to indicate Berlin's state of mind and some observers called them "straws in the wind."

Developments in the drive against Jews included the closing of municipal baths at Karlsrue, Freidburg, Gladbach and Dortmund to them. Badd Charlotte-Brunn officially decreed that orchestras there could not play works of Jewish composers.

The Merkenfritz city council announced:

"Whoever, as a German and a fellow citizen of Merkenfritz, does any business with Jews, shelters one, flirts with one, is a traitor to the German people and its Fuehrer, and in this municipality can obtain no business and receive no municipal contracts."

Berlin Jews said the list of places closed to them had grown so long they had no place to go. This, also, Nazis denied.

Yesterday's edition of Der Front Soldat, Steel Helmet organ, was confiscated, apparently because it published a facsimile of a letter the late President Paul von Hindenburg wrote protesting, in effect, against bans on the veterans.

group to "recommend what way the cause of tolerance and religious freedom may be served."

Nazi Inquiry Pressed.

His resolution would require the committee to inquire particularly into "charges that Jewish citizens have been denied their political and civil rights and have been compelled to leave Germany." The resolution would appropriate $5,000 for the conduct of the inquiry.

Earlier in the week King, denouncing Nazi "oppressive acts" against Catholics and Jews and failure to live up to obligations to the United States, suggested an investigation to determine whether this Government should break off diplomatic relations with the Nazi regime.

Meanwhile, led by Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, a delegation of representatives of Jewish organizations called on Undersecretary of State William Phillips and asked that the United States protest officially against reported anti-Semitic activities in Germany. Phillips listened attentively to their plea, promised to give sympathetic consideration to their request and to reply later.

The drive for this Government to show its displeasure over Nazi treatment of Jews and Catholics has grown in volume within the last weeks and the pressure for action is much greater than that directed against religious persecution in Mexico.

Agitation Embarrassing.

On numerous occasions State Department officials have indicated that agitation such as that directed against the German and Mexican governments have been embarrassing to them. It is a settled principle of diplomatic practice that what a country does within its borders, affecting only its own citizens, is none of the business of a foreign power.

Thus the greatest delicacy must be exercised in handling such matters. More than one-half of the House has petitioned the President to investigate, or show in some way this Government's disapproval of restrictions against free practice of religious beliefs in Mexico. The President declined to go further than to authorize, through the congressional committee chairman, a statement that this government and the American people are sympathetic with those advocating religious tolerance in all nations.

Silent on LaGuardia.

The President declined to make any comment on the action of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York in directing that a permit to do business be refused a German masseur on the ground that Germany had discriminated against American citizens.

Aside from discriminations against American holders of German bonds in the allocation of foreign exchange for payment of interest, the State Department has no record of German mis-treatment of Americans. Until the German Embassy protests against the LaGuardia action, the State Department is keeping hands off that affair.

World Conflict Seen by Trotsky In African Row

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Oslo, Norway, July 26.—Leon Trotsky broke his long silence today to predict another world war would follow hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia.

War in Africa, the old revolutionist said, would do just what the Balkan war of 1912 did—marshal the world's powers into opposing coalitions and prepare the ground for history to repeat itself.

"It is very difficult to prophecy," he told the Norwegian labor newspaper Arbeider Bladet, "but I believe an eventual Italo-Ethiopian war is in the same relation to a new world war as the Balkan war of 1912 was to the World War of 1914.

"Three to Five Years."

"Before a new great war the powers would have to be classified and here an African war will point out the positions and mark the coalitions.

"It is impossible to say whether a world war will break out in three or five years, but we ought to focus rather on a short than a long time."

The famed exile, breaking the silence he imposed on himself when he came to Norway recently to try to regain his health, also predicted war between Japan and Soviet Russia within the year.

"Soviet Russia has its own danger in the Far East," he remarked. "The Japanese will of militaristic expansion is very large at present and Tokyo's policy is quite incalculable. War may break out in a year in spite of the Soviet's genuine will for peace.

Living Standard Low.

"At the beginning of such a war Japan may have success, but it will necessarily be losing finally on account of the interior position of Japan."

The Soviet era has seen great technical advances in Russia, Trotsky said, but he asserted the standard of living was "rather low, thus hampering the final fall of capitalism in America and Europe, the fate of which depends on their industrial productivity remaining higher than Soviet Russia's."

Trotsky, "the Napoleon of Bolshevism" who built up the powerful red army only to be exiled shortly after Nikolai Lenin's death, apparently was in much better health than when he came to Norway. He is busy writing a three-volume work on Lenin.

Rogers and Posts Shift To Horses for Vacation

Albuquerque, N. Mex., July 26 (AP). Will Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Post flew today into the pine-clad Sangre de Cristo Mountains of northern New Mexico, where they will abandon Post's airplane and adopt "old Dobbin" for a brief vacation on mountain horse trails.

The trio landed the globe-girdling flier's new low-wing monoplane on the broad field of the Daite Phillips ranch near Cimarron, tucked in the North Canyon country.

The trio will fly to the ranch of Harry Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, in the Vermejo Park area near Raton, N. Mex., after a brief visit at the Phillips ranch.

League Balks Italy In Move on Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

London, July 26.—Europe's diplomats tonight pushed eleventh-hour efforts to get Premier Benito Mussolini to accept wide economic concessions, instead of military victory in Ethiopia, but indications were Il Duce would accept nothing less than a protectorate.

That, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has said repeatedly, is unthinkable.

Great Britain awaited an official statement of Italy's claims and charges against the African nation, but it learned unofficially Il Duce would insist upon the protectorate.

The extraordinary session of the League of Nations Council to consider plans for peace has been called for July 31 or August 1.

Events Point to War.

Supporting the view that war—despite all Britain's and the league's efforts for peace—was imminent were these developments today:

1. Ethiopia was authoritatively reported unwilling to revive the Italo-Ethiopian Commission, which broke up at Scheveningen, The Netherlands, over frontier questions. Italy proposed its revival in telegrams to Addis Ababa, Geneva and other capitals yesterday.

2. The Stefani (Italian) News Agency reported from Djibouti, French Somaliland, another "bloody encounter" between Ethiopians and native troops in British Somaliland. Three British Somalis were killed, Stefani said, and grave repercussions were feared.

3. Rome, still echoing to last night's huge pro-Mussolini demonstration, in which 100,000 Fascists shouted against Ethiopia and Japan, was reported still opposed to league action in the African crisis.

4. The British government made ready to send 100 soldiers to guard its legation at Addis Ababa. Only Emperor Selassie's official permission for them to cross Ethiopian territory was awaited.

5. Italian and Ethiopian consuls at Helsingfors, Finland, reported 1,400 Finns had volunteered for African service, 1,000 for Italy and 400 for Ethiopia. No applications had been accepted, however.

Possible Way to Peace.

Only some new, positive step by Mussolini limiting Italy's demands for economic concessions can open the way to peaceful solution, informed quarters here said.

Sir Eric Drummond and Sir George Clerk, British Ambassadors in Rome and Paris, were pushing their efforts to find an avenue of escape from war, with the governments hoping against hope the Italian premier would suddenly soften his stand.

Mussolini's note voicing Italy's willingness to have the fifth and neutral member of the conciliation commission appointed—as the league contemplated when it created the body—did not affect British policy. Britain still wants full and free discussion of the crisis at Geneva.

Meanwhile, authoritative circles re-emphasized the temporary nature of Britain's ban on arms exports to both Italy and Ethiopia, announced yesterday. It will be reconsidered, they said, as soon as Italy or another nation makes any move regarded as violation of the league covenant.

Premier Talks to King.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin saw King George today, and it was reported they discussed the African dispute.

The view was expressed here that Italy's expression of willingness to revive the conciliation commission was an attempt to forestall the League Council meeting, which Ethiopia had insistently demanded.

If so, it failed. J. A. C. Avenol, league secretary general, wired council members today:

"As it does not appear from the information received that the four arbitrators reached before July 25 any of the agreements or understandings provided for by resolution, the president notifies the colleagues that the extraordinary session provided in the resolution will take place."

The family of one of Washington's newest ministers was honored this week at a reception given by members of their congregation—Ryland M. E. Church.

The Rev. K. G. Newell, who was appointed pastor of the church at the June meeting of the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Newell were principal guests of the congregation Thursday night.

The Rev. Benjamin W. Meeks, D. D., district superintendent of M. E. churches and Alfred Rodrick, of Ryland Church, were principal speakers.

Although Mr. and Mrs. Newell came to Washington a few weeks ago from Williamsport, Md., where Mr. Newell served a five-year pastorate, both are natives of the Capital. Mr. Newell began his studies for the ministry while he was a member of Langdon M. E. Church here. He graduated from Business High School and Emerson Institute of this city and later studied at Ohio Wesleyan University, where he received an A. B. degree. His theological training was taken at Boston and Harvard Universities. He received his S. T. B. degree from the Boston institution in 1927.

Mrs. Newell graduated from Eastern High School and later attended Ohio Wesleyan University. She is an accomplished musician.

At his service at 11 a. m. tomorrow, Mr. Newell will preach on "A Voice from Galilee."

Bible Play Dates Set in Virginia

Old Testament Stories to Be Dramatized.

Plans for a colorful biblical pageant dramatizing familiar stories from the Old Testament are going forward at Massanetta Springs, Va. The drama will be presented August 20, 21 and 22, as a feature of the second week of the Bible conference there.

T. Beverly Campbell, author and director of more than a dozen large historical pageants, has produced the book of the religious drama. Dr. William E. Hudson, conference manager, of Massanetta Springs, announced yesterday that Mr. Campbell will also supervise the staging of the production.

The pageant will dramatize such scenes as "Noah Hears the Voice of God," "Lot's Wife Fails to Obey," "Abraham's Trial of Faith," "Jacob and Rachel," "Jacob Wrestles With an Angel," "Moses and the Burning Bush," "Aaron and the Golden Calf," and "The Ten Commandments."

The production will be staged at night under brilliant illumination in the immense amphitheater that will seat more than 10,000 spectators.

'Singing Evangelist' To Continue Revival

Revival services, launched last week at the Church of God, Congress Heights, by the Rev. Garner J. Wilkins, of Atlanta, Ga., will continue through each night of the coming week.

The Rev. Wilkins, known as the "Singing Evangelist of Georgia," has had a versatile career that includes activities in newspaper work and in the brokerage business. He spent ten years in a brokerage house on Wall street.

Deerfield Service.

Deerfield U. B. Church will conduct its third open-air service in the church grove at 8 p. m. tomorrow. A sacred concert by the Quincy U. B. Orphanage Band and Girls' Chorus will feature the service. The band and chorus are made up of 40 boys and girls.

Mt. Rainier Rites To Join Churches

Protestant Groups Plan Union Services.

A union church service will be held by the several protestant churches of Mount Rainier Sunday night at St. John's Episcopal Church, Thirty-fourth street and Rainier avenue, at 8 o'clock.

The Rev. Fred Miller, pastor of the Mount Rainier Christian Church, will deliver the sermon, while the Rev. Walter P. Plumley, pastor of St. John's Church, will conduct the service. Music will be rendered by the combined junior and adult choirs of St. John's Church.

Other services at St. John's Sunday will be Holy Communion at 7 a. m., morning prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock and Sunday school at 10.

Richard Martin To Preach on 'The High Hat'

European Tour Lecture to Feature Christian Endeavor Meeting.

The Rev. Richard Byers Martin, acting pastor at Luther Place Memorial Church, will preach tomorrow on "The High Hat." Special musical numbers will augment the service program.

An illustrated lecture on Europe will be given by Mr. Martin at the 7 p. m. Christian Endeavor meeting. The lecture will be on Scotland, England, and Germany, where Mr Martin spent a year in study and travel.

St. Mark's Lutheran Church. The Rev. J. Luther Frantz, pastor. The pastor will preach before his 11 a. m. congregation on "Cave Dwellers."

Concordia Lutheran Church. The Rev. Charles Enders, pastor. Preaching before his German congregation at 10 a. m., and his English congregation at 11:15 a. m., Mr. Enders will discuss "The Apostolic Church and Its Significance for the Present Day," the title of a series he is presenting. Tomorrow's topic will be "The Fellowship of Believers."

A vesper service will be held tomorrow evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Gredlein, Cherrydale, Va. The Concordia Brotherhood will conduct services beginning at 5 p. m. The Rev. Henry Whiting, of Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, will preach.

Christ Lutheran Church. The Rev. Henry J. Whiting, pastor. The pastor will preach on "The Christian Standard," at 10 a. m. services tomorrow.

Union Service To Hear Pastor From Nippon

The Rev. H. W. Schenck to Speak at Mount Pleasant Church.

The Rev. Harold W. Schenck, minister of the Yokohama Union Church, in Yokohama, Japan, will precah at union services tomorrow morning in Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

It will be the first of a group of three services in Mount Pleasant Church in which the congregations of All Souls' Unitarian, the Universalist National Memorial churches, as well as of the Mount Pleasant Church, are cooperating.

Mr. Schenck, who will preach on "Earthly Compulsions and Divine Purposes," has been in Japan since July, 1930. He graduated with honors from Rutgers University and the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, and from 1923 until 1930 traveled extensively through Europe and the Orient, studying social and religious conditions in those parts of the world.

In 1926 he served as minister in charge of the American Church at The Hague. Then he was a delegate and one of the speakers at the World Conference on Faith and Order at Lausanne, Switzerland. Last year Mr. Schenck made an extensive trip through China, Korea and Manchukuo.

The Rev. Reynolds B. Boden, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, Los Angeles, Calif., will be guest speaker at the First Congregational Church tomorrow morning. His sermon topic will be "God's Seeming Indifference."

Dr. Boden came several years ago from Manchester, England. He came to America under the auspices of the Committee on Interchange of Preachers.

First Congregational Church will have no mid-week suppers during August. The regular midweek prayer meeting will be at 7:45 p. m. Thursday. Dr. H. K. Krikorian, this week's guest speaker, will discuss "Missionary Work in Turkey."

Catholic Guild Sets Outdoor Meetings

John J. O'Connor Will Lead Session Tonight.

The Catholic Evidence Guild of Washington has scheduled four public outdoor meetings for this week.

John J. O'Connor will be chairman of the first one, which will begin at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Franklin Park. Philip Hanan will be one of the speakers to discuss the "Catholic Philosophy of Life," and "The Mass."

Mr. O'Connor will also lead a meeting in Franklin Park at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening with Eugene Hoffman, Martin Barrett and Mr. Lauriola speaking.

From 2 p. m. until 4 o'clock tomorrow there will be a meeting in Judiciary Square, held under Guild auspices. Speakers will include Aloysius Collins, William Collins, William Daly, Dolor Ginchereau and Robert Mailloux. Subjects will be "The Authenticity of the Holy Gospels;" "Devotion to of Papal Infallibility; Devotion to the Mother of God," and "Religious Indifference."

The Wednesday night meeting at Judiciary Square, which will begin at 7 o'clock, will be under the direction of John G. Bowen. Edward Heffron and Francis Thornton will be speakers.

Union Services Closing.

The Rev A. H. Thompson, of the Methodist Home, will preach at tomorrow night's union service for congregations of the Chevy Chase community. The service, on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church at 7 o'clock will be the last of a series of vesper services in which six Protestant churches in that area joined.

Dr. Corey Stops On Trip Abroad To Speak Here

United Christian Leader Will Preach in National City Pulpit.

Dr. Stephen J. Corey, president of the United Christian Missionary Society of the Disciples of Christ, Indianapolis, Ind., will be guest preacher at National City Christian Church tomorrow morning.

With his son, Jack, Dr. Corey is en route to Leicester, England, where they will attend the second world convention of the denomination.

Recognized as a clear and forceful writer and a strong and popular speaker, Dr. Corey comes to the Capital as one of the missionary leaders in the Christian world today. He is the author of many books on missionary activities and has visited many lands. For several years he was a member of the committee of reference and council representing the Protestant mission boards of North America. He is also a member of the International Missionary Council and has been since its organization in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1919.

The Takoma Park Christian Church congregation will attend the National City services tomorrow morning in a body to hear Dr. Corey.

Clifford H. Jope, pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church, with Mrs. Jope and a party of 26 Washingtonians, will leave the city tomorrow afternoon for New York, where they will board the S. S. Britannic Monday for England. The party also will attend the second world conference at Leicester. More than 400 American delegates will sail on the same ship.

The Washington members of the party include: Mrs. Charles Hughes and daughter, Jane, 3802 Veazey street northwest; Mrs. Ella Moses, Continental Hotel; Mrs. Dora Shaeffer, 1927 H street northeast; Mrs. Jessie Ridings and Miss Eva Burton, 619 E street northeast; Miss Daisy E. Phipps and Miss Blanche Evans, 1225 Talbert street southeast; Mrs. Mae Vinson and son Melville, 317 Tenth street northeast; Mrs. Marcy Gill, 1009 Douglas street northeast; Mrs. B. E. Obaugh, 120 C street northeast; Mrs. Bertha Hockaday, Park Central Apartments; Mrs. Grace Hobbs, 3819 Seventh street northwest; Mrs. G. M. Lawhorn, 6309 Georgia street Chevy Chase, Md., Mrs. W. H. Haswell, Atlantic, Va.

Presenting a farewell sermon tomorrow morning Mr. Jope will preach on "There Go the Ships."

The Ninth Street pulpit will be occupied during Mr. Jope's absence by several guest pastors. The Rev. P. A. Cave will preach August 4 and 25. Charles Brooks will speak on August 11. The Youth Council of the church will have charge of the services on August 18, and Merwin Webster will preach on September 1.

Columbia Heights Christian Church. The Rev. A. P. Wilson, pastor. Tennyson's "In Memoriam" will be the topic which Mr. Wilson will discuss tomorrow morning in presenting the last of his sermons on "Christian Messages from Great Poems." After a devotional period in the evening, the pastor will give a stereopticon lecture on "The Blue and the Gray."

Series Continues At Lincoln Church

Dr. Brooks Will Speak on New Testament.

Dr. R. W. Brooks, pastor of Lincoln Congregational Temple, colored, will continue his series of sermons on "Men of the New Testament," at his 11 a. m. service tomorrow. His topic will be "The Man Who Saw Jesus Die."

The Men's Brotherhood will meet at 10 a. m. to hear Dr. Edwin J. Watson, who will speak on the subject, "Some Things to Watch During This Season."

Dr. Benjamin Brawley, of Howard University, will preach tomorrow morning's sermon at the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church. The Christian Endeavor will meet at 6 p. m. and the evening service will be at 8 o'clock.

Second Baptist Church, colored. The Rev. J. L. S. Holloman, pastor. The pastor's sermon subject tomorrow morning will be "Musing on the Tomorrows." At the evening service he will preach on "Visions of God."

Services at Relief Mission.

"Debt of Honor" will be the subject of Maj. H. Mills Eroh at services of the Volunteers of America tomorrow afternoon in the relief mission at 471 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The Rev. G. W. Raines will conduct the services.

Gala Program to End Xavier's Church Fete

The St. Francis Xavier's Church Carnival, which has been in progress this week at Twenty-seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, will come to an end this evening. A gala program has been arranged under the direction of James Hayes, general supervisor. Assisting him throughout the week have been William Zerega, jr., vice chairman, and Dorothy Martin, secretary.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow in Bethlehem Chapel. Daily services there will include Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m., and evening prayer at 4 o'clock.

The Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, dean of Washington, will be at the cathedral in August, and will preach at several of the Sunday services. Dean Bratenahl has been at his summer home in Gloucester, Mass., the last several weeks.

St. Luke's P. E. Church. Holy Communion at 7 a. m. will be followed by Sunday school at 9:30 a. m., with morning prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock.

All Saints' Episcopal Church. The Rev. Henry Teller Cooke, rector. The Rev. Edward Slater Dunlap, former canon of Washington Cathedral, will preach the 11 a. m. sermon tomorrow.

Christian Science Subject Is 'Truth'

"Truth" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Psalms 31:5: "Thou Hast Redeemed Me, O Lord, God of Truth."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "I have chosen the way of truth: thy judgments have I laid before me." Psalms 119:30.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The purpose and motive to live aright can be gained now. This point won, you have started as you should" (page 326).

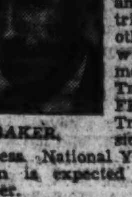
The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

MORE than 500 of the 1,600 employes at NRA who have received their dismissal notices have been placed in other agencies, it was learned yesterday. Most of the 500 have gone to Resettlement Administration and Rural Electrification, while others now are with Procurement Division, Treasury; RFC, FERA, Federal Trade Commission and Works Progress. National Youth Administration is expected to absorb a number.



BAKER.

Harris & Ewing.

BRADISH J. CARROLL, JR., special assistant to the administrator, NRA, who is assisting dismissed NRA employes to find positions in other Government agencies.

It is estimated that $3,000,000 already has been saved in the annual payroll at NRA by the reduction in personnel.

While awaiting legislation on the possible merger with Federal Trade Commission, notices of dismissal are being drawn up daily.

In the office of Bradish J. Carroll, jr., special assistant to the administrator, first consideration is being given to qualifications and need of persons slated for dismissal. It is under Mr. Carroll's direction that transfers to other departments are being made.

With sleeves rolled up on these hot days, he labors long hours, listening patiently to each case. However, hard work and long hours have been his lot ever since he was the first person to be sworn into service at NRA, on June 16, 1933, and on through the past two years as he built up one of the most efficient and loyal staffs in the New Deal.

Mr. Carroll's success in this has been in no little measure due to his loyalty to the President and his accord with the Administration. Friction like that between certain other New Deal officials and the White House or the Capitol has not been evident in the former NRA chief clerk's office.

The newest unit in the National Federation of Federal Employes, Local No. 532, at Bismarck, N. D., already has made a substantial increase in membership, it was said last night at NFFE headquarters.

Agriculture Postettes.

D. A. Spencer has returned from a trip to Idaho, Montana and other Western States in connection with experiment station work. Dr. H. C. McPhee, chief of the Animal Husbandry Division, is back from an official visit to Brooksville, Fla. Mrs. Helen Anderson, accompanied by her husband, is on a Western tour, which includes the San Diego exposition and points in the Canadian Rockies.

Miss Isabelle Allen has been confined to her home by illness. Miss Elizabeth Sommers is spending her vacation in the West and will visit Glacier National Park and Alaska. O. G. Hankins left this week on an official trip to Chicago and to visit the experiment stations in Iowa, Michigan and Tennessee. Miss Cecil Stigall (F) has returned from a trip to Atlantic City.

"Come in."

Upon opening the door, the fugitive, seeing the special agents, said: "I guess I am in the wrong apartment." This remark met the reply: "No you are not. Come on in."

At this time the visitor is still the guest of the Government.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 12 and 2 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F. Loew's Fox (stage, 12 Aristocrats with Francette Malloy and other acts; screen, Spencer Tracy and Virginia Bruce in "The Murder Man"); or to P. Loew's Palace (Shirley Temple and John Boles in "Curley Top"); or to C. Loew's Columbia (third week of William Powell and Louise Rainer in "Escapade").

May Reopen Examinations.

Few disabled veterans of the World War, suffering from disabilities connected with their service, and now outside the Federal service, realize the preference to which they are entitled under the present regulations.

Such a veteran may reopen any civil service examination which he is qualified to take, once every three months until he is able to pass with a mark of 60, whereupon he is placed at the top of the eligible list, below only such disabled veterans of similar status, and widows of veterans, who obtain higher marks.

Reservations are reported going fast for the first annual dinner dance of the employes of Securities Exchange Commission Thursday night at the Shoreham Hotel. Handling the arrangements are E. F. Tancer, D. W. Waight, M. L. Culbertson, J. L. Haynes, A. A. Carretta, James Hindle and R. T. McElvenny.

Employes Look to Trip.

All indications point to a successful event on the night of July 29 when the District Federation of Federal Employes Unions will hold its annual moonlight boat trip down the Potomac. Proceeds of the affair will go to the educational and research fund of the federation.

Reservations may be made through the following members of the committee in charge:

Mrs. Ollie Greer, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, chairman; Mrs. Sue H. Inge, Collections and Accounts, Treasury; W. E. Hoffheins, Office Quartermaster General, War; Miss Maude Miller, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; William Sanger, Lighthouse Service, Commerce; Elmer Thompson, Office of Information, Agriculture; W. F. Kesmodel, Navy Yard, and Charles Kothe, A. G. O., War.

FSRC Expenditures Outlined.

Q. What is the sum expended by FSRC, and what per cent of it goes to overhead? G. S. (C).

A. In 1934 $38,982,900 worth of commodities was distributed while the estimate for 1935 is $75,103,450. If your term "overhead" means administrative costs, that was $245,722 for seven months in 1934.

Q. I have a bottle of medicine I suspect of containing a strong narcotic. What shall I do with it? MRS. W.

A. Certainly don't drink it! We suggest that you submit the medicine to the Food and Drug Administration, 216 Thirteenth street southwest, for analysis.

Greeters to Banquet Auxiliary President

A testimonial dinner in honor of Mrs. Eva C. Ruff, the new international president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Hotel Greeters of America, will be held tonight at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Ruff is the first resident of Washington to hold this position.

Harry Somerville, mananging director of the Willard, will officiate as host and toastmaster.

Rev. Curran Appointed Eucharist Press Head

The Rev. Joseph L. Curran, of Rosedale, Md., has been appointed director of publicity for the Eucharistic Congress in the archdiocese of Baltimore, it was announced yesterday.

What Today Means to You

"Leo."

IF JULY 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:45 a. m. to 1:45 p. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 5:45 to 7:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

Be careful you do not give unintentional offense this day through a careless choice of words. There is every indication it will be an auspicious day for making social contacts, indoor sports or entertainments, as well as for places offering diversion to the general public. Magnetic influences conducive to drawing crowds are likely to exist. Careful attention should be given to personal apparel because clothing displaying poor or flashy taste, may have a disturbing effect on those with conservative ideas regarding dress.

Ears will probably be sensitive to discordant sounds on this date, as carefully modulated voices will find favor and loud tones are liable to cause irritability. Indiscretion is the food upon which gossip thrives, so the wise will be discreet, especially in public places. Married and engaged couples, and those seeking full possession of someone's heart, will have nothing to regret, if they will remember true love is best expressed by actions rather than words.

If a woman and July 27 is your birthday, avoid trying to impose your own personality or ideas on others, if you wish to avoid discordant conditions at home and abroad. To gain popularity, you must respect the rights of other people to have their own views on any subject. Money probably will come to you from an unexpected source. Be careful you are not talked out of it. If you do not close your eyes to it you will find a great deal of love offered to you in your daily life. You are systematic and painstaking in all you do.

Therefore, you should be very successful in whatever you undertake. Clerical or office work, teaching, writing short stories or acting as a professional buyer are likely to provide the right medium of activity for you. You should make a man a very fine wife, and be deeply appreciated by him.

The child born on July 27 may, when it reaches its majority, show preference for a professional career rather than commercial life. It might be a mistake to interfere with its ideas on this subject.

If a man and July 27 is your natal day, you should be very popular. Your retentive memory, preserverance and energy, undoubtedly will be well rewarded in due course of time. Chemistry, engineering, newspaper work, printing, publishing, and manufacturing may be directly or indirectly responsible for your success.

Successful people born on July 27:
Thomas Say, naturalist.
Eben N. Horsford, chemist.
Cyrus Thomas, scientist.
Theodore B. Comstock, geologist.
John Warren, physician and surgeon.
Alexander Macomb, merchant.

Dillinger Mobster Seized in Robbery

Dick Ray Captured, Shot After Peoria, Ill., Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 26.—Police said tonight the gunman wounded and arrested following a robbery and gun battle in the heart of the business district today had been identified by Washington authorities as a former member of the old Dillinger gang. The prisoner was identified as Dick Ray, 52, recently released from the Michigan City (Ind.) Penitentiary after serving a term for a holdup in Terre Haute, Ind.

A telegram from the Federal Bureau of Investigation at Washington to local police said that Ray formerly was connected with the marauding gang of the late John Dillinger.

He was the only one of the four men who participated in the daylight holdup who was captured. The loot was a $2,060 pay roll.

George Backes, pay-roll guard, was wounded. The pay roll was being taken to a Peoria tavern from the Commercial Merchants' National Bank. Backes was near death, physicians said, with 30 to 35 shotgun slugs in his body.

Sandwiched By Dangers.

Today we shake our heads sympathetically over the sad story of the man who drowned because he was afraid of burning. A nonswimmer, he was panic-stricken when fire broke out on board his ship. The fire was gaining rapidly and it would take several seconds to grab a life-preserver. There was a good chance that he could reach a life preserver before the fire reached him—yet in his dread of the fire he forgot his fear of the water and sad to tell was never seen again.

Many a bridge hand has been sunk without trace because the declarer, fearing danger in one direction, unthinkingly leaped to certain destruction in the other.

Making Full Use of the Dummy.

Making full use of dummy's entries is often more necessary than the apparently safer but actually hopeless course of extracting trumps. Before a good player leads he always considers whether that suit could not just as well be led from the other hand and some more important use should therefore be made of the right to lead from the hand that has taken the last trick. In this respect the factor of safety must sometimes be sacrificed to the needs of time.

1—A takeout double, indicating greater strength than a simple rebid.

2—Questionable with only two spades, but North has a difficult choice.

3—Partner's response has indicated a possible minimum hand. South, however, can make game with North holding very little.

4—Respecting partner's strong bidding, North correctly values his cards as worth a try for game.

The Play.

West led the Ace of hearts and continued with the deuce. This lead of a doubleton suit headed by an Ace is usually a poor choice, but in this case it rattled declarer into "jumping overboard." With West's lead marked as a doubleton, South won the heart trick in his own hand with the King and rushed to extract three rounds of trumps forgetting that he needed two entries to the North hand to take the club finesse. The result was that with only the Queen of hearts for entry, he could take the club finesse only once and when the Ace failed to drop the King, was set one trick, losing one heart, one club, and two diamonds.

Crosby Family Enjoying Spacious Summer Home

Bungalow Is One of Most Beautiful in Spring Lake, N. J.; Once Was Owned by Caruso's Widow; the Distlers to Visit There.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

One of the most attractive summer homes is that of Mr. and Mrs. John Crosby, at Spring Lake, N. J., where, with their children, they are spending the season. Mr. and Mrs. Crosby, who make their winter home at the old Bradley estate on Wisconsin avenue, departed in May for Spring Lake, where they have been entertaining guests during the past month.

The house at Spring Lake looks like any other shingled bungalow at a summer resort, from the outside, but inside it is unexpectedly large, which is necessary for the Crosbys, with their family of five children. The house belonged to Mrs. Dorothy Benjamin Caruso, widow of the famous tenor, Enrico Caruso. The living room is two stories high, and there Caruso used to sing when he was courting his future wife. Across the street there was a hospital in those days and the famous artist afforded great pleasure to the patients who could hear his voice from the cottage. The room now is decorated with paneled walls, a huge fireplace and deep, chintz-covered chairs and couches, with plenty of convenient tables and lamps. On one side the room opens to a wide porch, and on the other to a tiled terrace furnished with red and white garden furniture of chromium and leather. A spacious garden is beyond the porch. The dining room is finished in a modernistic manner, with white leather chairs and a buffet decorated with bowls of glistening silver fruits. In one wing there are charming guest rooms, also opening into the garden, and in the other wing plenty of bedrooms for the family and a library where the children spend their evenings and where Mr. Crosby works during the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Crosby spend most of their time at the Beach and Tennis Club. All in the family are splendid swimmers, Mrs. Crosby doing her 12 lengths in the pool each morning. In the cottage there is a schedule tacked on a wall giving the hours that the car leaves for the beach club, when it returns for luncheon and the hour of departure for the afternoon session. All the children know that if they are not on hand when the car goes, unless they have a good reason, they will be left behind.

Mrs. Crosby, who is tiny and blonde, and unbelievably the mother of these sturdy children, wears charming sports frocks of white or pastel shades, very becoming to her sun-tan, and when she entertains for cocktails, as she does frequently, she wears soft, floating chiffon gowns of delicate shades.

Mrs. Walter Distler, who with her two small children has been at the Homestead at Hot Springs, Va., during July, will go to Spring Lake early in August, and until she finds a suitable house, will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Crosby. Mr. Distler will join her at the resort frequently.

Dorothy Martin Weds Dr. Titus In Martinsburg

Couple Married at Home of Bride's Parents; Leave for Trip North.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 25.—Miss Dorothy Marguerite Martin, of Martinsburg, became the bride of Dr. Theron Amsley Titus at a ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Martin, yesterday morning.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Louise Martin, and Dr. Norman S. Smith, of Charles Town, W. Va., was the best man. A program of nuptial music was played preceding the ceremony by Mrs. Elizabeth Livers Small. The marriage service was read by the Rev. Ernest S. Worden, pastor of Winchester Avenue Christian Church.

Guests at the wedding included only the immediate families and intimate friends. A wedding breakfast followed, after which Dr. and Mrs. Titus left for a motor trip to the North.

Mrs. Titus has studied at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore. Dr. Titus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Charles Titus, of Ohio, has been practicing here for several years. He was a premedical student at the University of Missouri, and was graduated from Kirksville College of Osteopathy and Surgery. He spent two years of surgical internship at Laughlin and K. C. O. S. Clinical Hospital, Kirksville, Mo.

Two-Purpose Cream Placed On the Market

Fragrant Product Removes Dirt and Builds Up Tissues.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

WHEN one has to look at as many cold creams as we do, he grows a little blasé about cosmetics. That is why it is particularly exciting to stumble upon a cleansing cream such as we found the other day in a prowl through downtown stores. For here's a skin cleanser that's different. In the first place, it's put out by a woman who for years has been making a scientific study of women's skins. For a long time, she has been trying to concoct a cream which will do two things; remove dirt, and at the same time build up tissue and ward off wrinkles. After years of trying different combinations, she has at last evolved a cold cream which accomplishes both these important objectives. Her rich, fragrant product is derived from pure, health-giving mineral and vegetable oils. The minerals penetrate deep down into the skin, acting as a tonic and builder to the delicate tissues underneath. By laying the foundation for a firm and healthy skin, their vitalizing energy power wards off those tell-tale wrinkles and sagging muscles. So many women have dry, sallow-looking skins, when they can so easily be prevented. Just a few minutes every night with the right kind of cream can do wonders toward giving your face that healthy, pink glow of youth. It's never too late to begin, so start in right now with a jar of this cool, rich, and fragrant cleansing cream. You will be surprised at the difference just a few days will make. Another great advantage of this cream is that it contains no animal fat, as so many of them do, so you need never worry about its going rancid. It comes in three sizes, at $1, $1.75 and $3.

A Book on Furniture.

HAVE YOU a hobby? If not, why not start one? Aside from the fun you'll get out of riding your hobby horse, there's no better way to become an authority on one certain subject. And we can't think of a more interesting hobby than that of the study of furniture. The more you know about the different styles and periods, the more joy you will get out of your surroundings, and the more attractive you will be able to make them. An F street bookstore is featuring this week a perfectly grand book filled with all the facts one most wants to know about the different styles and periods. Since the information is general, rather than detailed, this book should serve as an admirable introduction to furniture high lights for those who don't know very much about the subject. It's profusely illustrated, so that you will have no difficulty in telling a Chippendale from a Sheraton. Formerly this book sold for $15; now the price has been slashed to $5.95.

Shoulder Shower Gadget.

In a downtown department store is a gadget which, unlike most gadgets, is really useful. The latest thing in bathroom accessories, it's called a shoulder shower. It consists of a rubber tube plus a little circle thing perforated with holes. You attach tube to bathtub faucet, slip the circle around your neck, and there you are—all set for a shower without danger of wetting your hair. It leaves the hands free for vigorous massage, and doesn't splash all over the place. With this convenient attachment, you needn't worry about craning and twisting your neck and shoulders into painful positions to avoid ruining your coiffure. It's particularly good for summer use, when a daily shower is the high spot of the day. The price is only 97 cents.

Unusual Value Specials.

An F street store has on sale this week some specials which will gladden the hearts of those who like unusual values. First on the list is a big box of fragrant dusting powder, formerly priced at $1, now reduced to 49 cents. It comes in gardenia and carnation, and is so cleverly scented that you will feel like a walking garden. The powder is packed in a most attractive gift box, covered with nosegays in pastel shades. The second item is some very fine quality rouge which is being discontinued, and so is reduced from $1 to 79 cents. It comes in a stunning compact in blue, white, and gold enamel.

Save shopping time by knowing where to go for cosmetics mentioned in this column. A 2-cent stamp will bring a list of more than 20 highly recommended preparations, with the names of the shops selling them. Write Ruth Anne Davis, in care of The Washington Post.

Increase in Consumption Of Sugar Is Reported

The world's sweet tooth is growing bigger every year, says a bulletin from the Canadian National Railways.

The annual average consumption of sugar for the 4 years, 1931-34, inclusive, was 25,561,000 tons, an increase of 3.36 per cent over the 5-year period, 1926-30, according to the bulletin.

Cuba has dropped considerably in the world supply of sugar, the bulletin continued. Her proportion at present stands 9 per cent, it said, whereas in 1925 it was 21 per cent.

Music for the Masses Is Miss Brico's Object

Soft of speech and quiet of manner, Miss Antonia Brico, guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra this week, is not the temperamental, fiery Bohemian you might expect a famous conductor to be.

Americans Not Indifferent to Concerts, but Can't Afford Them, Guest Conductor Holds; She Hits Prejudice Against Women Artists.

By Dudley Harmon.

SMALL, QUIET, AND GENTLE in appearance, Miss Antonia Brico, the woman conductor who has been thrilling Washingtonians as the leader of the National Symphony this week, is something of a surprise to the interviewer who expects all musicians to be fiery, long-haired, and Bohemian.

For the leader of a large orchestra, Miss Brico is amazingly small. She has soft brown eyes, rather prominent features, and wavy, bobbed hair. Not until she speaks, do you begin to sense that here is a person of unusual force and personality. When she talks, her voice is low and quiet, but every word is uttered with such sincerity and conviction that you say to yourself, "This is a person out of the ordinary."

And you are right. If Miss Brico did not have the will and determination of a pioneer, she would never have reached her present position in the musical world. It has not been easy. Miss Brico began her career as a pianist, but, to use her own words, "The piano did not satisfy me," and she soon switched to conducting. She studied in Europe for five years, under the best conductors, before appearing in public. During this period, Miss Brico lived and breathed music, working like a Trojan. She obtained her first practical experience in leading orchestras in Poland and Latvia. Since returning to America, she has devoted most of her time and energy to building up her orchestra composed exclusively of women.

Seeks Chance for Women.

Miss Brico's orchestra was created to give women a chance to prove their mettle in the world of music. Remembering her own early struggles for recognition, she is convinced that it's still something of a man's world as far as music is concerned.

"Women have the capacity to be just as good musicians as men," said Miss Brico, "but there exists in the musical world a definite prejudice against them. If a man and woman artist are equally good, you can usually depend on it that the man will be chosen every time. Why does this prejudice exist? Mainly because women have never had a chance to show what they can do in this field. Out of 100 men, 5 are likely to be excellent musicians. Out of a like number of women, just as many are potential musicians, but probably fewer than 5 will develop their talent to its limit. This is because it requires too great a struggle to get anywhere."

Miss Brico has another ambition in addition to that of making the path easier for women musicians. She is eager to take music out of the luxury class and make it available to every pocketbook.

Sees Great Potential Audience.

She believes that in this country there is a great audience of potential music enthusiasts. The fact that hundreds were turned away from her last concert would seem to bear out this opinion. It is only a question of presenting programs at a price within the reach of everyone, according to Miss Brico. This can be done, she said, only when the capacity is such as to accommodate a sufficiently large number of persons to lower the price of every ticket. Although Americans have the reputation of being indifferent to music, Miss Brico believes that this is only because concert tickets in this country are ordinarily in the expensive class.

A location such as the concert setting at Memorial Bridge is ideal for inexpensive concerts, Miss Brisco believes. In the first place, the seating capacity is large enough to accommodate a good-sized crowd. Then, too, in the summer, people want to get outdoors, and this affords them an ideal opportunity.

"I wish you'd call attention to the fact that I'm an American," said Miss Brico. "So many people take it for granted on hearing my name that I'm Spanish or Italian. But I'm American born and bred."

After a day or two more in Washington, Miss Brico expects to leave for the West to rest. She was armed with a camera yesterday, evidence that she has been taking advantage of her visit to photograph sights of the Capital.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Those Who Seek Employment Should Approach Proper Agencies.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: It has occurred to me that I might receive the necessary lift by writing through your column to the readers of your valuable paper.

• • • •

I am a middle-aged woman who needs a position and needs it very, very much—more than I care to write. Through no fault of my own, I am without work. I am a housekeeper; can serve as companion, housekeeper, or in any position along these lines.

• • • •

The urge to write to you is overwhelmingly strong, for I feel so sure that some one needs me as badly as I need them, if only we can find each other. I am a woman of high character and high standard of living, trustworthy, kind, good disposition and willing to work. If anyone is interested, will they please communicate with me through you? Also, will the kind people who do not need help in their own families, kindly add their prayers to mine that a door may open for me and that I shall find work? Sincerely, O. C.

Out of Our Line.

DEAR O. C.: With so many agencies already in existence for bringing together potential employers and employes, it should be obvious to all that no real purpose would be served by my attempting to conduct, through this column, an employment agency.

There are many excellent commercial agencies in this ctiy; there is the free, Federal Employment Center on Indiana avenue; there are the classified advertising columns in the daily newspapers, and there are the various social agencies which are pleased to furnish work-relief whenever and wherever possible.

• • • •

I do not wish to be unkind, nor to seem non-cooperative, in making this statement. But in view of the fact that 90 per cent of my mail, recently, is composed of appeals for aid in finding employment, I think it high time my readers and I reached an understanding on this point.

• • • •

If any persons should respond to your foregoing appeal for employment, I shall be glad indeed to forward the information to you. But henceforth I must ask all who seek employment to look to the proper agencies for guidance. Providing employment is not exactly within my province whereas it is the whole reason for being of other agencies which I have listed above.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Fewer Women Work in Reich

Proportion Employed Drops From 37.2 to 31.9% Since 1932.

THE REPORT that women workers are being sent back to the kitchen has been reduced to actual figures, according to a bulletin recently issued by the German Labor Office.

The proportion of women employes dropped from 37.2 per cent of the total number of employed persons at the beginning of 1933 to 31.9 per cent at the end of April this year. The number of registered unemployed women fell from 20.2 per cent of the total number of jobless persons in July, 1933, to 7.3 per cent at the end of June, 1935.

Because of the definite campaign launched by the Nazis to eliminate women from shops and factories, the reduction in the number of women employes would have been even greater but for the fact that the growing bureaucratic machine demands a steadily increasing number of women stenographers in both governmental and private offices, the bulletin said.

Meal Planning Is Facilitated By Baking Ham

Wrap Leftover in Waxed Paper and Place It in Refrigerator.

DINNER MENU FOR TODAY.
Hot tomato bouillon with whipped cream garnish
Ham slices baked in orange sauce
Buttered green beans
Waldorf salad
Raisin bran muffins
Iced tea Milk (for children)

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOU ARE WILLING to light up your oven for a few hours and then enjoy the fruits of your labor for several days to come, bake a whole or half ham. The present-day cures for ham have made it possible to bake a ham without soaking or parboiling. All you have to do now is to put the ham, rind and all into a very low oven (300° F.) and forget about it until the time is up. Figure your time basis of 22-25 minutes to the pound. You can put the ham into the oven right after lunch so that the baking can be accomplished and you will not suffer from the heat of the oven. Then about three-quarters of an hour before dinner time you can come back to the kitchen, remove the rind from the ham, rub it with brown sugar which has been mixed with some of the ham drippings and a few grains of dry mustard, stick it elaborately with cloves in a diamond pattern and finish baking the crust. Now cook up a hot vegetable and stair up a crisp cold salad and your dinner is ready.

The part of the ham that is not served for the first meal can be wrapped in waxed paper and kept in the refrigerator to use at a later date. Be sure to give your leftover ham this careful wrapping of waxed paper otherwise the ham will become dry.

Here is another way of cooking the ham. The butt, shank and center part may be cut apart (your butcher will do this). This way you may cook the separate parts on different days, broiling the center cuts, baking the butt with tart green apple sauce or pineapple juice, and simmering the shank end for cold slicing, sandwich filling or salads.

Cold sliced ham with a filling vegetable salad and some hot biscuits or muffins make a satisfying hot-weather dinner. Ham slices in hot fruit sauce, with a hot vegetable and cold salad is a simple combination for a cooler summer evening. Jellied ham loaf served on a bed of shredded lettuce makes an intriguing company luncheon dish. And a ham salad will please even father, who so often is adverse to anything that sounds like a salad.

Jellied Ham Loaf.

2 cups finely diced ham
1½ tablespoons granulated gelatine
¼ cup boiling water
¼ cup vinegar
2 hard cooked eggs, sliced
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup diced celery
1 chopped pimiento
½ chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons finely minced onion

Soak the gelatine in cold water, then dissolve in the boiling water. Add the vinegar and salt. Cool. When mixture begins to jell, mix in all the other ingredients excepting the eggs. Rinse a mold in cold water, arrange the egg slices on bottom and sides, then pour in the ham mixture. Set in cold place until firm. Serve on bed of shredded lettuce. Serves 6.

Ham Slices in Orange Sauce.

Cut ham in ⅛-inch slices for serving. Arrange in overlapping slices in a flat baking pan or casserole, cover with fruit sauce and let bake 20 minutes. Serve in the sauce.

Orange Sauce.

Mix ½ cup brown sugar with 1 teaspoon cornstarch, ½ cup water, juice of two oranges and the grated rind of ½ orange. Bring to a boil and pour over ham slices. A few small pieces of pineapple are an addition to the sauce.

Educator Appointed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 26. — George P. Dudwig, principal of the junior and high schools at Hedgesville, W. Va., has been appointed a member of the legislative committee of the State Education Association by the president, H. L. White. His term is from July 1 to June 30, 1937.

Functions of Thymus Puzzle Science

X-Ray Treatments Reduce Enlarged Gland and Minimize Danger.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE are some structures in the body that have refused to disclose their secrets, while other organs and glands have admitted the searchlight of science to a limited extent only.

One of the most puzzling glands is known as the thymus, which lies in the front part of the body where the neck joins the trunk. On the average it weighs a little more than one-third of an ounce at birth. Although it doubles in size during the first five years of life, its growth thereafter is slower. After puberty (the period of sexual development) the gland gradually shrinks, decreasing in weight until in the older decades but a remnant remains.

In composition the gland resembles lymph tissue somewhat similar to the tonsils, and it is probable that its true function has not as yet been determined. Hammar, a Swedish writer, believes that the gland cells have something to do with the production of antitoxin whenever infection attacks the body. Other authors state that it produces an internal secretion that is related to body growth and the development of bones. It is found to be enlarged in patients with Graves' disease (exophthalmic goiter) and sometimes when disease of the adrenals exists. Some authorities are of the opinion that the thymus is closely related to the sympathetic nervous system and recognize its influence on the digestive tract.

Just as other glands may enlarge, so overgrowths of the thymus are occasionally encountered. This is particularly observed in the condition commonly known as status lymphaticus, although the very existence of this state is denied by many physicians. They believe that sudden deaths, in which the gland is said to be overgrown, are due to other undiscovered factors having no relation to the thymus.

There are certain cases, however, in which the gland is obviously increased in size and in which the children present symptoms indicating excess amounts of lymph tissue in other parts of the body.

Operations Risky; Shocks to Nervous System Should Be Avoided.

We may conclude then that as far as our knowledge goes the thymus gland exists as a part of the lymph system of the body; it begins to atrophy after puberty, and its function has not yet been determined. In order to guard against untoward accidents in children operative procedures should not be attempted until after the youngster has had a period of preparation sufficient to bring nutrition to the highest possible level. It is also well to test children for signs of excessive sensitivity, so that shock shall not appear suddenly and find those responsible for the child's welfare unprepared to meet this type of emergency.

Sudden deaths in children do occur and until we know positively to the contrary it will be well to respect an enlarged thymus. Fortunately one or two X-ray treatments will reduce the gland in size and minimize its potentially dangerous character.

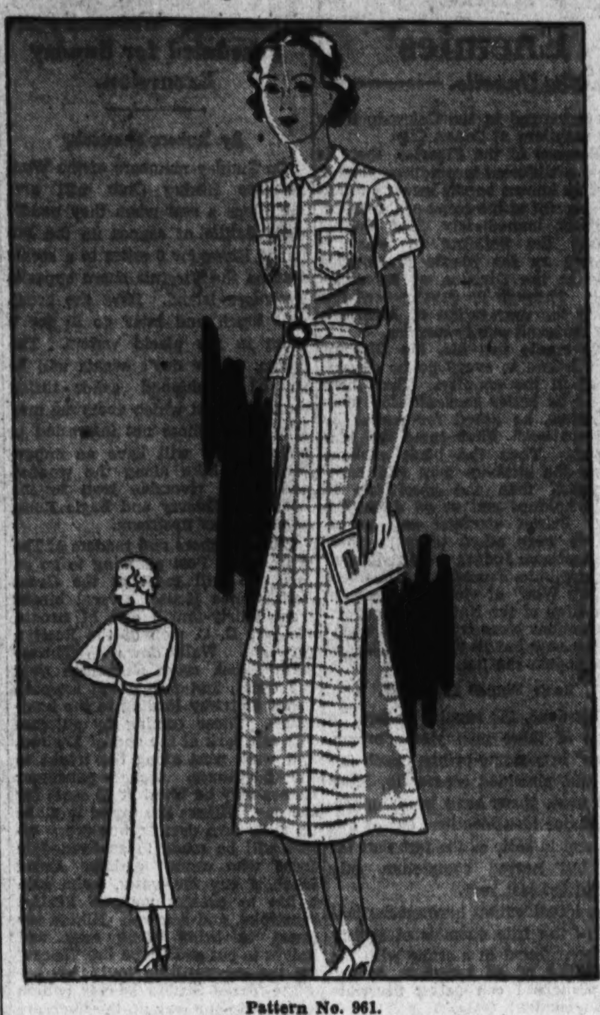
Cool Frock May Be Saved For Early Autumn Days



Pattern No. 961.

IT'S A ONE-PIECE FROCK with a peplum, and a smart, wide skirt. Made up in a tissue gingham or a pique, it is as fresh and cool as every summer frock should be. You will use this pattern now for summer, but save it for its early autumn version, with long sleeves, peplum omitted, and a deep, double collar. A smart slide fastener closing may be used instead of the vestee shown above.

The pattern is guaranteed accurate in size, perfect in cut. For sizes 14 to 42. Size 18 (36) requires 4⅛ yards of 35-inch fabric for the version shown.

Nomadic Life Seen In U. S. Eventually

THE AMERICA of the future maybe a country of nomads, predicts O. T. Kreusser, director of the Museum of Science and Industry of Chicago, according to Science Service.

"These nomads will live in automobiles and have no permanent residence," Mr. Kreusser said. "I base my beliefs on the present trends in buying cars and homes."

The day may come, he said, when many of us will solve the family problem of the higher cost of living and the reduced net income by spending the winter in the South, migrating with the birds and living on wheels, thus avoiding the existing dual cost and investment of home and automobile.

Why Do Women Work?

Why do women work? A group of English psychologists say it is to fill in the time until they find husbands. They arrived at this solution after studying 231 women secretarial workers on behalf of the National Institute of Industrial Psychology.

Secretary? No! Cabinet Wife Explains Why

'They'd Cramp My Style,' Says Mrs. Cummings, Noted for Parties.

MRS. HOMER CUMMINGS, Cabinet wife fast becoming famous for interesting parties, yesterday told how she does it—without a social secretary.

"It would cramp my style!" firmly ruled the gay and original wife of the Attorney General on the social secretary system of the Capital.

"I was told I had to have a social secretary, but I just knew what one of them would say to any note of mine, 'No Cabinet wife would ever write a letter like that.' And then one of us would have to stop right there.

"And I couldn't expect a social secretary to approve one of my guest lists, with New Dealers, old dealers, artists, authors, actors, and preachers all mixed up to make an argument."

So in "season" and out, Mrs. Cummings keeps right on writing her own breezy notes, inviting, this time of year guests to dinner at tables on terraces under the trees of Ruthven, their estate overlooking Rock Creek Park.

"My idea of a party," said Mrs. Cummings, of the dark, distinctive bob, "is just to get some interesting people together.

"I didn't change my method by one iota when I came from Greenwich, Conn., to Washington.

"Washington society is made a bug-a-boo, they try to scare you to death here about what to do. If you are that self-consciuos, your party will be a complete fiasco.

"I don't see why you should get all in a dither about it. All you do is add and multiply. The same thing you do at home for 30 people, you can do here for 300. It's easy if you like people, and I do—and so does Mr. Cummings.

"I told my husband we wouldn't have any trouble balancing our budget. When I came here, I just took two ciphers off his income, and added them to the number of people we entertain. That took care of those two ciphers. Where we had one guest in Greenwich, we have a hundred here.

"As for seating, I know how it is done. Once in a while I call up the protocol division on seating a visiting diplomat. That's about all."

She gave some of her party precepts:

"The perfect dinner is eight—for around-the-table conversation. But you'd never get through in Washington that way. We ask 12.

"Centerpieces must be low, so you can see who your opponent is."

"Serve coffee at the table when the argument's too interesting to break up."

Feet Expansion Noted As Result of Athletics

By the Associated Press.

This athletic age is telling on the feet, says Ruth Kerr, of New York, the only woman in the country who styles shoes for both men and women.

"The average woman's foot has expanded from 5½ to size 7," she said, "and the average man's foot size is 10½, compared with 9½ in the old days."

She also said that women are getting more conservative in their shoes, while men's shoes are running to colors.

"IT says here—a car for every pocketbook—and so there is. Here are some $100 to $200 and $250 to $350, all the way to $1,000 and up. Wait 'till I show these to Ned. Like as not we could get one of those low priced cars to run into the city with." Indeed you could. Just watch this page—you'll find the best used car values in Washington listed here. You'll find a similar page every Thursday, Friday and Saturday. And, another thing, they are good cars—thoroughly reconditioned and checked for plenty more mileage.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XIII.—Justice Unveils.

A single or "latent" fingerprint, as it is called, found at the scene of a crime means practically nothing from an identification standpoint, unless there is a suspect to match it against. If someone is arrested, it is possible to compare his prints with the "latent" and thus establish his presence. But certainly, in 1928, there was little to be gained by sending that latent found on the doctor's automobile in the Fleagle case to Washington and hoping for a speedy identification.

All fingerprints were then classified and filed under the ten-print system, as is done in practically every fingerprint center in the world. There was no way in which one print could be searched out—that would have meant a hunt through the entire unit, which at that time contained about 2,000,000 cards, each of ten fingers, making a total of 20,000,000 searches to be made. There was only one way in which to attack the problem.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, issued orders that this fingerprint become a matter of prime importance between officers; he knew also that if this fingerprint represented a member of the Lamar bank robbery gang, it was possible that innocent men were being held as murderers.

Therefore, the print was magnified. It was thrown on a screen by a stereopticon. Day after day experts studied it in the hope that they would remember some similar print as having passed through their hands. It was useless.

Time passed. The trial of the four accused men—Clinton, Walker, Oliver and Jarret—approached. Then one day, in the course of routine, there came to the identification unit a fingerprint card from the sheriff's office at Stockton, Calif.

Suspect Arrested.

A man named William Harrison Holden had been arrested on suspicion for train robbery there and had freed himself by a plausible story. The police had merely sent his fingerprints to Washington as a matter of course.

As a matter of course they were classified and the records searched. Out came a card bearing the name of Jake Fleagle, convict No. 6591, Oklahoma Penitentiary, back in 1916. In routine manner, the fingerprint expert began his final check, to be sure that William Harrison Holden and Jake Fleagle were the same man.

But as he worked, a queer feeling, almost of apprehension, ran through his brain. He went over the prints again—he felt uncertainty, nervousness, as though he were making a mistake. He checked and rechecked. Then suddenly the smudges on the paper beneath the microscope ceased to be such. There was murder in those lines and whorls, the bark of guns, a white-haired old man standing alone against a bandit gang, firing shot for shot until the guns of the murderous crew had cut him down. The expert whirled. He left his microscope and while other workers stared after him, ran wildly for the photograph of the latent print found on Dr. Wineinger's car. He examined it again. It matched with the prints on the cards. He straightened exultantly. This was a member of the Lamar bandit gang!

That changed the entire case. Four men had been identified and were under arrest. But here was surely a member—some one was innocent. The wires sang, carrying amazement to Garden City, Kans. Investigation began. The banks were checked, revealing heavy deposits for Jake Fleagle and his brother, Ralph.

A posse was formed. It encircled the ramshackle homestead and surrounded the weather-beaten old house. The father, mother and two brothers were arrested for questioning. They revealed that they had been writing to Ralph at Kankakee, Ill.

Chief Harper hurried to Kankakee, and with local police covered the postoffice there. They caught Ralph. They learned that some one was calling the prisoner by long-distance from Peoria.

"Get that fellow who's calling!" commanded Harper.

Rayston Found in West.

The order was obeyed. Peoria police arrested a man named George De Moss in a perfect arsenal of an automobile, just as he was pulling out of town. De Moss asked that his wife be released. The Peoria police made a mistake and granted the request. She is believed to have warned Jake; when police reached his apartment house, the bandit was gone. De Moss was taken to California for questioning about a train robbery. Out of the Fleagle gang the police now had only Ralph. His chin showed a slight depression. Chief Harper called for the services of an X-ray. It showed a bullet wound, too old to have resulted from the Lamar robbery. But the fact that the police knew it to be a bullet wound frightened Ralph. He talked and named Royston as the one who had been shot in the Lamar hold-up. Hugh Harper went to San Andreas, Calif., in Calaveras County, where once lived the famous Jumping Frog of the Mark Twain tale. There, in San Andreas, Harper found Royston living a supposedly exemplary life, the husband of a school teacher and the father of a young baby.

Royston also confessed. George Abshier was arrested. Then began a long chase which ended with the killing of Jake while resisting arrest at Branson, Mo. The four men awaiting trial were freed from this charge and immediately rearrested on "Wanted" notices from various parts of the country; all of them went to prison on other charges. But, at least, they did not pay for a murder which they did not commit. However, Ralph Fleagle and Royston and Abshier did pay; all were hanged in the Colorado State Penitentiary at Canon City.

Because of the Fleagles, there is now a different procedure when a widely known bandit leaves a latent fingerprint at the scene of the crime. Almost immediately Mr. Hoover began the building of what is known as the Single Fingerprint File in the Division of Investigation. Through its development has come the segregation of America's ten thousand public enemies.

To create this file, the Director sent letters to every police department in the country. That there might be better concentration upon his aims, he asked for names by "occupation." First came the kidnapers. Then the bank robbers. Then the stick-up men and highwaymen, then the specialists in train holdups and so on down the list. Prison wardens and parole boards were asked to make their nominations. Judges were requested to contribute. From them all came a "Who's Who" of vicious crime—the mad dogs of the Nation. Moreover, instructions were issued that whenever a new bandit flared up, he too was to join the list.

Each Finger Classified.

This done, the regular fingerprint cards of these men were "broken down" into single prints. Each finger was classified separately. Since that time, there have been numerous major identifications out of this list, and in spite of the fact that the file has neared completion only within the last year.

An identification here means that one of the true enemies of society has been found in a crime with the possibility of an arrest to follow. Or perhaps I can better illustrate by an incident.

After Pretty Boy Floyd participated in what now is known as the Kansas City massacre of local, State and Federal officers, he headed East with his companion in crime, Adam Richetti. This pair was inseparable. But how did the bureau know whom to look for? Let us see.

Before going, Floyd, and, so it is alleged, Richetti, went to the house of the master killer of the massacre, Verne Miller, then they drove eastward.

In Toledo, Ohio, they picked up two girls, Juanita and Rose Baird, with whom they previously had traveled. Months passed. At last the four went into hiding like so many animals in an apartment in a middle-class neighborhood of Buffalo, N. Y.

These were horrible months. Floyd was a man of action; he had been reared in open country, where he had been protected to a large degree by those who had known him from childhood.

Here there was no one he knew, except Richetti. There was no protection, at least for a stranger like Floyd. The galling life continued; the girls even subscribed to magazines rather than expose their presence by frequenting news stands. Meanwhile, the card games went on endlessly, casion, double solitaire, pitch.

The dreary existence dragged on, each member of the quartette becoming more silent, more moody. At last Floyd jammed a hand deep into a pocket where rested the remainder of the money he had brought with him.

"Who wants to go home?" he asked.

Auto Crashes Into Pole.

The concerted action was almost hysterical. Floyd gave one of the girls several hundred dollars with which to buy a car; she hurried forth for its purchase. That night they started upon the journey, with the men taking turns at the wheel. When Richetti drove, Floyd sat in the back seat with a machine gun on his lap. When Floyd drove, it was Richetti who held the weapon. Miles flowed by in swift progress.

They had entered Ohio. Morning approached; with it came a fog which lay deeper and heavier upon the road as the journey continued. Now Floyd lessened the speed of the car. The mist grew denser. Suddenly there was a crashing impact. They had left the road completely and run into a telegraph pole.

No one had been hurt, but the car had been damaged materially.

"You girls will have to go into town for a wrecker," the bandit said. "We'll stick it out around here somewhere until you get back."

The girls went down the road toward an all-night garage they had seen in East Liverpool. The men sought a gully in which to hide. The wrecker came for the car and lugged it away. Morning arrived; the girls had not returned; this was to be an all-day job. Finally, word came to the police of a nearby town that two suspicious-appearing men had been seen by the side of the road. A local officer went out to investigate. Floyd ran. Richetti surrendered.

Immediately upon the identification of Richetti, word flashed from Mr. Hoover's office in Washington to a dozen special agents, concentrated in nearby States on the Stoll kidnaping case. Airplanes rushed them to East Liverpool; soon Pretty Boy Floyd lay dead, his body weighted by law-enforcement bullets.

Thus ended the career of one of the most hunted men in America—within a comparatively short time after his disappearance from Kansas City the word had gone forth that the Bureau of Investigation was on his trail.

However, no stool pigeon had informed upon him. No eye-witness had identified him. That was not necessary. In the search of Verne Miller's house, special agents had discovered a fingerprint of Adam Richetti. If Richetti had been there, they decided, Pretty Boy Floyd must have been there also.

Thus the hunt began, and thus Floyd died, because of a fingerprint.

Canoe Trip to Island in River Planned by Wanderbirds Club

Swimming, Water Sports Scheduled for Sunday Excursion.

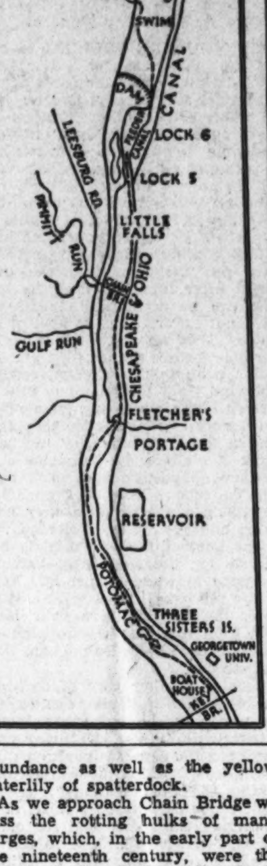
By Robert Shosteck.

On Sunday members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club will give their legs a rest when they paddle their flotilla of canoes up the Potomac River for 6 miles to a scenic spot on the Virginia shore opposite Sycamore Island. Here the group will lunch and later go in for a swim in the placid waters. The climax of the day's events will be an old-fashioned canoe-tilting tournament in which everyone may take part. Those not interested in water sports will have an opportunity to hike along the wooded and shady riverside trail to the Soapstone Quarry and Eagle Rock, several miles upstream.

Club members and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this trip will meet at the Great Falls Canoe House, several blocks from Thirty-fourth and M streets, the last D. C. stop of the Rosslyn car line. Walk down to Thirty-sixth street, cross footbridge over the canal, and follow the towpath to the stairway leading to the boathouse. Those coming by automobile can park at the end of K street and walk west along the tracks to the boathouse. Four-passenger canoes may be hired at 75 cents for the day. Hikers are urged to make up their own parties, but every effort will be made to accommodate those who cannot paddle. Bring lunch, a cup for water, swim suit, a hat to protect yourself against sunstroke, and a towel. Hikers are urged to bring along axes and knives to cut and shape the "lances" for the canoe-tilting tournament.

The Three Sisters Islands, which we pass on our way up the river, are covered with wild rice, which rises eight to ten feet above the water. The yellow tassels, with ripening pollen, are now much in evidence. A very narrow channel, navigable only at high tide, divides this long, rice-covered island.

The Wanderbirds will paddle up the Potomac River for about two miles to the inlet near Fletcher's Boathouse, portaging at this point to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, a distance of several hundred feet along a path. Those interested in natural history will have a chance to see many interesting types of aquatic life along the banks of the canal. The rank growth of vegetation here is the natural habitat of many kinds of reptiles, amphibians, and insects. At this time the hikers will see the blue heads of pickerel-weed in abundance as well as the yellow waterlily of spatterdock.



As we approach Chain Bridge we pass the rotting hulks of many barges, which, in the early part of the nineteenth century, were the strong rivals of the railroads in carrying coal from the western Maryland mines to Washington. Since the closing of the canal about 1924, these huge scows have fallen into disuse and serve only the turtles and minnows which bask and find shelter among the decadent beams.

Some of these barges have been repaired and are now the homes of squatter families.

About 1 mile beyond Chain Bridge we reach Lock 5, over which the canoes are portaged into the feeder canal leading into the Potomac above the dam. This canal is a very picturesque waterway, reminding one of Louisiana bayous, with giant sycamores leaning over precariously into the water, and graceful, swaying willows and birches lining the banks. On the left, High Island rises abruptly to a height of 125 feet, its gray walls of igneous rocks being partly hidden by rock ferns and lichens.

We enter the broad river suddenly, skirting the dam and crossing over to the Virginia shore to a point about ½ mile above High Island. We land at a beach near Snake Hollow (no snakes yet seen) not far from a fine spring and a tumble-down cottage which serves as a bath house.

Lunch will be had here, and those interested in hiking can visit the old soapstone quarry, about 1 mile upstream. Most of the group will go in for a swim in the early afternoon and later participate in the canoe-tilting contest. The winner of the elimination test will be awarded the grand prize—an ice-cold watermelon.

The return trip will cover the same route through the canals and down the river to the boathouse, which we should reach by 6:30 of 7 p. m.

Hikers are requested to write in and let us know whether they approve of an afternoon trip to Fort Washington some time early in August as the guests of the fort authorities aboard the U. S. S. General Rucker. The return trip would bring bring us to the city dock about 1 a. m.

A group of veteran Wanderbirds plan a campfire party with hot dogs, rolls and marshmallows, to be held in Rock Creek Park, near Pierce Mill, on Wednesday, July 31, about 7:30 p. m. A songfest which will include nearly all of the songs in the Wanderbirds Songbook will be the main feature of the evening. Make reservations for the eats by Monday evening at National 4200.

On the Air Today

Fray and Braggiotti have come to a permanent parting of the ways, according to radio circles. As entertainment—and a type employing an instrument too infrequently heard on the airways any more—they will be missed.

The situation locally may be remedied, however, if the radio audience responds as enthusiastically as the barons at WRC expect when a new piano team is presented Sunday evening at 10.

It was my pleasure to hear Gustave Heintze and Greta Mimmerrichter play for some 30 minutes the other afternoon in a private audition.

* * * *

Gustave has been in this country eight months. His sister for several years. Both have played in Vienna and other continental centers. Their arrangements for two pianos are original and difficult. Their playing is as flawless in precision and technique as any blend of pianos I have ever heard.

Occasionally some one writes to this desk and inquires why we have so little piano music on the air. Here is the answer—the solution. I believe Washington will like Gustave and Greta Heintze (they undoubtedly will be programmed under the one name) and 15 minutes with them tomorrow night, WRC, at 10, should be a delight.

If you are easily prejudiced, overlook the fact that their great uncle is Anton Dvorak and that Gustave, as a boy, enjoyed the friendship of Franz Lehar.

* * * *

With Gracie Barrie in town, radio receives the pleasure of a 15 minute interlude with the little girl who sang her way to months of popular acclaim at Billy Rose's Casino de Paree in Manhattan. The time is 6:30, WRC tonight. . . "G-Men" presents the story of Baby-Face Nelson, direct from the files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, WRC, at 8.

* * * *

It was bound to happen. WJSV's "Three Little Words" say farewell to the Capitol after this week and go to Gotham. Ted Collins, Kate Smith's manager, will take the girls under his ample wing. Which reminds me: The anwer to John Hutchinson's question regarding the whereabouts of the Boswell Sisters and why they are not on C. B. S. as a sustaining feature is found in the old story of the amount of noise money makes, so I am told. It seems the girls demand a higher figure than sponsors are willing to pay, hence they appear infrequently. Columbia, like Mr. Hutchinson, would like to see them on the network frequently. But dollars still talk powerful language in some quarters.

* * * *

Ruth Chatterton will do a scene from "The Lake" in the Chateau program, tonight, WRC, at 8:30 . . . Elsie Janis, who was seriously injured in an auto accident Wednesday, was the first woman to become a regular announcer for N. B. C. . . . She made her first starring appearance on the stage in 1900 and retired in 1930 . . . WOL offers an all-Russian program by the Symphonic Ensemble, tonight at 7:45, including the ever popular "Nutcracker Suite" . . . It comes from New York.

* * * *

Noel Coward, Gertrude Lawrence, Charlotte Greenwood and other celebrities will appear in the Silver Jubilee broadcast from London this afternoon at 2:30 from WRC. Coward and Miss Lawrence will sing a medley of Coward song hits. Miss Lawrence will be remembered for "Candlelight" and "Private Lives" and Coward's most recent Broadway appearance was in "The Scoundrel." Charlotte Greenwood's last appearance, I believe, was in "Flying High." Also on the program are Erna Fack, German soprano; Arthur Tracy, known also as the "Street Singer," and Austin Croome, English singer.

Truck Theater Due to Tour Washington

Washington soon may have a rambling theater—stage, scenery, actors and actresses being transferred from one section of the city to another in a large truck, which now is being remodeled for the purpose.

The matter is under consideration by Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center department, and Mrs. Nina Collier and Miss Sally K. Ring, of the FERA.

When and if the rambling theater materializes, its offerings will be presented to audiences of children and adults in the Capital's parks and playgrounds.

Symphony Will Play For Agriculture Staff

A program of sunset symphonies will be presented by the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night at the request of employes in the Department of Agriculture.

Several hundred of these Government workers will attend in a body. The concert will be conducted by Sandor Harmati, guest conductor, and Miss Winifred Cecil, New York soprano.

WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JULY 27, 1935

Taxi Drivers Shun Strike, Renew Runs

Threats to Picket P.U.C. Fails; Defiance Laid to Radicals.

Union Plans Legal Study of Rate Situation Before Acting.

Order came out of chaos in Washington's threatened taxi strike yesterday as officials of the Cab Drivers' Protective Union, through Adolphe Hohensee, business manager, and Attorney Carey E. Quinn, counsel for the group, announced there would be no picketing of the District Building, as threatened, and no violence of any sort or mass meetings.

"We have no intention of sending pickets to the District Building," asserted Mr. Quinn, after he and Mr. Hohensee had been in conference with Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police.

"Just now we plan to conduct a legal survey of the cab rate situation and go into all angles of it. We do not believe the Public Utilities Commission has the right to fix taxi rates, anyhow.

To Complete Survey.

"We will complete our survey and then see what can be done legally to rectify things."

There will be no strike among members of the union, Mr. Quinn said. Fleets of cabs yesterday swept through the city, many of them with new 20-30-50-70-cent zone rate cards in their windshields, substituted for those which were torn down after the mass meeting of drivers Wednesday.

"We are utterly opposed to violence of any sort, both Mr. Hohensee and I," declared Mr. Quinn.

"We're going to thresh the matter out in an orderly, legal fashion."

Mr. Quinn added that there were certain small groups of so-called "radicals" who fomented trouble.

"They are in no way representative of the Capital's cab drivers," he added.

No Pickets Appear.

As for the picketing which was looked for by police yesterday morning, it turned out to be a will-o'-th'-wisp proposition. No pickets appeared throughout the day.

Police were ready for any emergency, however, at 9 a. m. A squad of headquarters detectives, under the direction of the Crime Prevention Bureau, arrived on the scene.

They searched everywhere, and found no sign of banner-bearing pickets, although, at his Massachusetts avenue garage, Mr. Hohensee said, earlier in the day:

"Let the police wait around awhile. We'll send the pickets when we get around to it."

Chairman Riley E. Elgen, of the P. U. C., said yesterday morning he and other members of the commission were going ahead on the assumption that all cab drivers were following the uniform rate order.

In a letter to the commission, Hohensee stated his brother, Benjamin, had left the ranks of the Union Taxicab Association to start a cab association of his own. He insisted, however, there was no breach in the ranks of the union drivers.

Newspaper Considers Plant Enlargement

Sketch plans for enlargement of the plant of the Evening Star Newspaper Co. at the northwest corner of Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest are now being considered, it was learned yesterday.

The plans, subject to changes in zoning regulations, would permit the westward expansion of the building to the Raleigh Hotel and involve demolition of three intervening business structures. An addition conforming in height to the present eight-story building is contemplated. J. H. de Sibour is the architect.

Woman Held for Jury On Charge of Forgery

Elzina Howells, alias Ida M. Brighton, was held on $5,000 bond yesterday to await grand jury proceedings on a charge of forgery.

Mrs. Howells pleaded guilty before Judge Hitt in Police Court to having given out a forged check for $467.53 as payment for railroad tickets. The check was on the American Security & Trust Co., and made payable to the Canadian Pacific Railroad. It was signed Frances M. Banta. The tickets, according to police, were to provide transportation for two young women to the Pacific Coast.

Society Woman Visits House, Demands Lotteries' Approval

Keep Money in U. S., Mrs. Harriman Begs of Speaker.

A white-haired woman with a capacity for getting mad, Mrs. Oliver Grace Harriman yesterday called on Speaker Byrns to ask legalization of lotteries.

Later, as she posed for photographers on the sun-baked steps of the Capitol, the socially prominent New Yorker told reporters how she happened to become interested in the National Conference for Legalizing Lotteries.

"My interest first became acute last year," she recounted, "when I met the Lord Mayor of Dublin in New York and he complimented me on the beautiful hospitals built in Ireland with funds from lottery tickets sold in America.

"That made me furious. Why shouldn't all that money stay at home and keep our own hospitals and other charitable institutions from closing?"

Her Eyes Flash.

Blue eyes flashing beneath a wide-brimmed white hat, Mrs. Harriman added:

"Why, Americans have put $3,000,000,000 into foreign sweepstakes in the last two years.

"The figure in my State alone last month was $14,000,000. The very thought of it makes me mad."

Mrs. Harriman seemed all but insulted when asked if she thought Federal restrictions against lotteries would be lifted by Congress.

"Of course we're going to put it over," she declared.

Mrs. Harriman was cordially greeted by Speaker Byrns. At brief ceremonies in his office she asked passage of a lottery bill championed by Representative Edward A. Kenney (Democrat), of New Jersey.

"We have come here," she told the Speaker, "as a committee representing the National Conference of Legalizing Lotteries, of which I am president.

"We have branches and organizations in 48 States, representing every race, creed and color.

Is Non-Partisan.

"Our organization is a non-partisan, non-sectarian, non-political, non-profit membership movement incorporated under the laws of the State of New York and now prevalent in all the States of the Union.

"Our organization has no proposal or recommendation that would be instrumental in being injurious to the stamina of American citizenship.

"We feel that hundreds of millions of dollars of our citizens are being syphoned out and turned every year into foreign channels, through propaganda that exploits and commercializes lotteries and other enterprises that foreign countries are interested in.

"Since this frightful economic depression that we now are going through has been instrumental in closing thousands of hospitals, charitable institutions for old and feeble and other eleemosynary institutions we have been living on the support of our American munificently inclined charitable people.

"We feel that the time has come to invoke the aid of the members of the House of Representatives and the Senate, and speaking through you, sir, the distinguished Speaker of the House of Representatives, we notify you officially of our indorsement of the bill of Hon. Edward A. Kenney. We would like to see that bill enacted into law."

$9,284,000 Bid Lowest of 7 for U. S. Building

Interior Structure Biggest Federal Project Here in Years.

The George A. Fuller Co., of Washington and New York, submitted the lowest figure when bids were opened yesterday for construction of the new Interior Department Building. Its estimate was $9,284,000.

Seven contractors from Washington, New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Chicago competed for the award, which will be the largest allotted for a Federal building here in several years. The structure is to be erected immediately south of the department's present home and will be bounded by C, E, Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets northwest.

The Consolidated Engineering Co., Inc., of Baltimore, was second with its bid of $9,370,000. Next in order came the Cauldwell-Wingate Co., New York, $9,461,000; McClosky & Co., Philadelphia, $9,475,000; John M. McShain, Inc., $9,728,000; John Griffiths & Co., Chicago, $10,498,000, and Carleton, Co., Inc., New York, $10,696,191.

Congress has authorized the expenditure of $11,500,000 on the project, latest step in the development of the so-called "northwest triangle" as a Government building area corresponding to the Pennsylvania avenue triangle east of the White House.

Fan Dancer Heads Complaints At Liquor License Hearing

"Sepia Sally," a fan dancer at the Cotton Club, was cited by witnesses before the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board as a reason to revoke the liquor-selling license of the club.

Private Beatrice Ball, of the police woman's bureau, said the dancer's clothing did not total more than four inches square. The two fans she carried were not maneuvered to conceal much, either, she added.

Harry T. Whelan, attorney for L. Hurwitz, manager of the club, asked whether the witness had seen Sally Rand, of Chicago Fair fame, dance. She had not, Private Ball said. Mr. Hurwitz took exception to criticism of the dance movements. She did her dance to waltz music and couldn't have gone through the motions complained of to the time of waltz music, he said.

The dancer left the club floor show in June, after she had been arrested on charges of indecent exposure. Mr. Whelan had been engaged as her attorney. While he was out of the city the dancer pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $25, which was paid. Mr. Whelan emphasized his absence from the city at the time.

The controversy over the dancer, who used large, vari-colored fans and danced beneath subdued and vari-colored lights, was only one of the complaints by a score of witnesses who wanted the license revoked. The place formerly was under colored management but some time ago came under management of Mr. Hurwitz.

Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, member of the Board of Education, was one of those who complained about disorderly conduct of white men frequenting the amusement place. Patrons often were disorderly, he and other witnesses said. The club stayed open so long it disturbed the slumbers of residents of the neighborhood of Tenth and U streets northwest; that white men patrons had insulted nearby colored women residents, and that one day there were not less than 12 policewomen at the club.

Lieut. C. J. P. Weber, of the Second Precinct, said drinks were not sold after regular drinking hours, but drinking continued because of advance orders and because some patrons brought their own liquor.

The board reserved decision pending transcribing of the testimony and the filing of briefs of attorneys.

Postoffice Aid Here Is Indicted As Tamperer

Superintendent's Secretary Accused of Detaining Mail in Case.

Trapped, postal inspectors said, by a "test" letter containing five one-dollar notes placed in the distributing case of the Benjamin Franklin Postoffice Station, Marvin H. Cave, secretary to George H. Tait, superintendent, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on a charge of detaining mails.

Cave was arrested June 28 after several postal inspectors claimed they had seen him remove the "planted" letter from the station's distributing case. The letter was arranged after complaints had been made that mail was missing from the station. Cave's duties, it was said, did not require him to assist with the mails, but he did so of his own accord. Several test letters were placed in the rack and disappeared before Cave's arrest. He, though, is charged with but a single offense.

In another presentment returned by the grand jury, Charles B. Ward was accused of the theft of a valuable dog from Rhua J. Rose, 216 Twelfth place northeast, June 1. The dog was placed in the yard of a neighbor on that night and was missing the next day. Neighbors, it is alleged, told Mrs. Rose they saw Ward enter the yard and take the dog away. This, the latter denied. The dog has not been found.

Arthur J. Council, cab driver, was indicted for allegedly snatching the purse of Margaret Brown, at Sixteenth and O streets northwest, July 13. The purse contained $2.50. After grabbing the money the "snatcher" jumped into a cab and sped away.

Other indictments were Albert Roberts, Charles B. Ward, John T. Landon and John H. Strickland, grand larceny; Melvin S. Quigley, Charles M. Coates, Archie Nash, Leonard E. Hall, Perry Minor and Robert Lee Burton, joyriding; James Clark, Robert Lee Burton, Samuel L. Edwards, George G. Lee, Arthur Washington, Gilbert Payne, Henry Jackson and Robert Lee Moses, assault with dangerous weapon.

Myrtelo Bell, Marshall V. Huddleston and Howard Allman, receiving stolen property; Arthur J. Huffman, James H. Ford, Percy Brown, Alphonse Monroe, Waymon E. Connor, Samuel Hunter, Talbert Lee McCarthy, Robert Fuller, Horace W. Bennett, Nina L. Bond, Larry McClain, Oliver Hensen, jr., Joseph Jackson, Frank White, Tennessee Burch, Albert Thomas, Charlie Williams, William F. Burton, Horace G. Williams, James Dudley, Joseph J. Lyden and William Henry Brown, housebreaking; Barkley C. Pinkind, assault with intent to commit robbery.

George Brown, Floyd W. La More, Lawrence Stevens, Clyde Ellis, Robert Matching, Clarence Carroll, Marjorie Briggs, Robert Hinton, Romey Ferguson, Irving Chapman, George Jonas, Walter Massey, James E. Austin, Ernest McC. Dungan, James F. Cole, jr., John B. Coleman, Charles Burke, Walter Lee, Arthur J. Council, jr., Robert A. Cook and James Smith, robbery; John Jones, assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge; Homer Cunningham, assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge; Frank B. McCrorie, forgery and uttering; Bertrand M. Turner and Mansfield Roberts, violation of the national motor vehicle theft act; Chester Simms, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; Ruth Brown, William Waldon and Harold William Moore, violation of Section 73, Title 18, U. S. Code, and Marvin H. Cave, violation of Section 318, Title 18, U. S. Code.

Firemen Fight Blaze 2 Hours; Loss $1,000

Firemen fought for nearly two hours last night before they extinguished a stubborn blaze on the fourth floor of 1748 N street northwest. Origin of the blaze, which did damage of $1,000, was not determined.

Dr. Charles Basseches is the occupant of the house.

U. S. Leaves' Restoration Due for Vote

Return of the 30-Day Vacations Urged by Ramspeck.

Plans Completed for House Action on Tuesday.

Plans were completed yesterday for a House vote Tuesday on bills intended to partially restore annual and sick leave of Federal workers, reduced by the economy act.

Chairman Ramspeck, of the Civil Service Committee, predicted the measure would be called up under a special rule. He appeared confident of passage.

"They're good bills and I don't anticipate any serious opposition," he said.

Debate will be limited to an hour on each proposal.

Ramspeck probably will tell the House that annual leaves, halved by the economy act, should once again be fixed at 30 days. He often has described the reduction as imposing a "severe hardship" on the workers.

"Why, when they leave their desks long enough to cash a check or go to a funeral," he complained to the Rules Committee, "these people lose part of their leave.

"Many of them are from distant States and very often they hardly have any time left when they want to return home on their vacations."

Another argument likely to be used by the chairman will be that persons privately employed receive their full two weeks' vacation despite occasional absences from their offices.

Ramspeck will explain a provision to limit accumulation of annual leave to 120 days. At present there is no restriction on permitting the time to pile up.

The bill would give temporary employes annual leave at the rate of two and a half days for each month worked.

Limitation of sick leave to 15 rather than 30 days a year also will be urged by Ramspeck. He probably will point out the employes would be willing to have the time reduced in exchange for a provision permitting accumulation of such leave up to to 120 days, a protection in cases of prolonged illness.

Administrative officers, under the bill, would have authority to advance 30 days' sick leave with pay in extraordinary cases. All civilian employes of the Federal and District governments would be eligible except teachers, librarians and civilian workers in the police and fire departments.

Police Investigate Mysterious Death

Frank Young Dies Suddenly After Illness.

Homicide squad detectives and District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday were investigating the mysterious death of Frank Young, 48, a machinist, of 1106 Branch avenue southeast.

Young died Thursday at Emergency Hospital, where he had been removed after becoming suddenly ill on Wednesday. Before he died Young told police that he had been drinking and might have drunk some "poison" liquor.

Dr. MacDonald performed an autopsy yesterday but had not completed his report on his findings.

Cuban Soldiers Arrest 36 Government Aids

Havana, July 26 (AP).—A backwash of Cuba's powerful political undertow swept into government circles today with the arrest of 36 public employes, including Francisco Diaz, undersecretary of public works.

Police charged the 36 with seditious activities in connection with the secret society, "Black Eagles," misappropriation of nearly $1,000,000 of public works funds and using government money for political campaigns. Acting on orders from army headquarters, soldiers, members of the army secret service, national police and secret police entered the public works office about noon and took them to the military prison at Camp Columbia.

Catholic Women End 2-Week Youth Session

The National Council of Catholic Women closed a two-week youth institute yesterday with plans for co-operation with President Roosevelt's new National Youth Administration.

Discussions of vocational education, the delinquent child, and studies of the spiritual, educational, recreational and industrial problems of girls between the ages of 16 and 24 featured proceedings held in the National Catholic School of Social Service at 2400 Nineteenth street northwest.

Woman Takes Poison After Fight With Mate

Following an argument with her husband, Jessie Marion Brown, 29, swallowed poison in rear bedroom of her home at 1606 Thirty-fourth street northwest yesterday afternoon, police reported.

The physician attending her in Georgetown Hospital last night described her condition as "very low."

Mrs. Brown, wife of Roy Brown, was taken to the hospital by her brother-in-law, Howard Brown, 1210 N street northwest.

5 Congressmen Named Honorary Bartenders

In a gold-sealed certificate bestowing on him honorary membership in the Washington Bartenders Union, Representative Everett M. Dirksen, Illinois, finds reward for his services in fostering repeal of the "hidden bar" bill.

Outskirts Next To Feel Effect Of Safety Drive

Arrests Total 155 for Day; Accidents Show a Slight Increase.

With 319 traffic cases tried in police court or otherwise disposed of Police Superintendent Maj. Ernest W. Brown's personally directed campaign to cut down Washington auto accidents yesterday shifted to the outskirts of the city.

In one of the orders to his commanding officers that have become a daily routine of the drive, Maj. Brown called attention to complaints of excessive speeding in the outlying areas and directed concentration of the campaign in those sections.

The drive in the more congested sections of the city appeared to be slowing down. Arrests over a 16-hour period ending at midnight totaled 155 for 180 violations. Forty-five drivers were arrested for speeding.

Accidents, on the other hand, showed a slight increase. The total was 27, eight more than Thursday's toll and the highest since the drive opened last Saturday.

Only two of yesterday's traffic casualties was sufficiently severe to require hospital treatment. One was Maj. Alfred V. Dalrymple, 52, of 3726 Connecticut avenue, who was taken to Emergency Hospital for examination to determine whether he had a fractured knee cap. He was hurt when an auto in which he was a passenger hit a retaining wall at Thirty-sixth and Yuma streets northwest.

The other was 3-year-old Norman Webster, colored, of 1507 R street northwest, who was seriously injured last night when he was struck by a taxicab near his home. Police said the child darted into the street from between two parked cars.

The taxi driver, police said, was Lyndor L. Rize, 22, of the 2700 block of Thirteenth street northwest, who was released in custody of his attorney. The child was treated at Emergency Hospital for a possible fractured skull.

Of the cases on the Police Court docket, Judge Gus Schuldt tried 146 yesterday. They involved violations of virtually every known District traffic regulation and included one never before brought into court.

It was that of George L. Davis, arrested for speeding without his glasses. He paid a $10 fine on the speeding charge and an additional $5 for leaving his spectacles at home. The second charge was based on a notation on his driving permit stating that defective vision required his use of glasses while operating an auto.

Of the cases tried before Judge Schuldt, 76 were for speeding, 33 for parking violations and 9 for driving without permit. Traffic Patrolman John O. Hite boasted the day's best record with 37 arrests, 37 guilty pleas and 37 fines paid.

Employes in the police clerk's office, meanwhile, worked overtime sorting 173 forfeitures of collateral, including 112 for parking violations.

One of the offenders to face Judge Schuldt was Lloyd Boven, 204 Fourth street northeast. He pleaded guilty to a speeding charge, but explained that he had been on his way to a hospital, where Mrs. Boven made him the father of a baby girl. Mr. Boven was released on his personal bond.

One of last night's offenders was Maurice Joyce Broderick, 2127 California street, for whom police, they say, have been searching since he moved to the California street address from the 2900 block on Cathedral avenue.

Police said they held eight traffic warrants for Broderick. Patrolman F. S. Henley, of the Traffic Bureau, was about to impound Broderick's car, allegedly illegally parked on downtown Eleventh street, when Broderick came along.

It's Right Up Palmisano's Alley but King Can Hardly Qualify.

If the honorary "colonels" in Congress appeared a bit jealous yesterday, it was because five of their colleagues had received a title much rarer than the one so freely bestowed by Gov. Ruby Laffoon, of Kentucky.

The five learned that they had been made "honorary bartenders"—members of the Bartenders Union, old Local 75 of pre-Volstead days.

No. 1 honorary bartender is Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois. He who fathered the so-called "hidden-bar" bill, a measure which brought the mixing of drinks here out into the open and ended the travels of the 10-mile cherry and the marathon olive.

Wagner Included.

Others extended the privilege of wearing a white apron and wielding a toddy stick were two Democratic Senators, William H. King, of Utah, and Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and two Democratic Representatives, Alfred F. Beiter, of New York, and Vincent L. Palmisano, of Maryland.

Palmisano will not take lightly the honor from the Bartenders Union. He frequently has told the House that in his younger days he worked as a bartender in Baltimore.

The case of Senator King is different. Although he supported the bill against hidden bars, he is an ardent "dry."

"I am afraid the Senator doesn't qualify," his secretary said.

Senator Wagner and Representative Beiter are, of course, wets.

Just What Rights?

Representative Dirksen was found yesterday in his office mopping his brow. Looking at his citation, he learned that, as an honorary bartender, he would be entitled to the usual "rights and privileges."

"I wonder what they are," he queried. "Do you know I haven't been invited to inspect a single one of these bars that have been opened since the bill went into effect."

Brushing a lock from his perspiring brow, he added:

"Come to think of it, getting at this 'rights and privileges' problem might be just the kind of investigation in this hot weather."

Scouts Will Ride Navy Destroyers

The Navy destroyers Overton and Sturtevant have been assigned by Secretary of the Navy Swanson to participate in the Boy Scout jamboree here August 21 to 30.

The ships will be open for inspection during the jamboree and will make trips down the Potomac with detachments of Sea Scouts on board.

Lieut. Comdr. James J. Graham, U. S. N., commands the Sturtevant while Lieut. Comdr. Edward Walbridge is in charge of the Overton.

Early in the fall both vessels will proceed to the West Coast, where they will join the Battle Force. Recently they have been employed for the training of naval reserve divisions on the East Coast.

Hurja Starts Quiz of Long In D.C. Home

Farley's Aid Requests Officials to Probe Propaganda Case.

Shelter for Veterans Is Said to Be Agent of Huey's Paper.

Emil Hurja, right-hand man of Postmaster General Farley, has asked District officials to investigate charges that a local institution for needy veterans has been used as a "sounding board" for the political philosophy of Huey Long.

The institution in question is the District Temporary Home for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines, located at 921 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. It is supported by local taxes and takes care of an average of 23 men a day.

Charles Francis Barrett, a World War veteran, made out an affidavit in which he charged that the home was a distributing center for a newspaper advocating Senator Long's share-the-wealth views.

Hurja Forwards Affidavit.

It was ths affidavit that Hurja sent to the District Commissioners with a request for an investigation.

Barrett was dismissed from the home April 19, according to Thomas Hudlow, the superintendent. Hudlow said that Barrett had remained away from the home for three days and had violated other rules.

On one occasion, Hudlow said, Barrett returned to the home late at night and an assistant reported smelling beer on his breath.

Referring to Barrett's charge, Hudlow said:

"Such charges are absolutely untrue. There are two things this home is clean of. One is politics, the other is religion.

"I heard a few months ago that the men sitting around were discussing such matters as the bonus. I told them that they could not discuss questions involving politics—the President or members of the Senate or House. The rules for the home are very strict. They are made by our board."

McCaffrey Heads Board.

Charles McCaffrey, an employe of the Washington Navy Yard, is chairman of the board. He was out of town last night.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said last night that any news relative to the charges by Barrett would have to come from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen or Hurja. Commissioner Hazen was on a brief vacation at his farm at Nokesville, Va.

The Barrett charges, it was learned, were investigated by District officials last May, soon after Barrett had been told to leave the home. At that time Commissioner George E. Allen asked Street for a report. The charges were dismissed at that time, as unworthy of serious consideration.

Navy Band Will Play For Festival Program

A W. S. Gilbert comedy, a concert by the Navy Band, two one-act plays by the Community Players and a dance interlude have been included in the first of next week's two summer festival programs in the National Sylvan Theater, it was announced last night by the Community Center Department.

The first program is scheduled for Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock. The annual "Program of Youth" will be staged by ten District youth agencies and groups as the second festival event Thursday at 7 p. m.

Untaxed Liquor Seized.

Eighty-five gallons of untaxed whisky were found in a car which crashed into a culvert on Central avenue in Capitol Heights, Md., last night. Polcie said the car had been stolen. They are looking for the driver.

Music, Murder and Juvenile Precocity Characterize New Week's Screen Plays

Dick Powell Is Heard in Opera Arias at Earle

But Story Is All in Fun; Shirley Is Palace Hit; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"BROADWAY GONDOLIER." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Sig Herzig, E. Y. Harburg and Hans Kraly, adapted to the screen by Warren B. Duff and Sig Herzig, featuring Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, with Adolphe Menjou, Louise Fazenda, William Gargan, George Barbier, Hobart Cavanaugh, Grant Mitchell, Ted Fio Rito and His Band, the Four Mills Brothers, the Canova Family and Bob Murphy. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, July 23.

The ancient fallacy that to succeed in grand opera a singer must adopt a foreign name and be "discovered" in Europe, here is translated to the more modern business of chain broadcasting.

The idea serves nicely as the basis of a loosely woven and slightly insane bit of musicalized summertime nonsense, conceived with no more noble notion than to afford an hour or two of light and innocuous "silly season" entertainment. It serves its intended purpose tunefully and well.

The entire movement of the narrative hinges upon the efforts of the world's greatest broadcasting system to assemble a program for the air that will do justice to Flagenheim cheese. The Flagenheim cheese business, it seems, has been inherited by the Widow Flagenheim, who holds in deepest reverence the memory of her late departed husband and the enthusiasm he felt for the odorless product he had hoped to spread on every cracker.

A Tenor Taxicabber.

Driving a taxicab in the Bronx while all this was going on was a young man with a voice and aspiration to get on the air—or anywhere else where he could sing. Coaching him was a broken-down opera star of a quarter-century ago, who was still living in the rarified atmosphere of the Mozarts, Beethovens, Wagners, Verdis, et al. By chance, one night, Dick Purcell picked up a couple of thoroughly jingled opera critics, who paid him off with a note to the head of the radio chain instead of money.

The best Dick could get at the studio, however, was a chance to do barnyard imitations on a "kiddies' hour." Staking the professor to a boat ride back to Italy to pave the way for his operatic debut, Dick himself soon follows in desperation, working his way across as a dishwasher. Posing as a singing gondolier in Venice, he is "discovered" by Mrs. Flagenheim and brought back to America with a tremendous publicity ballyhoo. His success is immediate. He is the sensation of radio. Then he develops a conscience, confesses the hoax through the microphone at one of his broadcasts and goes into hiding. Mail pours in to the station and he returns to the air greater than ever.

Such is the skeleton of narrative upon which are hung all of the "inside" workings of a major broadcasting station, a harried and, at times, hurried romance, a great deal of comedy—some of it good—and some excellent individual performances by the cast.

Famous "Names" in Cast.

To lend the studio scenes authenticity, Ted Fio Rito and His Orchestra are present to play the tunes, the Four Mills Brothers do their stuff, the Canova Family of hillbillies also do theirs and Dick Powell teams with all and sundry at one time or another. There is freshness and novelty about much of what goes on and, unless one is a stickler for relentless realism, a good deal of good-natured fun.

Dick Powell has never been in better voice or exercised that organ upon worthier numbers than those with which he is supplied in this picture by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, assisted by a few of the old masters, in such little things as "Donna e Mobile," the quartet from "Rigoletto" and a few more of that ilk, which are about as ilky as they come. Joan Blondell is completely the comedienne in her present role of secretary to Grant Mitchell, the big microphone and aerial man, and Adolphe Menjou proves himself every inch an actor in the role of Prof. de Vinci, the dilapidated maestro.

Louise Fazenda, as Mrs. Flagenheim, does her best with material from which all of the sparkle was left out. George Barbier and Hobart Cavanaugh are the inebriated critics who arrive at their 211th performance of "Rigoletto" just in time to see the last curtain descend and that eminent vaudevillian, Bob Murphy, makes his screen debut as a singing cop. The picture is executed on a pretentious scale and the processed shots of the Venetian canals are extremely effective.

A Musical Headliner.

Paul Tisen presents the headline act on the stage portion of the program, a music and dance potpourri that is as diverting as it is expert and artistic. Tisen and his violin contribute an artistic interlude to an ensemble that features the extraordinarily graceful dancing of Luis and Gaby in two intricate numbers; Don Hudson, barytone, whose "Beat of My Heart" is one of the high lights of the act, and a skillful accompanist and a feminine violinist.

The stage bill is opened by the Three Kanes, at the top of their profession as gymnasts and pole balancers. The refulgent Miss Audrey Sieber then introduces Tommy Martin, a young prestidigitator who is crowding hard on the heels of Cardini in the deuce spot, and Herman Hyde and Sally Burrill in "A Travesty in Music," a priceless "nut" act that is good for a thousand laughs.

The Universal News, showing last Saturday's running of the Arlington Classic in Chicago, and Freddie Clark's orchestral contributions round out a program that had the customers hanging from the chandeliers yesterday.

Is Teamed With Tenor Bartlett

An attractive new portrait study of Claudette Colbert, Paramount contract player, who is appearing on loan in "She Married Her Boss," for Columbia Pictures. Her leading man in this subject is Michael Bartlett, the distinguished tenor, who scores so decisively opposite Grace Moore in the operatic sequences of "Love Me Forever," now at the Metropolitan. "She Married Her Boss" is an early booking at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater, local first-run outlet for Columbia Pictures.

"CURLY TOP." Fox picturization of an original story by Patterson McNutt and Arthur Beckhard, starring Shirley Temple, with John Boles, Rochelle Hudson, Jane Darwell, Arthur Treacher, Etienne Girardot, Rafaela Ottiano and Esther Dale. Music by Ray Henderson. Directed by Irving Cummings. Previewed Monday, July 22.

There is considerably more than a mere suggestion of "Daddy Longlegs" in this story of a mischievous little girl, adopted out of the orphanage into an opulent Long Island home, but trite as the story is and strained as many of its comedy situations are, the amazing precocity of that dimpled little blonde heart-stealer, Shirley Temple, is more than enough to lift it out of mediocrity to the heights.

What the adults in the cast contrive to do to justify their presence in scenes that center in and revolve about the youngster nicknamed "Curly Top" is of no importance whatever—barring perhaps John Boles' two songs, "It's All So New to Me" and "Curly Top," and Rochelle Hudson's one, "The Simple Things in Life." It is Shirley Temple who carries this picture on her own tiny shoulders, sings two songs on her own account, "Animal Crackers in My Soup" and "When I'm Grown Up," and executes three dance routines evolved by Jack Donohue—a tap dance atop a grand piano, a hula and a skipping-rope tap that is no easy trick for feet of any age.

Is Real Star.

There is about everything Shirley does in this picture a little of the touch of genius. She is sure of herself, poised and effective in songs that run into several verses and choruses and require a degree of stage "business" that represents a heavy assignment for one of her years.

Never at any juncture during the progression of the pallid story that can be foreseen almost from the outset is there the suggestion, as there always has been in her earlier vehicles, that Shirley is simply repeating in a routine way things that she has learned by rote. In "Curly Top," she is actress, singer, dancer and comedienne, in the manner and with the skill of a veteran.

The orphanage scenes are, of course, punctuated by the excessive mental cruelties of the ubiquitous disciplinarians who infest such shelters for the young, but they are no less enlivened by the antics of "Curly Top," who, among other forbidden things, puts her pet pony left her by her actor parents to bed in the dormitory on a rainy night, and the protective asperities of her older sister, a slavey in the kitchen of the institution.

Elders Carry Romance.

Both of these girls are adopted into the home of the millionaire bachelor, John Boles, and his aunt. Shirley is still a trifle young to carry a picture's romance, so that is intrusted to Mr. Boles and Miss Hudson. Shirley, however, has the last word, preceding the final fadeout. You'll laugh!

Arthur Treacher, as a stiff-backed butler, with a sense of humor and a kind heart; Jane Darwell, as the kindly spirit in the orphanage, and Rafaela Ottiano, as the waspish superintendent, whose ally is Etienne Girardot, president of the board, all contribute fine supporting performances to a cast that is overwhelmingly dominated by its youngest and most talented member.

The Metrotone News, an M-G-M Oddity, cartoon and comedy supplement a feature that estiblishes its star as the most remarkable child artist of this generation. N. B. B.

RKO-Keith's

"GINGER." Fox picturization of a story by Arthur Kober, adapted to the screen by the author, featuring Jane Withers and Jackie Searl, with O. P. Heggie, Katherine Alexander and Walter King. Directed by Lewis Seiler. Reviewed Friday morning by Sally Stroud.

This Jane Withers picture should be advertised as a "for children movie, for it is just that. At the first showing yesterday, when the audience was comprised largely of youngsters, there was loud cheering at the right moments. Ditto booing.

Little Jane lives up to the title role; she is ginger-y throughout, save for a short space parallel with her transition from Ninth avenue slums to Park avenue splendor. But after a while, the awesomeness wears off for Ginger and she discovers the ornate stair rail is excellent for sliding purposes.

How did she get on Park avenoo? Uncle Rex, who is not her uncle (but who is O. P. Heggie), is lugged heartlessly off to serve a 30-day jail sentence for justifiable assault and battery. Katherine Alexander ("Mrs. Park Avenue, or Parker, if you insist") being a philanthropic, though flighty minded society woman, bent on securing data for a book on juvenile delinquency, temporarily adopts her.

Makes "Man" of Him.

And then Ginger meets Hamilton, the Parker heir, who is only Jackie Searl, dressed up in long pants and a gasper of a vocabulary—for his diligent mother has groomed him to be a virtuoso, on the harp, of all things! Ginger titters at that and asks if he is going in training to be an angel.

Her roundabout method of converting him into a normal, slangy, fighting sort of kid is entertaining.

Walter King is Mr. Parker, Danny to you and Ginger. He is pretty good as the head of the house, who is, oh, so happy that his son should finally find sliding down banisters such fun.

There is even a dash of Shakespeare thrown in to coagulate the play. Uncle Rex and Ginger spout quotations at each other with the greatest of glibness and even stage the Romeo-Juliet balcony scene. Uncle Rex is a tragic old codger who just cawn't forget his pawst, when he was always "billed above the play," even "Hamlet."

Is Competent Actress.

So far as the more worldly grown-ups are concerned, they had best not see this film. They probably will think Ginger twists her features about too much, in portraying the varying emotions of her role. And too, they may be beset by gleesome memories of the neat job she turned in as the small hellion who pestered the Temple in Shirley's "Bright Eyes." However, as child stars go, she is good.

Even sophisticates will stay twice to see the Walt Disney short, "The Golden Touch," which boasts a small elf with the correct touch of whimsicality, and some more-than-fairish emoting by a rotund Midas, whose golden "tetch" becomes a curse. It is nearly perfect in every detail. Add it to your collection of Silly Symphonies, which could do excellently without the descriptive adjective.

"Six Day Grind," a short subject, and Pathe News complete the bill.

Loew's Fox

"THE MURDER MAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Tim Whelan and Guy Bolton, adapted to the screen by Whelan and John C. Higgins, starring Spencer Tracy, supported by Virginia Bruce, Robert Barrat, William Collier, sr., James Stewart and Harvey Stephens. Directed by Tim Whelan. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Here, at last, is a movie with a title that really means something.

And, what is more important, here also is a movie which is different, very interesting and lucky in having, in the part of Steve Grey, one of Spencer Tracy's many excellent performances.

This Mr. Tracy has been a pet of ours for a long time and he will continue to be as long as he keeps on with perfectly natural, unselfconscious, living pictures of people. You just can't believe the man is acting, timing lines and shading words, but he is and does.

Steve Grey is the New York Star's demon police reporter. When other fourth-estaters are still breathlessly telling their desks all about murders and murderers, Steve's story is stream-lined across his paper and out on the street.

Cleaning Up Crooks.

And, in the best theatrical tradition, he is drunk much of the time, only—and here the difference enters—Steve has a very good reason for being drunk. Since that reason is the picture's punch, we won't be mean and tell more than that the murder enlisting his immediate attention is that of a crooked stock broker.

In addition to Tracy's swell picture of Steve, tough and tormented, there are some excellent people to help, including Virginia Bruce, very lovely and right as Mary, who loves Steve; William Collier, sr., as Steve's pop; Robert Warwick (remember?) in a brief role; Lionel Atwill, Robert Barrat, a corking actor, and Harvey Stevens.

And worthy of a paragraph to himself, though he has little to do this time, is James Stewart, who plays Shorty. He is one of the theater's very best young men, and you'll be hearing lots more from him. We first got excited about him as the young Irishman who volunteered for Dr. Walter Reed's yellow fever test "just for the hell of it," in "Yellow Jack," and then liked him very much again with Judith Anderson in "Divided by Three."

Has Brave Ending.

If you've read "The Murder of Roger Askroyd," you may catch onto the picture before all is revealed, but you'll not be irritated, as you must have been by that famous—or infamous—murder story with its surprising denouement. The picture has a brave ending.

On the stage there is considerable entertainment. Ben Blue, a riotous pantomimist, should stick to his pantomime and dancing (?) and clean the act up a little, but he is funny. The Saxon Sisters in their own beautifully batty manner, do all sorts of things to songs and we liked listening to them do them. The Four Casting Carons are graceful and exciting and that bouncing around looks "easy" and pleasant. The Twelve Aristocrats complete the program with precise but rather monnotonous stepping.

There are a Buster Keaton comedy revealing a new method of custard pie "throwing;" the newsreel, a delightful cartoon, "The Foxy Fox" (right at home), and Phil Lampkin's overture to round out the bill.

Metropolitan

"LOVE ME FOREVER." Columbia picturization of a story by Victor Schertzinger, with screen play by Jo Swerling and Sidney Buchman, starring Grace Moore, with Leo Carrillo, Robert Allen, Michael Bartlett, Luis Alberni and Douglas Dumbrille. Directed by Victor Schertzinger, with thematic music by the director and Gus Kahn. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Not content to rest solely upon the laurels garnered through the production of "One Night of Love," Columbia Pictures Corporation, in "Love Me Forever," the second Grace Moore vehicle, has given its stellar songbird an even better story and a more competent supporting cast than were presented in the earlier production.

Although Miss Moore and her many arias might well be thought sufficiently strong to carry a second piece, patterned after the former success, a stronger and more dramatic narrative plus a superlative character delineation by Leo Carillo and the voice and personality of Michael Bartlett add to the luster of "Love Me Forever."

Many Arias Sung.

Prominently studded throughout the picture are the songs—"Il Bacio," "Love Me Forever," "Whoa," "Funiculi Funicula," the quartet from "Rigoletto," and no less than three arias from Puccini's "La Boheme," including a large part of the first act thereof. With such a catalogue of songs, sufficient to show the star's talents in nearly all types of musical composition, little is left to be desired.

On the histrionic side, with a personnel such as is here presented, nothing need be added to the summary printed in these columns on July 13, following the premiere at the Earle Theater.

The supplementary program includes "Buddy Steps Out," an amusing cartoon, and the combined Paramount and Universal News reels.

Columbia

"ESCAPADE." Metro-Goldwyn picturization of the German play, "Maskerade," co-starring William Powell and Luise Rainer, with Mady Christians, Virginia Bruce, Laura Hope Crews, Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen and Henry Travers. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Reviewed Friday afternoon (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Three weeks ago yesterday Washington discovered a new screen actress, and in the following two weeks public acclaim followed critical encomiums attesting the great good fortune of the populace and the industry in having Luise Rainer introduced through "Escapade," ostensibly created as a vehicle for the particular talents of William Powell.

Of the suave Mr. Powell and his smooth performance (even though somewhat 1935-ish for the early 1900's), as well as the polished work of an admirable supporting cast, little can be added at this time to the handsome appraisals appearing in this family journal on July 6 and July 13.

Lavishly staged, efficiently directed and expertly photographed, replete with sparkling dialogue and an appropriate musical score, enlivened here and there with songs, "Escapade" proceeds with celerity to a climax which is wholly satisfactory and sufficiently romantic.

"Grooms in Gloom" presents Tom Howard and George Shelton, with Earle Gerber, Ethel Sykes and Harvey Short in a comedy which falls somewhat short of the Howard-Shelton standard. "Amateur Nights" is a cartoon burlesque, with various screen and radio personalities being lampooned. The Metrotone News rounds out the bill.

Film Table

Feature pictures and stage bills are presented on the following schedules at the theaters named:

Tag on Governor's Car.

Des Moines, Ia., July 26 (AP).—Gov. Clyde Herring waited up all last night at a hotel here where bakery operators and union leaders sought a way to settle the Des Moines bakery strike.

A policeman tagged his automobile for being parked overtime.

"That," said the Governor, "is what I get for staying up all night."

Gold Reserves Of Netherlands Still Dwindling

Security Going to France and U. S. as Aalberse Forms Cabinet.

By the Associated Press.

The Hague, The Netherlands, July 26.—Gold fled from The Netherlands to France and the United States today as Premier-Designate D. P. Aalberse, Catholic leader, withheld financial policy.

Although informed quarters believed Aalberse, and the government he was trying to form, would continue efforts of his predecessor, Hendry Colijn, to save the guilder from devaluation, the franc and the dollar still were moving above the gold export point.

Queen Wilhelmina, who called Aalberse after Colijn resigned in face of parliamentary opposition to his retrenchment program, was believed strongly convinced the gold standard should be maintained.

Aalberse was given the premiership on that understanding, it was reported, even though most of the Catholic members in the chamber—who caused Colijn's downfall—favored devaluation.

The premier-designate conferred with M. Albarda, Social-Democrat leader, this afternoon, causing speculation that the Social-Democrats would be represented in the forthcoming cabinet.

Pending formation of Aalberse's ministry, Colijn and the retiring cabinet received authorization from the Queen to take necessary steps for defense of the guilder.

Today's gold withdrawals from the Bank of the Netherlands were valued at about $15,000,000.

Col. House, 77, Reveals He Drew League Covenants' First Draft

Wilson Shaped Terms of World Pact, He Explains.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, Mass., July 26.—Col. Edward M. House today, on his seventy-seventh birthday, revealed he had drawn the first draft of the covenant of the League of Nations.

"It was made right down here," House said, adding he had turned the original draft over to President Wilson and, with but few changes, the document was identical with that later adopted.

House, elder statesman of the Wilson administration, confidential advisor to the war-time President and member of the commission which finally adopted the covenant, made no attempt to claim authorship of the covenant.

Rather, he said, it represented the concrete product of many conversations between the President and himself.

The silver-haired Texan, who for more than 25 years has been a member of the North Shore summer Colony, still believes the United States eventually will enter the league.

"I am firmly convinced of it," he said.

"This country would have entered it years ago," he continued, "if Wilson had retained his health. At that time 90 per cent of the American people favored the league."

He expressed the belief the league would be found capable of handling the Italo-Ethiopian situation which he dismissed as "nothing about which there is any reason to worry."

Then, returning to problems closer home, he said:

"This country must adopt some international policy. It must define its attitude on all world problems because anything that happens is bound in some way to affect us.

"The question is whether its policy is to be an active or passive one. I believe it should be active."

Col. House and Mrs. House passed the day on the spacious veranda of their summer home as friends trooped in to extend felicitations. Letters, including one from President Roosevelt, whose election he forecast in 1931 and whose mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, he recently entertained, poured in throughout the day, as did cablegrams from all parts of the world.

Pressed by some of those present to compare Wilson and Roosevelt, the venerable Texan smilingly declined.

"They are very different types," he protested.

Janis "Beads" Pearls, State Troopers Told

By the Associated Press.

East View, N. Y., July 26.—When Elsie Janis was injured in an automobile accident Wednesday, State troopers took charge of her effects. They inventoried them, including "one string of beads," and put them in a paper sack at headquarters.

Today they scratched "one string of beads" off the list. They turned the pearls over to an insurance company representative, who informed the troopers they were insured for $50,000.

The actress herself is recovering at a hospital.

Marines Facing Shift to Pacific From Quantico

Plans to shift the headquarters of the Fleet Marine Corps from Quantico, Va., to San Diego, Calif., are being considered at Marine headquarters, it was learned yesterday. If the contemplated move is carried out about 50 officers and 600 enlisted men will be transferred to the West Coast.

Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the corps, and his staff have completed plans for the transfer, and these have been forwarded to Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the fleet. He has not yet approved of the change, but officers at Marine headquarters here are confident that his approval shortly will be forthcoming.

Lack of housing facilities at Quantico, as well as the necessity of having the fleet Marine force with the naval fleet, now in the Pacific, were given as reasons for the contemplated change.

If approval is forthcoming, the transfer will be made about September 1, it was stated. New recruits to the corps will replace the 600 men taken from Quantico, through the canal, on a transport to San Diego.

War Plane Photo Brings Spy Scare

Manager of Air Show Rules Out Cameras.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 26.—Officials of the all-American air show clamped the lid on cameras today after Ray Cooper, manager, said he was informed that Japanese visitors had photographed Army exhibits, but Maj. J. E. Parker, in charge of war planes, was unperturbed.

Exhibits of night-flying equipment were removed from the show and returned to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, coincident with Cooper's announcement of the order, but Maj. Parker insisted the removal was because the field needed its equipment—not because of an espionage scare.

"Anyone who wanted to photograph the equipment was welcome to do so," the major said. "The same equipment can be found at any Northwest air field and there is nothing secret about it."

Cooper said he issued the "no camera" order at the suggestion of exhibitors he quoted as saying they had observed Japanese visitors making photographs.

In order to avoid possible embarrassment over the pictures, the manager said he decided the order was advisable.

Schall Auto Halts Traffic.

Traffic was held up for 15 minutes yesterday morning at Tenth and F streets when the right front wheel came off the automobile in which Senator Thomas B. Schall, of Minnesota, was riding. Senator Schall, who is blind, was being driven by his cook, Miss Sallie Krump.

Neideckers Are Free Pending U. S. Hearing

New York, July 26 (AP).—The Neidecker brothers, B. Coles, Aubrey and George, who face embezzlement charges in the closing of their Travelers Bank in Paris, were free tonight in the custody of their attorneys on habeas corpus writs adjourned until August 5 by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey.

At the request of the French government, B. Coles Neidecker was arrested in a Manhattan hotel Tuesday, and his two brothers were taken into custody at Norfolk, Va., and brought to New York.

Judge Caffey in continuing the writs said the French government had not protested the bankers' freedom.

Formal complaints were filed against the brothers by the French Consul General Thursday.

Inspection Aids Facing Formal Graft Charges

Complaints Will Be Aired Later On at Public Hearings.

Complaints of improprieties involving persons in the office of the District building inspector yesterday were ordered incorporated in formal charges by Commissioner George E. Allen.

Chester Gray, assistant corporation counsel assigned to assist Commissioner Allen in sifting the complaints, and Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, who made a preliminary investigation at request of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, discussed the matter with the Commissioner.

Mr. Gray, Commissioner Allen said afterward, is to prepare formal charges involving each complaint and person. Copies of these are to be furnished to Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector, and the subordinates affected. The purpose of this, Commissioner Allen said, is to apprise the inspector of the detailed complaints and to give the subordinates opportunity to study complaints made against them.

Subsequently the charges are to be considered at public hearings to be conducted by Mr. Allen and Mr. Gray. Date of these hearings is to be fixed later. Charges include "loans" which have not been repaid to builders by borrowing employes of the inspection office, favoritism shown some building operators, and other criticisms.

Noel C. Scaffa Faces Prison for Perjury

Noted Gem Retriever Convicted for False Story.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Noel C. Scaffa, the private detective who became society's favorite retriever of stolen gems, was convicted on three counts of perjury today in connection with the story he told a Federal grand jury after one of his exploits.

The debonair detective, indicted for telling a false version of how he recovered $185,000 in jewelry stolen from Mrs. Margaret Hawkesworth Bell, former dancer, was continued in $10,000 bail until August 13, when sentence will be pronounced.

The penalty for perjury is a prison sentence of not more than five years or a fine of $2,000, or both, on each count.

The jury was out nearly six hours.

Scaffa offered no defense contending the Government had failed to establish a case.

Nats Win, 9-3, as Yanks Lose League Lead; Linke Is Injured

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

New York, July 26.

I SEE by the papers that Avery Brundage, president of the United States Olympic Commission, said:

"I know of no racial or religious reasons why the U. S. should not be represented in the Olympic games at Berlin in 1936."

Why, Mister Brundage!

POVICH.

I am surprised that the Nazi Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment who ordered Jewish children driven out of hospitals, dissolved Catholic sports clubs, jailed priests and called Catholicism Germany's public enemy No. 1; as I was saying, Mister Brundage, I am surprised that the Nazis didn't file a complete report of their activities with you at your Chicago office.

Darn forgetful of them, if you ask me. How else could you expect to know of the goings on in Germany? Certainly, it is too much to expect of you that you should read the papers. You might, though, have listened to the radio, or perhaps seen the pictures of Jews being driven through the streets with clubs and stones.

But, Mister Brundage, inasmuch as Herr Hitler neglected to advise you of all these developments by special courier, I don't suppose you would even have an inkling of what is happening over there. Anybody who could make the satement you did, Mister Brundage, would be naturally slow to catch on. Some day, somebody is going to flabbergast you with the red-hot news that the 13 colonies have signed the Declaration of Independence.

If you are still innocent, Mr. Brundage, of what is taking place in Germany, and vote for American participation in the Berlin games, I wonder what your Olympic committee is going to do about raising the $200,000, or some such sum, that you always have to raise by public subscription to send the United States Olympic team abroad? Methinks that you will then discover that there are some folks over here who read the papers.

APPARENTLY, Babe Ruth, like the weather reports, can't be kept off the front pages. Out of baseball, Ruth is turning seriously to golf and New York sports writers are in a dither of excitement. The Babe's score of 81 qualified him in the Westchester Country Club tournament at Rye and it was Page One stuff in the New York afternoon papers.

But what caught the interest of this department was the item wherein the chief Babe announced his intention to compete in the National Amateur qualifying round. "Ho-Ho," said I to myself, "what's this?" If Babe Ruth is an amateur, then I'm Hitler's right-hand man. Yet the Babe can get away with it, if he wants to play amateur golf. It's all done by mirrors and the strange reasoning of the United States Golf Association.

The U. S. G. A. does not bar professional ball players from amateur golf. There is never any question of their amateurism. Yet, two months ago they barred Babe Didrikson from the Western Women's Amateur because she was a pro. I suppose, if a person plays baseball with the House of David team, as La Didrikson did, he or she is more of a professional than a guy like Babe Ruth who has drawn a half million dollars in salary from 20 years in the big leagues. It is slightly beyond the comprehension of this department.

Miss Didrikson got in Dutch with the amateur people when she unwittingly indorsed an automobile advertisement. Yet Babe Ruth has been indorsing cereals, clothes, bats, candy and anything else that offered emolument for y'ars and y'ars, but in the eyes of the U. S. G. A. he is still an amateur. Somehow, it doesn't add up.

Gallico Makes a Dead Stick Landing—and Writes About It

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 26.—There was a story in the papers the other day about a lady flier, a student at Roosevelt Field, who was up solo when her throttle jammed and she was unable to cut the power. She made 34 passes at the field with all sorts of ships bearing messages to her, flying around. Finally she got up the nerve to cut her switch and come in. She cut too far from the field, jammed into a fence, turned over and washed out the ship although she herself was unhurt. Every one said: "Why didn't she cut her switch right away and come in? The dame just lost her head?"

Forty-eight hours later the same thing happened to me. Oh, my sainted cross-eyed aunt, what a difference that makes. How simple it is to suggest what some one else should have done. And how strangely different it all looks when YOU have to make the decision, and make it in a hurry, and make the right one. Sure, all you do is cut the switch and land. But, brothers and sisters, I am apologizing to the little lady right now. The toughest gesture I have ever made was to reach to the instrument board and cut off that nice electric fan up front.

Yes, sir; that's different. Now you're on the spot. It's like being hitched to a comet and not being able to let go. One of two things will happen. You will fly around until your gas runs out, when she will stop, or you cut her yourself. Now there is nothing heroic or brave about a dead stick landing. You simulate them every time you come into the field by throttling down your engine. But there is always that lovely comfortable feeling—if you do make a mistake and undershoot, give her the gun and fly over the wires, or the hangars, or whatever the obstruction is.

The first thing you do is pull everything. The cockpit is full of knobs and handles and gadgets and dooflickers, and you give them all a yank, hoping that by some miracle the ship will throttle down. Then you pull them all again, and finally saw on the broken throttle handle

Minnesota Mentor Tops All-Star Coach Polling

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Bernie Bierman, whose Minnesota eleven won the Big Ten title and a claim to national gridiron honors last season, took over first place today in the poll to name a coach for the college all-star football team which meets the Chicago Bears at Soldier Field August 29.

Bierman had 114,526 points, with Frank Thomas, of Alabama, a close second with 113,408. Elmer Layden, of Notre Dame, had 113,206 for third, and Dr. Lawrence E. Spears, of Wisconsin, followed with 110,911.

Gold Cup Racers Await Starting Gun

By the Associated Press.

Bolton Landing, N. Y., July 26.—Five speedy craft rested in their boathouse cradles tonight awaiting the gun that will send them skimming over Lake George tomorrow in quest of the 31-year-old Gold Cup, symbolic of American speedboat supremacy.

Observers on hand for the grueling 90-mile test looked for a smashing of existing records in view of the increased power and superchargers permitted under new rules of the American Speedboat Association.

On the eve of the race, which will be run in three heats, Wild Bill Horn, of Newport News, Va., pilot of Delphine IV, was considered the most dangerous challenger of George Reis, of Lake George, whose 13-year-old El Lagarto sped to victory in 1933 and 1934.

Nazis Defend Selection of Athletes

Only Six Jewish Men on Team; Incompetence Given as Reason.

Were Treated as if They Had Not Competed, Is Charge.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 26.—Charging persistent violation of Nazi pledges, Jewish leaders asserted today that the preliminary try-outs had been marked by such discrimination against Jewish athletes that it was unlikely any member of that race would gain a place on Germany's Olympic teams for the 1936 games here.

Nazi spokesmen, in turn, said the failure of any Jews to qualify for German terms thus far had been due to their own incompetence. A member of the staff of Hans von Tschammer und Osten, Nazi sports commissioner, pointed to the establishment of a training camp for Jewish athletes and opportunities given them for participating in the try-outs as evidence of Nazi fairness to all contenders for the various teams.

"Jews competed in the first try-outs," a Nazi official said, "but none survived."

Unfair Treatment.

Prominent Jews, on the other hand, said the factors of widespread anti-Semitic sentiment and restricted training facilities made satisfactory performances by Jewish athletes during the early eliminations virtually impossible.

"Jewish competitors throughout the eliminations were treated as though they had not participated," one Jewish spokesman said.

The latest flare-up over alleged discrimination against Jewish athletes came with the disclosure by the official German Olympic committee office that there were no Jews among the athletes so far chosen to compete for places on German teams. The Olympic office reported that eight or ten athletes already had been chosen for each Olympic sport for the try-outs that eventually will decide the make-up of each team.

Only six Jews, among hundreds of other athletes, competed in the trials in Berlin. Among the thousands throughout Germany who trained formally for the spring and summer eliminations only 20 were Jews, who were tutored by an Aryan instructor at Ettlingen Baden. These figures were given by the Reich's sport department.

One Jewish spokesman, however, said it was "extremely noteworthy" that those in charge of the Ettlingen camp allegedly refused to give out any information regarding the performances of the Jews.

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, today refused to get excited over the disclosure in Berlin that no Jews have been named so far among the athletes already chosen to compete for the German Olympic team.

"The fact that no Jews have been named so far to compete for Germany doesn't necessarily mean that they have been discriminated against on that score," he said. "In 40 years of Olympic history, I doubt if the number of Jewish athletes competing from all nations totaled 1 per cent in the games. In fact, I believe one-half of 1 per cent would be a high percentage.

"I do not imagine that the American team will have many Jews, either, but no one can say we discriminate against them. Every man with the ability is welcomed on the American team and German officials have promised us that all Jews with enough ability will get a chance on their team. Until there is a concrete proof of racial discrimination, I do not see how or why we should make a protest."

Lovelock Scores Over Gene Venzke

Wins 1,500 Meters Jaunt as Americans Bow.

By the United Press.

Stockholm, Sweden, July 26.—Jack Lovelock, of New Zealand, scored a smashing triumph over Gene Venzke, of America, in an international track and field meet tonight.

Lovelock captured the 1,500-meter run to give the touring Americans one of their few defeats suffered since arriving in Europe. Lovelock's time was three minutes, 57.6 seconds. Venzke tied for second with I. Haglund, of Sweden, at 3:58.2. Eric Ny, of Sweden, finished third.

Al Moreau, Marysville, La., continued undefeated when he slammed over the 100-meter hurdle distance in 14.4 seconds to whip H. Lidman, of Sweden, and Sten Petterson, Sweden. Eddie O'Brien, N. Y. A. C. middle distance ace, scored in the 300 meters. His time was 34.3.

England Faces U. S. Today In Singles

Budge Will Oppose Perry; Allison Meets Austin in 'Crucial' Test.

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 26.—A final spirited practice session today put America's Davis Cup warriors in fighting trim for tomorrow's big push when they encounter England's twin destroyers, Fred Perry and Bunny Austin, in the opening singles matches of the challenge round.

Scoffing at information that one of London's biggest commission houses was offering 7 to 4 against their chances, the veteran Wilmer Allison and his California teammate, Donald Budge, radiated calm confidence and resolve after each had played a pair of sparkling sets against John Van Ryn.

Allison, the 31-year-old Texan, who will start the ball rolling against Austin at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m. Eastern Standard Time) tomorrow in what may prove to be the key match of the climactic series, refused to get agitated over the betting odds.

Doubles Monday.

After tomorrow's singles matches Allison and Van Ryn will meet the British pair of George Patrick Hughes and Charles Raymond Davys Tuckey in the doubles Monday. On Tuesday tomorrow's pairings will be reversed in the final two matches of the series.

Coach Dan Maskell, of the British team, after watching Perry and Austin play a two-set duel today, predicted England would retain the cup by the same 4-1 score as a year ago, conceding America only the doubles.

"There's even a possibility Hughes and Tuckey will win that point, too," Maskell said. "Don't forget, they beat your pair in the Queens Club tournament before Wimbledon. Allison and Van Ryn are not quite the team they used to be."

Linke to Quit Hospital Today; Doctor Amazed

By a Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 27.—Marveling at the mildness of the injury suffered by Pitcher Ed Linke, of the Nats, when struck in the forehead by a terrific line drive today, Dr. William Cassebaum tonight said that Linke would remain in Roosevelt Hospital through tomorrow for further observation.

Dr. Cassebaum, club physician of the Yankees, saw Linke struck by the head-high drive today and feared more serious consequences than the slight brain concussion the pitcher suffered. Only a slight lump was raised on Linke's forehead by the blow and he was smiling as he was carried from the park on a stretcher. His discharge from the hospital tomorrow night is a probability.

Sir Malcolm Waits.

London, July 26 (AP).—A spokesman for Sir Malcolm Campbell said today the British sportsman had not yet definitely decided when he will leave for the United States to seek a new automobile speed record on the Bonneville salt flats in Utah.

Schmeling Irks Mike Jacobs; Is Warned

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, July 26.—Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight who has suddenly become the most sought after fighter in the business, got his warning today that his time in the sportlight is short.

Dillydallying by long distance telephone from Berlin with First Promoter Jimmy Johnston, at Madison Square Garden, then Promoter Mike Jacobs, at the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, Schmeling finally ran Jacobs out of patience.

"I'll give him about 24 more hours to accept a fight with Joe Louis here in September, or as far as I'm concerned he can stay over there the rest of his life," fumed Michael. "I don't know what I'm getting het up about him for, anyway. He wants the moon and the sun and all the money there is for a chance to fight his way back to the heavyweight title."

Refused to Weaken.

Schmeling, in talks with both Mike Jacobs and the Garden, refused to weaken on his demand that $150,000 in cash be posted for him in a Holland bank before he will consider coming over here to fight either Louis for Jacobs or Max Baer for the Garden.

The Garden already has offered to post $100,000 abroad, even though the experts believe a Baer-Schmeling match wouldn't draw $200,000 in September. Two years ago, when both Baer and Schmeling were "hot" and the full power of Dempsey's personality as promoter was poured on the match, they drew $204,000, and Schmeling was knocked out.

Jacobs is willing to post $150,000 in Holland as security that Schmeling gets paid 33 per cent of the net receipts for a Louis match, which experts agree would draw upward of $500,000. Schmeling demands this $150,000 as an outright guarantee, however. Jacobs, realizing that Louis would want just as much, is bothered with severe headaches.

Cools Out Rapidly.

The Twentieth Century Club, despite the attractiveness of a Schmeling-Louis battle, was cooling out rapidly on the proposition tonight. There is considerable suspicion that the German has no intention of coming over here at all. Taxes will be tremendous on any sum that he earns here, and the matter of past indebtedness to his manager, Joe Jacobs, who received no share in several of Schmeling's foreign fights, bulks large in all the discussions.

The alternate plan under consideration was to pit Louis against several major heavyweights here in monthly shows, giving Art Lasky, Steve Hamas and Walter Neusel their chances in turn at the Brown Bomber if Louis disposes of King Levinsky, as generally expected, in Chicago August 7. Louis is considered such an attraction now that these fights might draw a total of $600,000, without any of the wear and tear of international complications or transatlantic telephone calls.

Neither Mike Jacobs nor Schmeling hears very well over the transatlantic phone, particularly when arguing in large numbers.

Cubs Win, 5-3, To Advance On Giants

Gain Half a Game on Idle Terrymen by Victory Over Cincinnati.

CHICAGO, July 26.—The Chicago Cubs, who were able to sit on the sidelines and chuckle during the last few days while the Giants and Cardinals were engaged in their throat-cutting series at St. Louis, found another cause for mirth today when they trimmed the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 1, in the series opener while their National League rivals were idle.

The triumph gave the Cubs a full game of second-place margin over the Cards and left them only 2½ games behind the Giants. The Reds, despite their defeat, clung to fifth place by a 1-point margin over Brooklyn.

The Cubs had little trouble ringing up their sixth victory in a row, although they were outhit, 9-8. The Reds tossed in three errors, two of which helped start Chicago off on the road to victory in the fourth after Cincinnati had scored its only run.

Hurls Steady Game.

French pitched a steady game after successive singles by Jim Bottomley, Ival Goodman and Ernie Lombardi had produced the Cincinnati tally. Stan Hack's fourth inning single cashed in on two Red misplays in the fourth, scoring Gabby Hartnett and Frank Demaree. Hartnett had reached first when Kiki Cuyler, making his first appearance in a Cincinnati unform against his old mates, muffed an easy fly and Demaree reached first on Lew Riggs' wild throw.

The Cubs then padded their margin by scoring a run in each of the next two innings. Augie Galan singled and Phil Cavarretta doubled in the fifth; Stan Hack hit a two-bagger and Bill Jurges a single in the sixth after Don Brennan had relieved Paul Derringer on the hill for Cincinnati in the seventh, Galan singled, took second on Bill Herman's infield out and scored the final run on Hartnett's base hit.

A ladies' day gathering of 15,500 augmented the 5,500 cash customers.

Manush's 2 Homers Account for 5 Runs

Pitcher Struck by Batted Ball, Suffers Slight Brain Concussion; Freak Double Play Results; Hayes, Successor, Is Effective.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 26.—After three months as an American League nonentity, the Washington Club finally made its presence felt in the pennant race today before 5,000 paid witnesses in Yankee Stadium. With nothing to lose and very little to gain, it was seemingly out of pure cussedness that the seventh-place Nats hauled the Yankees out of the league lead.

Here in Yankee Stadium, the Nats collaborated with the Tigers out in Cleveland to oust the Yankees from the lead they had held since May 30. Later in the day, the Tigers checked in with an 8-2 victory over the Indians to bounce to the front by a margin of a game and a half over the backsliding Yanks.

Decisive Triumph.

There was nothing indecisive about the Nats' triumph over the Yankees. By the score of 9 to 3 the incorrigible Washington Club continued its strange misbehavior in the pennant race.

Washington won the game after Pitcher Ed Linke had been carried from the field on a stretcher in the second inning, felled by a vicious line drive off the bat of Jesse Hill, but as Linke lay in Roosevelt Hospital with a mild brain concussion, the Nats found in young Millard Hayes a pitcher who could beat the Yanks.

The Yankees today fell within the scope of German persecutions. Herr Heinie Manush, only a generation removed from the Fatherland, purged the game of all doubtfull elements with his big home run bat. His anti-Yankee drive first took the form of a home run with none on base in the fourth inning, but in the seventh with the bases loaded, Manush's purge increased in intensity.

Longer Than First.

He smacked another home run far into the right-field bleachers, a colossal clout that was even longer than the first. Jimmy Deshong, who had relieved Johnny Broaca earlier in the inning, was the victim of the wallop.

Herr Heinie thus made the Yankees rue their failure to remove him as a menace last month before the trading deadline expired. They spurned Clark Griffith's offer to trade Manush for a Yankee pitcher and today they saw him drive in five runs, make two sensational catches and otherwise contribute to the despair of the Yanks on a day when victory would have been sweetest.

For a few brief minutes tragedy appeared to have reared an ugly head out in the pitcher's box in the second inning. Linke, who had turned the Yanks back scoreless in the first inning, was pitching to Hill with men on first and second and one out when a terrific line drive heads-high, bounced off Hill's bat.

Linke's Injury Described.

Linke instinctively shot his hands up in front of his face, but too late. The hard-hit ball tore through his bare hand and struck him full on the right side of the forehead. Linke dropped to the mound and rolled off the slight incline toward the plate. The ball caromed from his head in a high loop into foul territory across the third-base line and the alert Jack Redmond snatched it up before it hit the ground.

With Linke still prone, Redmond thinking fast, threw to Kress at second base to complete a double play before Chapman was able to get back to the bag. Then the players again turned their attention to Linke.

He was carried from the field and laid on a stretcher in the Nats' dugout, where Trainer Mike Martin and Yankee physicians applied first aid. He never lost conscious-

Tigers Subdue Indians, 8-2; Take Lead

Triumph Climaxes Climb From Sixth Place, Begun in May.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, July 26.—The Detroit Tigers cleared up any doubts about their status in the American League pennant race which had been left after their series with the Yankees by trouncing the Indians, 8 to 2, in the series opener today and taking a clear hold on first place.

The victory and the Yanks' defeat by Washington put Detroit 1½ games ahead and provided a triumphant climax for its climb in the standings. On May 30, when the Yanks assumed the lead, the Tigers had just left sixth place and were tied with Boston for fourth. The move into first place today came a week ahead of last season's advance, when the Tigers took the lead August 2 and never were headed.

Lee Is Pounded.

Two rousing attacks on Thornton Lee in the sixth and seventh innings clinched the game for Mickey Cochrane's team bringing in five runs to break up a tight mound duel between Lee and Elden Auker. Hank Greenberg led the attack, smacking a single and two doubles and driving in three runs. Auker was touched for ten hits but allowed only one unearned run up to the ninth when Ralph Winegarner's pinch double brought in the second.

Nightmare Shows Speed in Stretch to Win at Suffolk Downs

Sea Ted Runs Second by 3 Lengths

Victor Pays $9 Mutuel; Double Is Ridden by Jockey Wagner.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 26.—Displaying a great drive in the stretch and rated perfectly at the hands of Apprentice Joey Wagner, the Greentree Stable's Nightmare had no trouble today in capturing the Gardner, the 6-furlong sprint for 2-year-old maidens. The winner was second choice to Be Big, which was out of the money, and she went the route in 1:13 to pay $9 for a win ticket.

Nedvive showed early speed and had a nose out front in a start that saw the horses come out of the gate like a wave. She surrendered early, however, and the Bubbling Over filly, the favored Be Big, took temporary command.

Takes Lead at Turn.

Nightmare was placed badly during the early running but Wagner, who is giving Wayne Wright a fight for the honor of leading rider and who loses his "bug" tomorrow, hustled him into the contention. At the turn he took the lead and began to draw away from the field and under the wire was three lengths to the good of Sea Ted, which was a head in front of Nedvive. Barnsley showed early foot but could not hang on to the field and was beaten by a nose by Nedvive for the show.

The victory was the second of the day for Wagner, who rode the other Greentree victor, Jamboree, in the first race.

By the Associated Press.

Empire City, N. Y., July 26.—Lee Rosenberg's Dowdy Dell, winner of her last local start in a common jog, came right back with a game performance to capture top honors in the short six-furlongs of the fourth race, which headed a mediocre program here this afternoon. J. J. Conway's Sandy Bill, which breezed to a hollow triumph over Dowdy Dell in his last outing, trailed the filly by a length and a half on this occasion. Some Good, a 50-to-1 shot from the Ascot Stable, missed the place by a head.

Apprentice Eddie Yager, who has been riding in fine form at the Yonkers meeting, earned a double on Dowdy Dell. The Rosenberg lassie was a 3-to-5 favorite and covered the distance over a slow track in 1:10 1-5.

Sandy Bill, after opening at 7 to 5 and closing at 9 to 5, stopped all over in the final furlong. The son of Wise Counsellor broke like the wind and hustled into a five-length advantage, making Red Badge stop. Still far in front, Sandy Bill suddenly curled up after entering the last furlong.

JAMBOREE, steadied along back of the pace, moved up on the outside when called upon, wore down the leaders and, hard ridden at the end, outlasted CHALLEPHEN. The latter followed in closest pursuit of JUBILEE JIM wore the latter down for the lead and, despite vigorous handling, was unable to withstand the winner. JUBILEE JIM, hustled to the front in the inside, showed good speed, but faltered through the closing three-sixteenths. LADY CARROT was unable to reach the leaders. JOY FLAG was outrun. WISE KING, in a jam soon after the start, stumbled and unseated his rider.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEPAWAY, $6.00, $3.40, $3.20; FANCY FLIGHT $4.60, $3.80; ROBERT S., $10.40.

STEPAWAY, prominently placed from the outside, wore down the leaders nearing the stretch and drew clear in the final furlong. FANCY FLIGHT, a forward factor from the beginning while unable to stave off the winner, continued gamely to the end. ROBERT S. moved up gradually on the outside and came willingly on the outside through the stretch run. GIBBYS CHOICE, outrun early, came stoutly on the outside through the stretch. EPITAPH, under reserve while racing on the inside, was unable to improve his position when called upon and dropped back through the last quarter-mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IMA GREENOCK $6.60, $3.60, $3.00; MOANE KEALA, $3.60, $3.00; PANA FRANKA, $3.60.

IMA GREENOCK, under slight restraint while racing on the outside for the first half-mile, came through on the inside in the stretch and, closing with a rush, was up in the closing stride. MOANE KEALA assumed a slight lead in the opening quarter-mile, drew clear near the stretch and, holding on well, just failed to hold on long enough. PANA FRANKA, a forward factor throughout and under steadying restraint moved up threateningly nearing the furlong pole, but was unable to keep pace in the drive. CHIEF'S PRIDE was in the first flight the entire way. TED HUSING moved up gradually on the outside, loomed up threateningly, but faltered in the closing drive. SUN TEATIME was unable to enter into serious contention.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RANGE FINDER, $30.00, $14.60 $4.80; SANTERNO, $7.20, $3.40; LOTTA AIRS, $3.00.

RANGE FINDER took command in the running to the first turn, drew clear, was rated along under slight restraint, was roused several times at the head of the stretch and, continuing gamely, held sway to the end. SANTERNO worked his way up steadily in the last three furlongs and closed with a rush through the stretch. LOTTA AIRS, well placed all the way, was unable to improve her position to any great extent in the drive. HIGHEST POINT weakened in the closing quarter-mile after having raced reservedly. TRAITOR moved up fast when straightened out on the back stretch, but weakened after going five furlongs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHTMARE, $9.00, $5.60, $4.20; SEA TED, $8.60, $4.60; NEDVIVE, $3.60.

NIGHTMARE, away fast but lacking speed to maintain her position, was eased back in the run to the far turn and, sent up on the outside, wore down SEA TED when reaching the stretch and drew out fast through the last furlong. SEA TED displayed speed from the start, went to the front leaving the back stretch, made a determined effort to keep pace when challenged, but was not good enough. NEDVIVE, prominently placed all the way, continued easily to the end. BARNSLEY, outrun for the first half-mile, closed willingly in the last quarter-mile.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:31. Winner, E. A. McMann's b. c. (4), by Dunbar II—Mary Maud. Trained by H. L. Cornwell. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:45 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENARES, $11.40, $5.80, $4.00; SOCIAL CLIMBER, $5.20, $3.40; PATCHEYE, $4.60.

BENARES, never far from the lead while racing on the outside, moved up when called upon in the last three furlongs, wore down SOCIAL CLIMBER for the lead when reaching the stretch and held him safe to the end. SOCIAL CLIMBER established the pace while under slight reserve, was given a breathing spell nearing the far turn, assumed the lead swinging from the back stretch, drew clear and, despite fighting it out determinedly, was unable to withstand the winner. PATCHEYE worked her way up gradually in the last half-mile and came gamely in the stretch drive. PASS, on the inside down the back stretch, assumed a brief lead, but was unable to maintain his advantage, dropping back in the last five-sixteenths. ALL BAYS moved up on the outside nearing the half-mile ground, but was never able to improve his position thereafter under punishment.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:04. Off at 6:05. Winner, R. Curran's ch. g. (5), High Cloud—Halicore. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13, 1:39 1-5, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIDSHIPMAN, $6.00, $3.00, $2.40; PROPAGANDIST, $3.40, $2.60; FLYING DERE, $2.80.

MIDSHIPMAN moved through on the inside down the back stretch to gain a prominent position, held to a position on the inside and, closing stoutly, wore down PROPAGANDIST and was slowly drawing out at the end. PROPAGANDIST, taken to the outside in the run down the back stretch, wore down PRINCE POMPEY for the lead nearing the stretch and, well out in the track through the stretch, was unable to meet the closing bid of the winner. FLYING DERE, reserved off pace early, came gamely in the stretch run. PRINCE POMPEY took command in the run to the first turn, was steadied along in front, but weakened in the last quarter-mile. HOGANS FOX tired after showing brief speed. MORALIST was never a serious factor.

Discovery 1-2 Favorite in Big Race

To Carry 135 Pounds in $10,000 Arlington Meet Feature.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Discovery, globe-trotter of the American turf, goes sightseeing again tomorrow, but it's almost 1 to 2 that he'll win all the money while his rivals are seeing the sights.

The sensational 4-year-old, owned by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, of New York, carrying a load of 135 pounds, tonight was a 1-to-2 favorite to win the $10,000 added Arlington Handicap at Arlington Park tomorrow. The race will be at a mile and a quarter. Eight others, most of them with a little more than a feather on their backs, were named to oppose Discovery, which will be in quest of his sixth straight handicap victory in six weeks.

Among the opposition, Discovery will find the California horse, Riskulus, owned by Norman W. Church of Los Angeles, trying to repeat his victory in the handicap of a year ago. Riskulus, with a 19-pound pull in the weight, appears to be the one horse capable of stopping the furious rush of Discovery toward a new money-winning record.

Other Odds High.

There was some support for the Canadian champion, Stand Pat, the entry of E. F. Seagram, Montreal sportsman. The odds on the others, however, ran up to 30 to 1.

The number of times the heavy impost of 135 pounds has been carried to victory in important American, stakes over a mile and a quarter route is less than a score. Yet it was done once before in the Arlington Handicap when the mighty Equipoise won it in 1933, beating Watch Him, which will carry the colors of Mrs. John D. Hertz, of Chicago, tomorrow.

Apparently still at his best, Discovery can pack weight without serious handicap. Carrying 131 pounds, Discovery made a runaway race of the Bunker Hill Handicap in Boston just a week ago. Picking up an additional 4 pounds for tomorrow's race will not slow him up, his backers feel.

Out Fishin'

By Jack Hawley.

WITH practically all fresh water changed into a deplorable chocolate color by the frequent rains of the past week, bass and other species will continue their present holiday for several days and perhaps longer. However, this condition will not prevent the enthusiast who wants to try out that new fly or bait casting rod from journeying down the Chesapeake and getting his revenge on the croaker family.

Although much despised by the majority of sport fishermen because of the ease and large number caught, the hard-head is no weakling when taken on light tackle and will surprise many that heretofore have given him little if any consideration. Salt water anglers who do not desire to add additional expensive tackle to their equipment can purchase a steel rod for less than $2.00 that will answer his purpose equally as well. Try it and be convinced.

Conditions Improving.

Reports from the upper part of the bay are spotty, but with clearing weather and favorable winds the fishing over this week-end should improve sufficiently to warrant the reservation of worthy boats and guides. During the day the fish are seeking the deep water, returning to shallow water in the early evening, which accounts for the rush of boats at 5 o'clock and the successful return at midnight. There is no doubt that at this season of the year the fish (other than bluefish) are feeding on schedule and no amount of persuasion can induce them to change for the pleasure and convenience of the daylight angler.

A safety pin (common variety) may save your next fishing trip if you have the misfortune in breaking one or more of your guides, whether agate or metal. By cutting both ends close to the head or opening of the pin, bend back each end with pliers and form into a loop. Slip over the rod and bring both loops underneath and tie with fish cord. The closed end will then furnish you with an excellent guide and will stay in place until renewed. Fasten a few pins on your belt loop for such an emergency.

The above will do for the rod but what about the last drone, feather or spoon that the bluefish caused you to lose when your line snapped or perhaps because you neglected to replace last year's line with a fresh and stronger line. I am passing this on to you because it does the trick in fine style. Purchase two short lengths of both white and red rubber tubing such as is used around the house for medicinal and sanitary purposes. On a 3-inch sinker (use the long tapering type with line hole at each end) slip over the red piece of rubber and bring it down to the center of the sinker, cut the white piece about twice the length of the sinker and slip it up to meet the red rubber and fasten by tying or cementing the rubber together.

Fishing Bureau.

Cut numerous slits in the remaining white rubber up close to the bottom of the sinker and fasten the hook through the sinker loop. No other lead is required. The above device is excellent for deep trolling and can be used for surface trolling by increased speed of the boat or by using a smaller sinker.

Details for establishing a fishing bureau for full information to anglers (both fresh and salt water) who do not possess transportation, few acquaintances, limited funds, is now in the process of completion. This will also include a list of open dates that room is available for one or more anglers desiring to make up a complete party or parties. Full details will be announced through this column at an early date.

Note to boat captains: It is requested that you inform your guests who are fortunate in securing good action pictures of their catch to forward same to this writer for use on this page. In addition, those of you who are willing to furnish authentic and reliable information and interested in business seven days a week during the season, write me giving the number of boats for hire, rates, accommodations, etc. The writer is seeking honest co-operation in return for his pledge to make "Out Fishin'" a dependable service to all that seek out-door-recreation.

Charles Town Sets 4-Day Race Meet

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 26.—Arrangements have been completed by the Charles Town Horse Show Association with the West Virginia Racing Commission for a four-day race meet here early next month, to be held in connection with the annual Charles Town Horse Show.

The amount of bond required as deposit by the commission to guarantee payment of State taxes on pari-mutuel betting has been set and will be met by the local association.

The horse show, now dwarfed by the pari-mutuel racing to where it is no longer important here, will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, August 7 and 8, while racing will be held August 7, 8, 9 and 10.

Gallico Describes Hurried Landing

again just in case it fixed itself. Nothing happens.

Now! What are you going to do, cut right away, or fly around a while and think it over? Nope, better cut it now before you get panicky. You look at the field. There are two of them at Roosevelt, perfectly huge ones. Now they look like postage stamps. And you have to come in over the telegraph wires and hangars. A thousand feet altitude. Remember now, NO MISTAKES. If you undershoot, you're in the wires. Overshoot and it's worse. Go on cut the damn thing and get it over with. Click! Hmmm, the prop is still turning. At least your passenger won't know the stick is dead. Now glide . . . glide . . . Is the distance right? You seem awfully high. You slip a little! Whoa! Not too much. You're not over those wires yet. Gee whiz, did you slip too much? Should you dive a little to get more speed? Are the controls getting sloppy? Whee, over the wires and hangars. . . . Looka that pit and embankment and broken ground beneath. Have you got enough speed to sail over. You should have. Whee! Over that too . . . Now, here's the ground . . . Level off . . . Ease back . . . ease back . . . back . . . THUMP! You're in! and brother, and sister too, is THAT a grand and glorious feeling . . . You get out, kneel down, and kiss the ground tenderly and lovingly. Then you get the throttle fixed, and go back up again. The lady too.

Virginians Buy Ksar, Famed Stallion

Sire's Get Have Won 320 Races Worth 11 Million Francs.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

MIDDLEBURG, Va., July 26.—Ksar, one of the finest stallions ever produced in France, has been purchased by Kenneth N. Gilpin, of Boyce, Clarke County, and A. S. Hewitt, of Montana Hall, Clarke County. The imported stud arrived in Virginia Wednesday and is at present being stabled at Montana Hall.

A chestnut horse (colt of 1918, by Bruleur-Kizil, out of Kaurgan), Ksar stands 16.1 hands. He was purchased from the Haras de Jardy, owned by Eddie and Francois Edmond Blanc, near Paris.

The price paid by the Virginians for the stallion has not been disclosed, nor is it known yet what his stud fee will be. A great many mares already have been booked to this stud, whose fee in France was $3,000.

Ksar brought 151,000 francs as a yearling. He started to race as a 4-year-old and in two seasons won more money than any other horse ever has within that short a period. His total winnings mounted to $350,000, placing him fourth on the list of money winners. Ksar is the sire of three French Derby winners and his get have won 320 races and 11,000,000 francs.

Kenneth Gilpin, some years ago, with Wallace Armstrong, bought Teddy, another famous French stallion, who stands at Kentmere Stud, Clarke County. This gallant old thoroughbred is the grandfather of Omaha, 3-year-old champion of America. Gilpin is selling at Saratoga, in August, 12 yearling colts, nine of them by Teddy. Many believe they will bring the highest prices of any colts placed on the block at the Spa this season.

Welsh-McElvenny to Meet Mitchell-Markey in Net Final

Teams Clash For Crown Today

Both Veteran Pairs Are Given Hard Battles in Semifinals.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE heated rivalry between the doubles teams of Barney Welsh and Ralph McElvenny and Dooley Mitchell and Bud Markey is set for a vigorous renewal this afternoon. The two veteran combinations slashed into the final of the Public Parks championships yesterday, and for the third time will slam it out in spectacular eye-opening fashion that has made their duels fixed features of the local tennis seasons.

Welsh and McElvenny, defending champions and finalists in the National Public Parks championships last year, weathered the stubborn opposition of Bill Breese and Hugh Lynch, to win, 7—5, 7—5, in a match that brought forth more fine smashing than the city has seen in a semifinal in years.

Mitchell and Markey fought an uphill battle in the third act to survive their match with the 1933 champions, Frank Shore and Tony Latona, 8—6, 3—6, 6—4.

Women Vie in Final.

The final is slated for 3 o'clock. It will be preceded by the final for the women's championship, with Sara Moore, local women's sensation of the season, meeting Bobsey Turney at 2 o'clock.

The semifinals of the women's doubles will begin at 4 o'clock. Admission is 25 cents. The receipts will be used to defray expenses of the men's finalists to the national tournament in New Orleans.

The more decisive volleying of Welsh and McElvenny and a frequent weakness of Breese off the ground spelled the small margin of difference between the two teams. Breese offset his driving errors by brilliant work overhead, but neither he nor Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, volleyed with the finality of the champions.

Brilliant Rallies.

Lobs played an important part in the Latona-Shore—Mitchell-Markey fracas, both teams often resorting to the strategy offensively as well as defensively. In the third set Latona dropped his service to make it 2-all and games went on service to the tenth game, when Shore was broken. He opened it by smashing outside and Dooley smashed for a placement. Shore volleyed for 15-30, but then smashed outside and Markey drove for a placement for set and match.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Men's Doubles.

Semifinals—Barney Welsh and Ralph McElvenny defeated W. L. Breese and Hugh Lynch, 7-5, 7-5; Dooley Mitchell and Bud Markey defeated Tony Latona and Frank Shore, 8—6, 3—6, 6—4.

Women's Singles.

Semifinals—Bobsey Turney won from Kay Johnson by default.

Women's Doubles.

Quarterfinals—Bobsey Turney and Victoria Eynon defeated Dorothy Orme and Alice Morgan, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3. Sara Moore and Dorette Miller defeated Dorothy Bergstrom and Betty Kronman, 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE.

Nats Win, 9-3, Over Yanks; Linke Hurt

ness, according to Martin. With the arrival of an ambulance ten minutes later, he was taken to the hospital, where X-ray pictures revealed no fracture but a slight concussion. He was resting comfortably tonight, but, according to doctors, had escaped death by inches. The same blow on the temple would have been fatal, they said.

The Nats didn't tarry in staking Linke to a two-run lead. Jake Powell drove a long triple to center to score Buddy Myer in the first inning and Bluege's single and Redmond's fly scored Kress in the second. Linke extricated himself from a threatening position when, after walking three batters with one out in the first, he threw three straight called strikes past Bill Dickey.

The Yanks got a run off Hayes in the third on three straight hits, but the Nats found Broaca for two more in the fourth. Manush's healthy homer accounted for the first and Gehrig helped to boot in the second when he fumbled Redmond's roller after Kress had singled. Hayes singled to drive Kress home.

In those last five innings Hayes surrendered only three hits to the Yankees and not until the ninth did the Yanks get a man to third. He was mixing a bristling fast ball with a clever change of pace.

The Nats put the clincher on the game in the seventh. Redmond singled to right and Hayes sacrificed. Kuhel walked and Stone's long double against the right-field wall drove Redmond home.

At this point Deshong relieved Broaca and intentionally passed Myer to fill the bases and bring Powell to bat. Deshong was seemingly nicely out of a troublesome situation when Powell grounded to Rolfe and Kuhel was forced at the plate, but along came Manush.

He came along with probably the longest home run of his big league career—a tremendous drive over Selkirk's head half way to the top of the right-field bleachers and the last four Washington runs joyfully clattered across the plate.

Nazi Paper Belittles Louis as Max's Foe

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 26.—Der Boxsports, official organ of German boxing authorities, frowned today upon a proposed Schmeling-Louis heavyweight bout.

"It's more than doubtful whether Louis is qualified to fight a boxer of Schmeling's significance," an editorial declared. "There is the same degree of uncertainty as in ball games. Then if Schmeling should lose, who would profit? Sport as such? Not at all.

"We do not want champions to shoot up like mushrooms. They ought to be selected on the basis of a long, unquestionable record. Thus far Louis has only a victory over Carnera. However, Schmeling is not interested in facilitating Louis' rise to the championship."

Tri-City Regatta Under Way Today

THOSE enlarged egg beaters known as outboard motors will whip the Severn into a froth today as the eighth annual Tri-City regatta gets under way at Herald Harbor, Md. Nine events, all outboard races, will start at 2:30 p. m. and are scheduled to run until 5:30.

Outboard entries have broken all records in the Chesapeake Bay country. Fred Jacoby and Sammy Crooks, New Jersey aces, are entered in four classes with as many boats. J. C. Walier, holder of the New York State title for three seasons will be represented. Gar Wood, jr., son of the famed speedboat king, has the largest number of outboards entered with five boats. Wood is high in points scored this season and the Tri-City meet will have great bearing on his chances for the national championship.

Lew Carlisle is among others with four entries. Joel Thorne, holder of the three principal trophies and medals for high point scoring in 1934, probably will rule a favorite for first place honors in the Tri-City affair. Approximately 100 champions and contenders are entered in the outboard group. The entry list is studded with such names as Marshall Eldridge, Ed Hoffman, Al Doeman, Fred Chase, Don Flowers, Morton Daller, Flinton Ferguson, Bob Heape and Mully Scull among others.

Maryland Codd, one of the country's best women drivers, will be called upon to face some severe competition from a member of her sex in the Class M (midget) race. Mollie Tyson, another outstanding feminine star, will provide the opposition for Miss Codd.

Practically the entire personnel of the President's Cup Regatta, one of the most efficient organizations of its sort in the United States, will assist in handling the regatta.

Buddy Baer Stops Foe; $748 Purse Impounded

Long Branch, N. J., July 26 (AP).—Buddy Baer, brother of Max Baer, dropped Artie Suss, 205, of New York, with a left to the jaw at the very start of their scheduled ten-round bout tonight, but Referee Jimmy Manley halted the fight and declared it no contest on the ground that Suss was not a fit opponent for Baer. Baer's share of the purse, $748, was impounded.

Mrs. Max Baer, the former Mary Ellen Sullivan, of Washington, saw her first prize fight in company with her husband. After the fight she referred to Suss as "that poor boy." "I felt so sorry for him," she said.

Works Division Wins.

The long winning streak of Sports Center soft-ballers was cracked wide open yesterday by Works Division, District Government League leaders. Nehrlich pitched two-hit ball for the winners and was backed up with flawless fielding. Demino, for the winners, did the batting honors, sending in three markers and scoring one himself.

America Will Send Three Men To London Olympics for Deaf

FOR the first time in history, the United States will be represented this year in the Olympic games for the deaf to be held in London August 17-24.

The American delegation will be a small band, it is true, consisting of only three members, but those responsible for sending them to the wars hope to do much better next time.

Representing the United States will be S. Robey Burns, athletic director at the State School for the Deaf in Jackson, Ill., who will be a good-will representative, and John Chudzikiewicz and John Cannon.

Chudzikiewicz, a naturalized American, won the World Polish Olympic javelin title in Warsaw last summer. He is expected to figure prominently in the javelin and shot-put and generally is conceded a good chance of taking a place in the discus throw. Cannon is a runner from Sterling, Ill.

The committee in charge of this year's Olympics, in which 60 nations will participate at the White City Stadium, sent a special request to Percival Hall, president of Gallaudet here, asking that the United States be represented.

Unable to take any action in the matter, Hall forwarded the request to Burns. The State school athletic director decided to attend the games himself as a good-will delegate, and finally succeeded in raising funds through prominent Midwestern business men to take the two athletes selected.

Burns at present is in Clarendon, Va. He sails with the athletes from New York next Tuesday.

Sarron, Boils Victim, Cancels Bernard Bout

THE Pete Sarron-Roger Bernard featherweight bout scheduled for Griffith Stadium Monday night was canceled yesterday. Cancellation of the contest, which had aroused tremendous local interest, was made necessary when Sarron was forced to undergo an operation for boils at his training camp in Asheville, N. C.

Joe Temes, a Greek featherweight who is well known to local ringworms, will be substituted for Sarron against Bernard. Since reporting here from Florida, Temes has participated in ten bouts, winning nine and recording one draw. Three of the nine victories scored by Joe were via the knockout route, and Temes avenged the draw by spanking Julie Katz in a return match.

Sarron had been suffering from boils on his arm for a number of days, but felt that they would in no way interfere with his fighting Bernard. Yesterday, the Syrian sizzler's physician advised the operation, which will keep Pete from fighting for at least two weeks.

Wild Bill Howell will attempt a comeback in a four-rounder against Gene Harrington, Marine welterweight. Andy Martin and Patsy Severo are booked for the eight-round semifinal, while in a pair of sixes Dave Barry will meet Eddie Burl and Ray Ingram has been booked against Bill Temes.

Agriculture's Softball Aces Win, 4 to 0

IN the ball park that Daddy Baseball built, the latter's offspring, Sonny Softball, did very well by himself last night. The pick of the town's softball artists drew a crowd of 1,500 out beneath the shining lights of Griffith Stadium to watch Abe Rosenfield, former Catholic U. basket-ball star, pitched Agriculture to a 4-to-0 victory over Grosner's All Stars.

The much-hailed classic was dimmed a bit at the start by the appearance of two gentlemen famous in the annals of hardball. Both of them, Joe Judge and Clark Griffith, proceeded to show their versatility by combining to toss out the opening ball in anything but the conventional manner.

Joe actually went to the mound and the Old Fox to the catcher's box, and the first ball was actually tossed and caught.

Holds Stars Hitless.

Then Rosenfield went in and hypnotized the All-Stars, who saw nothing but the lights of the stadium every time Rosenfield wound up his college-trained arm and let the pellet fly. The All-Stars collected a grand total of no hits, just one less than the number garnered off Morris Rosenfield, brother of Abe's. Morris pitched for the All-Stars.

Agriculture scored once in the first, once in the fourth and twice in the sixth. The All-Stars fully populated the bases in the fifth, but Abe pulled some Houdini stuff and quickly fanned Abby Clark, All-Star outfielder.

Errors and bases on balls accounted for the Aggies' runs. The All-Stars later contended that the plowing-under tactics of Rosenfield and Agriculture were unconstitutional.

G. P. O. Net Play Opens.

The annual Government Printing Office tennis tournament will open at 10 a. m. today on the Jessup Blair courts, opposite Bliss Electrical School. Seeded in the order named are Ed Holst, defending champion; Herbert Ostroff, former Middle Atlantic title holder; Wilbur Sexton, Joe Mayer, Elbert Cooper, Henry Fortner, Jim Walker and Harry Herbert.

Water Poloists To Open Bids For Title

FIVE of the strongest water polo teams in the East will reach Washington this morning for the National A. A. U. Junior championships to be held at the Maryland Club Gardens this afternoon and tomorrow. In the wildest and woolliest pastime a sports fan is likely to see, they will begin action in tournament form at 3 o'clock, the finals to be held tomorrow.

The local team, Maryland Club Gardens, winner of 35 out of its last 36 starts, and Washington Canoe Club are conceded only an outside chance of stopping the invaders.

The favorite comes bearing the colors of the New York A. C., perennial holder of the Senior A. A. U. title. Its Junior team will be coached by the famous Joe Ruddy, coach of the Senior team, father of the famous swimming Ruddys, and once an Olympic star himself.

Play-off Dates Fixed by League

At a meeting of the U. S. Government Baseball League last night in the office of J. Edgar Hoover, Bureau of Investigation, it was decided to cancel all unplayed first-half games. Dates for postponed second-half games and for play-offs for the league championship were set.

Since a tie between Bureau of Investigation and NRA for the second-half championship is possible, it was decided to hold a three-game play-off in that event for the second-half title. The games would be played Wednesday, August 14; Friday, August 16, and Saturday, August 17.

If, however, Investigation wins the second-half championship without need of a three-game play-off, the Sleuths are to play the season play-off with NRA, first-half winner, on the above dates, August 14, 16 and 17. If a play-off for the second-half title is needed and Investigation wins, the dates for the season play-off will be announced later.

Mangin-Hines To Meet for Net Title

By the Associated Press.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 26.—The jinx which always has ridden the favorites in the annual Seabright Invitation tennis tournament continued to function today, two outsiders galloping into the final round of the men's singles division. Also, a comparative newcomer to Eastern court circles reached the last bracket of the women's singles.

Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, the National indoor champion and No. 13 in national ranking, and Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., ranked eighteenth, were the survivors among the men. They will meet tomorrow for the silver bowl.

Mangin defeated the top-seeded Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, 6—4, 8—6, 3—6, 4—6, 7—5, while Hines eliminated Berkeley Bell, of New York, the winner last year, in another stirring five-set match, 6—4, 5—7, 6—2, 3—6, 6—2.

Playground Tennis Nearing Semifinals

The quarter-finals round neared completion yesterday in the District playground tennis championships in progress on the several playground courts. In the senior division Virginia Avenue and Takoma Park placed representatives in the quarter-finals, while Chevy Chase and Burroughs boast two quarter-finalists each.

Dower, Takoma Park's senior champion, gained the round of eight along with Belasario Contreras, hard-hitting Eastern High flash from Virginia Avenue. Contreras and Bobby Burns, of Potomac, displayed the most sparkling tennis of the day with the former winning at 6—4, 5—7, 9—7.

D. C. Golf Pros Vie in Match Tomorrow

THE Indian Spring golf course will receive its first major workout since its face was lifted in preparation for the National Amateur qualifying rounds tomorrow when Al Houghton and George Diffenbaugh, home pros, team up against Wiffy Cox and Roland Mackenzie in an exhibition match.

The exhibition, which will be an 18-hole best-ball affair, is scheduled to get under way at 2:30 p. m. It will be open to the public, free.

Roger Peacock holds the course record for Indian Spring with a 62, but that was before the course was toughened. Houghton's lowest score at Indian Spring is 66, but that also was recorded before the course was made more difficult in preparation for the qualifying rounds to be held August 20.

The match is the first of several planned for Indian Spring. It is the present plan of the club to hold similar exhibitions every two weeks if public interest justifies.

Mrs. B. C. Hartig defeated Mrs. J. W. Cramer, 3 and 2, in the Manor Club miniature tournament yesterday. Other results in the match-play with handicap tournament were: Miss Marian Brown defeated Mrs. F. H. Smith, 2 and 1; Mrs. T. N. Beavers defeated Mrs. H. J. Simons, 1 up, 19 holes; Mrs. C. T. Medley bested Mrs. J. T. Powell, 1 up; Mrs. J. J. McCarthy whipped Mrs. John McMahon, 4 and 3; Mrs. Walter Talcott defeated Mrs. William Callahan, 5 and 4.

Farm Credit Triumphs To Lead Tennis League

Farm Credit quickly shot its one-day tie for first place with the Public Works Administration in the Departmental Tennis League yesterday, sweeping all five matches from Agriculture on the Monument courts. Farm Credit has won 37 and lost 8 engagements for a percentage of .822. PWA, in sceond place, has won 36 and lost 9 for .800, and Treasury, in third, 31 and 9 for .775. Play ends next Friday.

D. C. Fight Commission To License Promoters

Matchmakers in the District of Columbia will be licensed by the boxing commission, it was learned by The Post last night. The licensing of these officials has been effected in order that they may have a voice in being represented before the commission and that they may be jointly responsible before the moguls of maul.

Those affected will be Goldie Ahearn, of the Joe Turner enterprises; Howard Livingston, of the American Legion, and Walter V. Young, of the Lincoln Athletic Club.

Eagles Seeking Strength for Celt Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., July 26.—John Travers, manager of the Alexandria Eagles, is making every effort to put a ball club on the field at Baggett's Stadium Sunday that will give the St. Mary Celtics a real battle in their championship series. Travers hopes to sign either Lefty Stevens or Ray Davidson to hurl.

Under direction of Coach Russ Kidwell, the Celtics will practice at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Baggett's.

Next Saturday and Sunday the Celts will meet the Cutters of Lynchburg, Va., on the latter's diamond.

An interesting pitchers' battle is expected Sunday afternoon at Fort Belvoir when the Mount Vernon Independents and Fort Belvoir clash. Dick Ayers, University of Virginia pitcher, and Bill Rahn, speed-ball hurler, will oppose on the mound.

Alexandria Wins In Legion Tourney

By the Associated Press.

Pulaski, Va., July 26.—Coupling daring base running with errorless play, Alexandria defeated Pulaski, 4 to 0, this afternoon in the first game of the Virginia American Legion Junior baseball tournament at Coleman Park here. Alexandria, by virtue of its voctory, will enter the final tomorrow afternoon, meeting the winner of tomorrow morning's game between Richmond and Norfolk.

Both Jones, of Pulaski, and Woods, of Alexandria, pitched well this afternoon. Each allowed five safeties, which were kept well scattered. Woods struck out nine men and Jones ten.

Alexandria failed to score until the fourth inning, when Evans, first up, doubled, went to third on Schwartz's infield tap and scored on a wild pitch. Schwartz scored a few minutes later from third on Moore's long fly to center. Two more runs were made in the eighth.

Pepco Nine in Action.

The hard-hitting Pepco team of the National Capital League faces Capital Transit this afternoon on the Roosevelt High School diamond. The Pepco line-up for today's tussle will be Dixon on the pitching mound, Ault behind the bat, Deck at first, Robbins at second, Zickle at third, Bailey at short, and Walters, Chapel and Colliflower in the outfield. Reeves will pitch for the Transit team.

Bennings Meets Herndon.

The Bennings A. C. ball club has reorganized and will play a double-header against Herndon tomorrow at Herndon. The first game will start at 1 o'clock. Ray Davidson and Noble McDaniel will be the mound choices for Herndon.

THE three-day-old record set by Norman Baulsir, of Johnson Playground, in the 100-pound playground broad jump, fell yesterday under the Mercury-blessed heels of Ozzie Cooksey, representing Rosedale Playground, who jumped 18 feet and 9 inches for a new playground record. Baulsir, competing in the Northern Conference meet of the annual Department of Playgrounds Conference track meet, had jumped 17 feet 11 inches Wednesday to break the record of Natheson, Henry D. Cooke Playground, which was established in 1926.

Cooksey was a participant in the Eastern Conference meet held yesterday in Eastern Stadium under the direction of Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds. It was the largest conference meet held to date in the series, the final of which is the city meet, August 20, in Central Stadium. Altogether, 570 boys participated.

Another oustanding outcome of the day was Sherwood Playground's victory—the first in six years. In the unrestricted and unlimited divisions, Eckington Playground, coached by Ben Goldfaden, George Washington football star, outclassed the conference and took this division with a total of 11 points. Rosedale was second with 9; Sherwood followed with 4, and Burroughs with 3.

The results:

Mining Alone Reports More Employed Than in June, 1934.

New York, July 27.—The total number of unemployed workers in June, 1935, was 9,804,000, according to the regular monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board made public today. This is an increase of 95,000, or 1.0 per cent, from the preceding month, and an increase of 552,000, or 6.0 per cent over June, 1934.

From May to June, 1935, the increases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: Manufacturing and mechanical industries, 64,000; domestic and personal service, 82,000; trade, 11,000; miscellaneous industries, 2,000. Unemployment showed a decrease of 20,000 in transportation and 21,000 in mining.

Compared with June, 1934, unemployment in June, 1935, increased 12.7 per cent in domestic and personal service; 4.0 per cent in transportation; 2.1 per cent in trade; 1.5 per cent in manufacturnig; and 1.9 per cent in miscellaneous industries. Unemployment in mining decreased 2.4 per cent. The conference board's allowance for the net annual increase of gainful workers available for employment accounts for 320,000 of the 552,000 increase in unemployment as compared with June, 1934.

The following table prepared by the conference board shows the number of unemployed workers in the various industrial groups in June, 1934, and June, 1935.

Number of Unemployed.

Industrial Group.	June, '34.	June, 35.
Mining	444,000	433,000
Manufacturing & and mechanical	3,465,000	3,518,000
Transportation	1,246,000	1,296,000
Trade	1,015,000	1,037,000
Domestic and personal service	857,000	966,000
Industry not specified	474,000	483,000
Other industries (1)	296,000	296,000
All industries (2)	7,797,000	8,029,000
Allowance for new workers since 1930 census	1,455,000	1,775,000
Total unemployed	9,252,000	9,804,000

(1) This group includes agriculture, forestry and fishing, public service, and professional service. The numbers given are the unemployed workers in 1930, satisfactory data being unavailable from which later changes in unemployment can be computed.

(2) Industrial classification includes 3,188,000 listed as unemployed in census of April, 1930.

Cotton Rallies 8 to 15 Points

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Early declines were followed by rallies in cotton today with near months leading the advance on trade buying and covering. The general market closed steady 8 to 15 points net higher. Early declines of 5 or 6 points were attributed to liquidation and foreign selling following easy Liverpool cables. These offerings were absorbed by trade buying to fix prices, or a scattering demand, however, and prices later advanced on covering.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, July 26 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—Trading in 64s and finer territory wools continued fair in volume, but lower grades were quiet. A sizable weight of bulk short French combing and clothing 64s and finer territory wools in original bags sold at 62@65 cents scoured basis, much of it, however, consisting of small clean-up lots. There is also a fair amount of average to good French combing fine wool moving at 68@70 cents scoured basis and some choice French combing at 71@73 cents.

$689,880,000 Paid By Closed Banks

Payments to depositors in banks which remained closed after the bank holiday of March, 1933, have totaled $689,880,000, President Roosevelt was told today by J. F. T. O'Connor, Controller of the Currency. He said 85 bank receiverships had been concluded since last October 31, of which 12 paid depositors in full. He estimated that 52,000,000 depositors were now protected by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Retail Trade Gains in Week

Upward Trend Persists Despite Widespread Hot Weather.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—Additional gains were registered for retail trade during the week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in a weekly trade review, in spite of high temperatures which prevailed in nearly all parts of the country.

"Instead of being forced to offer resistance to the awaited midsummer recession, most divisions of trade have been enabled to better their showing of a year ago without much effort," it was stated.

"Fall buying at wholesale also made more headway, as retailers advanced their earlier budget estimates, in view of the improved outlook. * * *

"The steady broadening of consumer demand since the first of the month is proceeding unmindful of weather conditions, the postponed buying of May and a part of June being released in larger volume with each successive week.

"Losses of the spring months rapidly are being nullified; as summer stocks dwindle and early fall lines commence to attract attention.

"Because of the continued heat wave, hot-weather items headed the list of best sellers. * * *

"Although daily totals fluctuated with the weather, the intense heat interfering with planned shopping tours at times, retail sales for the country were estimated at 15 to 35 per cent ahead of those for the corresponding 1934 week."

Wholesale markets reflected the broadening trend of retail distribution, it was declared, and the broadening of industrial operations, which started two weeks ago, contrary to all expectations for this period, has been further extended, and rapidly is outstripping all records for the last few years.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Fri.	Thu.
Advances	356	211
Declines	200	396
Unchanged	184	179
Total issues	740	786

Stocks—Scattered profit taking failed to deter a steady upward trend of the market. Utilities, metals and scattered industrials were in the lead. Firmest in the final hour. Trading slackened to 989,480 shares.

Bonds—Brisk rallies in Italian dollar bonds and wide gyrations by some utilities were the main features. Federals were inactive and little changed. Transfers were off to $8,034,000.

Curb—A demand for utilities near the close turned the trend skyward. Trading approximated 201,000 shares.

Grains—A late stampede of buying shot wheat 4¼ cents upward, 5 cents in Minneapolis on startling reports of black-rust damage. Wheat closed at near the top levels, with corn and oats also higher. July wheat last at 89⅞, July corn 83⅞.

Cotton—Early declines were followed by rallies which lifted closings 8 to 15 points above the previous ones. July 11.47.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.20, while the refined closed at 5.10 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Santos No. 4 final at 8 and Rio No. 7 last at 6¾.

Bar silver—Unchanged in New York at 67¾ cents per ounce. In London last prices were also unchanged, 30 3-16d (67.50 cents).

Bar gold—Off 2½ cents in London and closed at 140 shillings 6½ pence ($34.88).

Treasury to Sell $50,000,000 Bills

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 273 day bills; and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m., Eastern Standard time, on Monday, July 29, 1935.

The bills will be dated July 31, 1935, and will mature on April 29, 1936, and on the maturity date the face amount will be payable without interest.

Scrap Steel Up to $13.

Pittsburgh, July 26 (AP).—Scrap steel prices show further gains in the Pittsburgh market, according to reports to steel trade quarters. Sales of number 1 heavy metal material have been made around $13 a ton, or 50 cents above the recent range.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Hold Firm Tone in Less Active Trading With Utilities Coming Forward—Italian Bonds Recover—Wheat Prices Jump.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 26.—Financial markets could not recover their former activity, but prices strengthened in most sectors. Government bonds were dull but steady and foreign issues improved a bit. Stocks in the smallest dealings of the week, volume falling under the 1,000,000-share mark, did little more than mark time. Grain hardened. September wheat closed 3 cents a bushel higher at 89¼ cents.

In stocks the trading trail wound around a number of quicksand holes and over numerous hard surfaces. Consolidated Gas after sleeping through the advance of the past two weeks came to life in the afternoon and advanced a point or so on active dealings. Some of the other public utility stocks turned a little harder. The dividend meeting on gas, postponed from yesterday, will be held Monday. The market looks for no change at this time in the current $1 yearly rate.

Some profit taking appeared in the steels, but most of them made small gains. Bethlehem, U. S. Steel, Inland, National and Otis picked up a little. Bethlehem reported second quarter earnings under a year ago, but better than in first quarter, and the market is expecting a fairly good report from U. S. Steel to be issued next Tuesday afternoon, but without any change in the usual 50-cent dividend for the preferred. Arrears on Steel preferred now total 12½ per cent and are cumulative.

Baldwin Shares Strong.

Sink holes appeared in California Packing, United Fruit, Cluett Peabody, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Westinghouse Air Brake. Their losses ranged from 1¼ to 2¼ points. On the strong side were Baldwin common and preferred, active and buoyant, the preferred rising more than 4 points; and the preferred issues of Foreign Power, American Power, Certain-teed and Warner Brothers, Westinghouse Eletric, Greyhound, Libbey-Owens and Sharon hardened. Motor shares held around the previous day's closing quotation.

Foreign exchange was steady in spite of further trouble in Holland. Guilders failed to rise on the cue given by the Netherlands Bank, which again lifted its discount rate, this time to 6 per cent, the action being timed with the fall of the cabinet. If the prospect for a new government less intransigeant on the subject of the gold standard and deflation worried the market, enough support was given to avoid the appearance of a flight of capital.

Anyhow, the Netherlands Bank in the last week has lost nearly all the $50,000,000 in gold it regained since the time of quieting the last devaluation scare of several weeks ago. A month ago the discount rate began to climb down from the top of 6 per cent at which it was placed in the first effort to stop the golf efflux. In the past two days the charge has been boosted twice, from 3 to 5 the first time.

On the Italian front the position was judged to have been strengthened by the overtures made for conciliation on the part of the Italians. The latest diplomatic maneuvers indicated that the door was not yet heavily barred against a peaceful settlement of the Abyssinian dispute. At least the market for Italian dollar securities seemed to feel that way about it. They rallied briskly, but their activity failed to rouse other sections of the bond market.

Trade News Reassuring.

Week-end trade news was of no great help in predicting the future, but its general tenor along with foreign developments was somewhat reassuring. Further contraction in currency circulation was shown by the Federal Reserve Bank, a seasonal movement, and the monetary gold stock rose. Shortly money in use should expand, but the peak of excess reserves of the member banks probably has not yet been climbed.

Industrial production in June, the Federal Reserve Board reports, adjusted for seasonal variation, rose from 85 to 86 on the index of measurement. In June of last year the board's index stood at 84. That slowly rising trend seems to have continued into this month, and markets are counting upon the better harvests and brisk automotive business to give a flip to August and September that was lacking a year ago.

Wholesale commodity prices are up only about 1 per cent since the beginning of the year. That element of stability is proving to be beneficial to business, although prices where mostly needed to decline are firm of advancing, namely in foods. Meanwhile the reduction in unemployment is less noticeable, taking account of outdoor work, than is the rise in production. Perhaps as suggested the old code hours are being lengthened here and there.

If so the net result probably is an advantage all around, and in the end greater employment will come as operating costs go down and profits go up. With a high tax rate in view, including excess profits tax, and larger corporation assessments, the danger of a splurge of corporation earnings is indeed remote.

Freight Loads Gain 26,878 In Past Week

Total of 593,366 Cars Is 22,674 Below Same Period Last Year.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Freight cars loaded on United States railroads during the week ended July 20 increased 26,878 cars above the preceding week, but continued below the corresponding weeks of both 1934 and 1933, the Association of American Railroads here reported yesterday.

Total loads for the week were 593,366 cars, 22,674 below the same week of the previous year, and 63,014 below the same week two years ago.

Miscellaneous freight totaled 236,319, an increase of 2,932 and 9,082 above 1934 but a decrease of 1,218 from 1933.

Small Loads Up.

Less than carload lots amounted to 157,345, an increase of 5,284, but 1,291 below 1934 and 14,674 below 1933.

Coal amounted to 89,742, an increase of 14,259 but 7,971 below 1934 and 28,508 below 1933.

Grain and grain products totaled 33,379, an increase of 4,101 but 13,792 below 1934 and 15,805 below 1933. In the Western districts grain and grain products totaled 21,275, a decrease of 7,013 from 1934.

Livestock Lower.

Livestock amounted to 10,165, a decrease of 882; 16,049 below 1934 and 5,498 below 1933. In the Western districts livestock totaled 7,157, a decrease of 15,448 below 1934.

Forest products totaled 28,416, an increase of 1,792 and 6,345 above 1934, but 790 below 1933.

Ore amounted to 33,274, a decrease of 688, but 778 above 1934 and 5,267 above 1933.

Coke amounted to 4,726, an increase of 60 and 224 above 1934, but a decrease of 1,788 from 1933.

Work and Pay Rolls Taper Off in June

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—The National Industrial Conference Board states that seasonal declines of slightly less than the usual proportions were noted in June in employment, man-hours and pay rolls in the 25 manufacturing industries reporting to it. Employment fell off 0.5 per cent from May to June; total manhours worked, 1.6 per cent, nad pay rolls, 1.9 per cent.

Reserve Funds At Peak Record

Rise Is Due to Gold From France, Says Federal Board Statement.

By the Associated Press.

An increase of $260,000,000 in gold stocks in June brought member bank reserve balances and excess reserves to the highest levels in the history of the Federal Reserve system.

The Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly bulletin, reported a $150,000,000 increase in reserve balances, which totaled $5,006,000,000 June 29, and said the rise "was entirely due to further large imports of gold"—mostly from France. Excess reserves reached $2,400,000,000 on the same date.

"On February 1, 1934," the board explained, "immediately after revaluation of the dollar, excess reserves of member banks were about $800,000,000 and were largely the consequence of purchases of United States Government securities by the Reserve banks in 1932 and 1933.

"Since that date the increase in the monetary gold stocks of the country from about $7,000,000,000 to $9,100,000,000 on June 19, 1935, has been the principal factor in the growth of $2,260,000,000 in member bank reserve balances. In the same period required reserves increased by $660,000,000, the remaining $1,600,000,000 being added to excess reserves."

The bulletin revealed that four-fifths of the June gold stocks increase came from France when the United States stepped in with American dollars to save the tottering franc late in May.

The board said elimination of national bank notes from circulation is being carried out by a method which will result in a minimum of disturbance to the money market.

Wheat Whirls 4¼c Upward On Blight Peril

Buying Stampede Follows Startling Reports of Damage by Rust.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 26.—In stampede buying that abruptly started late today, the Chicago Wheat Market sky-rocketed 4¼ cents a bushel and Minneapolis 5 cents, the maximum limit allowed.

Startling reports of sensational increase of crop damage to spring wheat, Canadian as well as domestic, accompanied the upward whirl of prices. An outstanding feature was news that a full 100 miles of wheat acreage in Saskatchewan Province, Canada, was practically a total loss from black rust.

Contributing to buying furor was a suggestion from one of the foremost unofficial crop authorities that the August 1 Government estimate of domestic spring wheat production would not exceed 200,000,000 bushels at the outside, whereas the July 1 official forecast indicated 273,000,000.

Wheat in Chicago closed strong near the day's top level, 3 to 3⅞ cents above yesterday's finish, September, 89¼@89½; corn, ¼ to ⅞ up; September, 76⅜@76½; oats, ⅝ to 1¼ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

Corn, oats and rye responded to wheat strength, despite favorable weather for corn growth. Lard scored new seasonal high prices.

Building Demand Expands Plants

Cleveland, July 26 (AP).—George A. Bryant, jr., executive vice president of Austin Company, large industrial builders, asserted today that manufacturing industries are being forced into the market for construction and machinery "in order to meet production requirements for their own goods."

"Proof of this fact," Bryant said, "is to be found in expenditures involving more than $10,000,000 for expansion and modernization of equipment of plants in active building construction. The first half of 1933 yielded 100 per cent more industrial construction than the first six months of 1934, which represented two years of recovery from the low of 1932. The advance bids fair to continue."

House Passes Bill For Grading Tobacco

Compulsory government grading of tobacco on markets where two-thirds of the growers favor it was approved late Thursday by the House on a voice vote.

Opposition crumbled when supporters of the bill sponsored by Representative Flannagan, Democrat of Virginia, defeated by a 70-to-55 standing vote an amendment to eliminate the compulsory feature even though government grading was wanted by two-thirds of the farmers.

The measure now goes to the Senate. The grading service is designed to prevent speculation in tobacco and unfair manipulation of prices.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Principal foreign currencies remained steady in terms of the dollar today in world exchange dealings, despite the resignation of the cabinet of Premier Colijn in The Netherlands and the raising of the bank rate to 6 per cent at Amsterdam.

The guilder fluctuated uncertainly in New York and was off .07 of a cent at 67.33 cents in the early afternoon. There was general selling of the guilder in London and the unit closed at 7.34¾ guilders to the pound, compared with 7.35½ on Thursday.

The pound sterling was unchanged in New York at $4.96⅝, while earlier in London the dollar had been about steady at 4.96⅛ to the pound.

The French franc likewise held even in the American market at 6.60¾ cents, while earlier in Paris the dollar had been slightly firmer at the equivalent of 6.607 cents to the franc.

Silver a Boomerang, Says Trust Company

New York, July 26.—The silver purchase program of the Government has had effects exactly the opposite of those forecast by its sponsors and may possibly endanger our national currency, the New York Trust Co. declares in commenting on the first year of operation of the plan.

While the program has served little purpose in the United States, its ill effects on China have been so serious that any solution of that country's economic crisis appears difficult, the bank statement says.

Should silver purchases be continued until the reserves amount to one-third the gold reserves, basic danger to the national currency of the United States is foreseen by the bank.

Corporations Reduce Loans From Banks

New York, July 26 (AP).—The American Metal Co., Ltd., it was announced today, has reduced its bank loans from $5,000,000 to $2,750,000. The repayments were made during June.

Sharon Steel Hoop Co., during the first half of this year, paid off $700,000 in notes to banks and called for redemption $90,396 in scrip certificates which were dated February 1, 1933, and were not due until February 1, 1936. The company now has no bank notes or loans.

Retail Grocery Chains Hold Sales Steady

New York, July 26 (AP).—Sales of Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. during the 4 weeks ended July 13 amounted to $17,014,381 compared with $16,792,328 in the same period a year ago, an increase of 1.3 per cent.

Sales of the National Tea Co. during the 4 weeks ended July 13 amounted to $4,588,974 against $4,626,518 in the same period a year ago, a decrease of slightly less than 1 per cent. In the 28 weeks ended the same date, sales aggregated $33,544,367 compared with $32,518,338, an increase of 3.1 per cent.

$293,000 Proposed For Wide Trade Study

The Advisory Committee on Allotments Wednesday recommended to the President allocation of $293,000 to the Bureau of the Census for a proposed national survey of retail trade.

An enumeration would be made of all retail places of business, numbering approximately 280,000 in selected areas comprising 17 large cities and 258 small cities of from 2,500 to 10,000 population.

Manufacturers Trust Trustee for Mo. Pac.

New York, July 26 (AP).—The Manufacturers Trust Co. of New York has announced its appointment as successor corporate trustee under the first and refunding mortgage, dated April 2, 1917, of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co.

The Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, former corporate trustee under this mortgage, has resigned.

Utilities Lead Upturn on Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 26.—A late demand for utilities turned the curb market upward at the close today. Several oil shares and scattered industrials, however, failed to regain early fractional declines. Transfers approximated 201,000 shares compared with 213,000 the day before.

American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share both advanced more than a point each. Fractional improvement was registered by Niagara Hudson Power, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Swift International, Sunshine Mining and Pioneer Gold.

On the negative side of the list, Parker Rust Proof slipped 2 points, while Gulf Oil, Humble and International Petroleum eased.

Foreign Markets.

London, July 26 (AP).—Gilt-edged securities and industrials were supported by investors in a quiet session on the stock exchange today. Home rails eased on disappointing dividend announcemets while gold mining shares and transatlantic issues held steady. The market closed irregular.

Paris.—Trading was inactive throughout the list on the bourse today and rentes declined fractionally. Royal Dutch recovered as a result of the orders from Amsterdam. The market closed dull.

Berlin.—After a dull opening, a few small orders created an upward trend on the boerse today. The closng was irregular.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our Own Guest Columns.

(During the absence of Mr. Phillips, who is on a vacation from a vacation, his column is being done, as is the rage this season, by guest columnists. Today's conductor is Haile Selassie, the Lion of Judah.)

By Haile Selassie.

Addis Ababa.—Well, if anybody had told me two weeks ago that I would have time to be doing a guest column you could have knocked me over with a feather. Which would have been O. K. with the League of Nations. But when my old friend, George Phillips, whose column, "The Ailing House," is known the world over, asked me to step in and substitute for him, who was I to refuse? So here goes:

There are people who do not mind an anaesthetic, but what prominent European ruler is going to have great trouble coming out of the Ethiopia? (This is not very good, but I'm under terrible pressure.)

* * * *

Old Man Mars and the calamity girl are that way again . . . What organization dedicated to protecting the rights of small nations is about ready to be taken over as a Geneva bicycling club? . . . People who look alike—Mussolini and Mussolini.

* * * *

Thoughts while strolling . . . When in Rome, do as the Romans do . . . (But suppose you just don't feel like fighting anybody?) . . . What ever became of the war to end war? . . . Nobody gives better dinner parties than Fannie Hurst and Addis Ababa.

* * * *

* * * *

Some of my warriors are talking of turning lions loose on the enemy . . . The story is true in the "mane." . . . There I go punning again . . . The use of acid to burn my warriors' feet and the use of lions to chew up the foe makes it a battle of "cats" and dogs," so to speak . . . When you speak of Somaliland, remember there is a French Somaliland, a British Somaliland and an Italian Somaliland . . . All God's chillun got Somalilands.

* * * *

It is certainly hot in Ethiopia in the summer . . . But so far as the invader is concerned, it isn't the heat . . . It's the cupidity . . . An Ethiopian tribesman goes to war in white robes . . . My big job is to get a loan to finance the laundry bill . . . Well, as the radio comic says, "So long! Abyssinia."

Epitaph.

Here lies the body of
Marmaduke Custic McRaft;
While resting from his golf
He wed to sleep in a draft.
DEE MEADE.

Would you say that these politicians who are digging up new candidates for the Presidency are boom-doggling?

What's become of the old-fashioned girl who was afraid she would freckle or burn?

The corn-on-the-cob season is here again and once more it is hard to tell when a face is just naturally greasy.

A fellow who must feel pretty foolish these days is the man who predicted a few years ago that the world had learned its lesson and would tolerate no more wars.

Its black finish shines like new, perfect chrome fixtures, whipcord upholstery without a spot, 5 nearly new tires, perfect brakes. Mechanically backed by the O. K. Tag that Counts. Almost unbelievable low mileage. It's a real buy at the price. We also have in stock a duplicate of this car at the same price. So near alike that our salesmen can hardly tell them apart.

If it's a coupe you are looking for we have in stock two 1933 Chevrolet Master Coupes at $395. You must see Taylor's Better Reconditioned Cars to appreciate their exceptional condition. Not only do they carry the O. K. Tag That Counts, but also a Seal guaranteeing that the upholstery has been cleaned and germ proofed.

ONCE in a great while we get into stock an almost too-good-to-be-true used car. This 1931 Hudson De Luxe Sedan in original condition throughout has been used so little that we did not believe the mileage ourselves until we gave it a real test on a hill. When we say this car is clean throughout we mean original black finish that shines like new; upholstery has always been covered by slip covers (spotless); 6 good tires, fender wells, perfect brakes, trunk, perfect chrome; a motor that has been just well broken in. A demonstration will convince you that this car is a once-in-a-lifetime bargain. Drive it home for only $235. Better hurry.

Justice Luhring Cites Nolan in Alimony Case

Justice Oscar R. Luhring in the District Supreme Court yesterday signed an order requiring William J. Nolan, local automobile dealer, to show cause by August 5 why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for alleged failure to meet an alimony payment due his estranged wife, Mrs. Alice M. Nolan, on July 15.

Nolan recently was ordered to pay his wife $450 a month alimony and also was directed to pay his wife's attorneys a fee of $4,000 for representing her in the divorce suit, which resulted in her being awarded a limited divorce. In addition, Mrs. Nolan was given custody of their two children.

From that order Nolan has appealed to the United States Court of Appeals.

Committee Posts Filled.

Lanier P. McLachlen, chairman of the Board of the Better Business Bureau, yesterday appointed Herbert J. Rich, of B. Rich & Sons, chairman of the membership committee of the bureau.

He also anonunced the appointment of H. T. Bisselle, of the Riggs National Bank, chairman of the publicity committee.

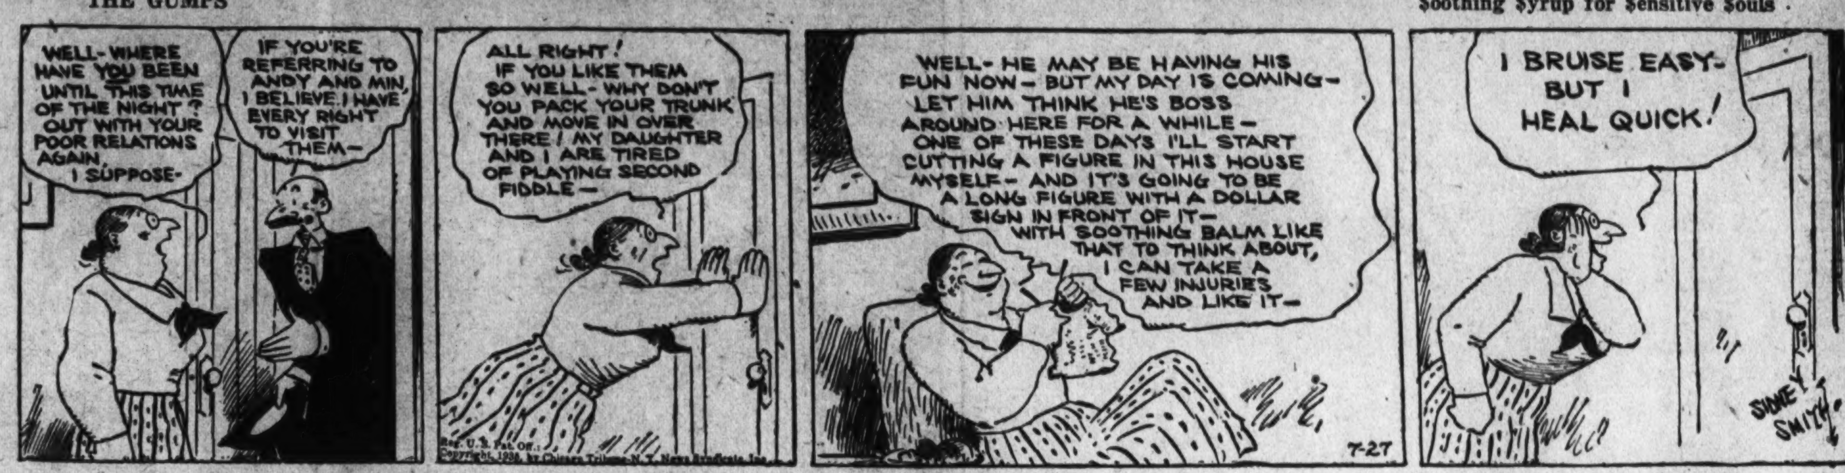
THE GUMPS Soothing Syrup for Sensitive Souls



WELL—WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN UNTIL THIS TIME OF THE NIGHT? OUT WITH YOUR POOR RELATIONS AGAIN, I SUPPOSE—
IF YOU'RE REFERRING TO ANDY AND MIN, I BELIEVE I HAVE EVERY RIGHT TO VISIT THEM—
ALL RIGHT! IF YOU LIKE THEM SO WELL—WHY DON'T YOU PACK YOUR TRUNK AND MOVE IN OVER THERE! MY DAUGHTER AND I ARE TIRED OF PLAYING SECOND FIDDLE—
WELL—HE MAY BE HAVING HIS FUN NOW—BUT MY DAY IS COMING—LET HIM THINK HE'S BOSS AROUND HERE FOR A WHILE—ONE OF THESE DAYS I'LL START CUTTING A FIGURE IN THIS HOUSE MYSELF—AND IT'S GOING TO BE A LONG FIGURE WITH A DOLLAR SIGN IN FRONT OF IT—WITH SOOTHING BALM LIKE THAT TO THINK ABOUT, I CAN TAKE A FEW INJURIES AND LIKE IT—
I BRUISE EASY—BUT I HEAL QUICK!

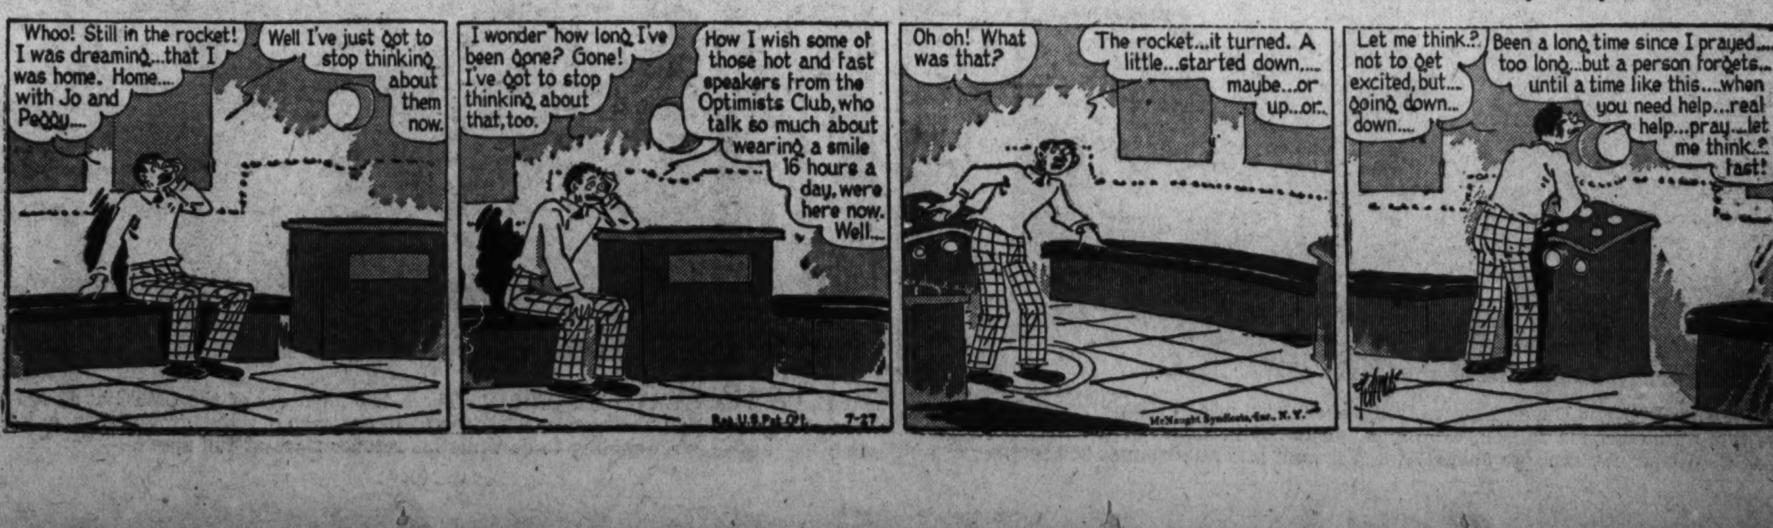
THE BUNGLE FAMILY Coming Down! By Harry J. Tuthill



Whoo! Still in the rocket! I was dreaming...that I was home. Home... with Jo and Peggy...
Well I've just got to stop thinking about them now.
I wonder how long I've been gone? Gone! I've got to stop thinking about that, too.
How I wish some of those hot and fast speakers from the Optimists Club, who talk so much about wearing a smile 16 hours a day, were here now. Well...
7-27
Oh oh! What was that?
The rocket...it turned. A little...started down..... maybe...or up...or..
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
Let me think..? not to get excited, but... going down... down....
Been a long time since I prayed.... too long...but a person forgets... until a time like this....when you need help...real help...pray...let me think..? fast!

C. M. T. C. Boys at Fort Myer Show Trick Rides in Review +

Ride Him, Soldier!

+ Paris Police Battle Rioters; 'Flying Freshman' Gets a Job

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

SWALLOWED A SAFETY PIN.—Little Doris Zbilski, 8 months old, solemnly studies a safety pin she swallowed two weeks ago. Everything is all right now, after a couple of weeks in a Chicago hospital, where she is shown.

KILLED TO "GET EVEN." Charles Pollino, 19, of Philadelphia, is being led from a cell for questioning about his shooting spree which terrorized a neighborhood, killed a boy of 16 and wounded a man.

Harris & Ewing.

WITH EXPRESSION.—Senator Pat Harrison, left, and Senator Robert La Follette, snapped unawares at the Senate Finance Committee hearing on alcohol control bill.

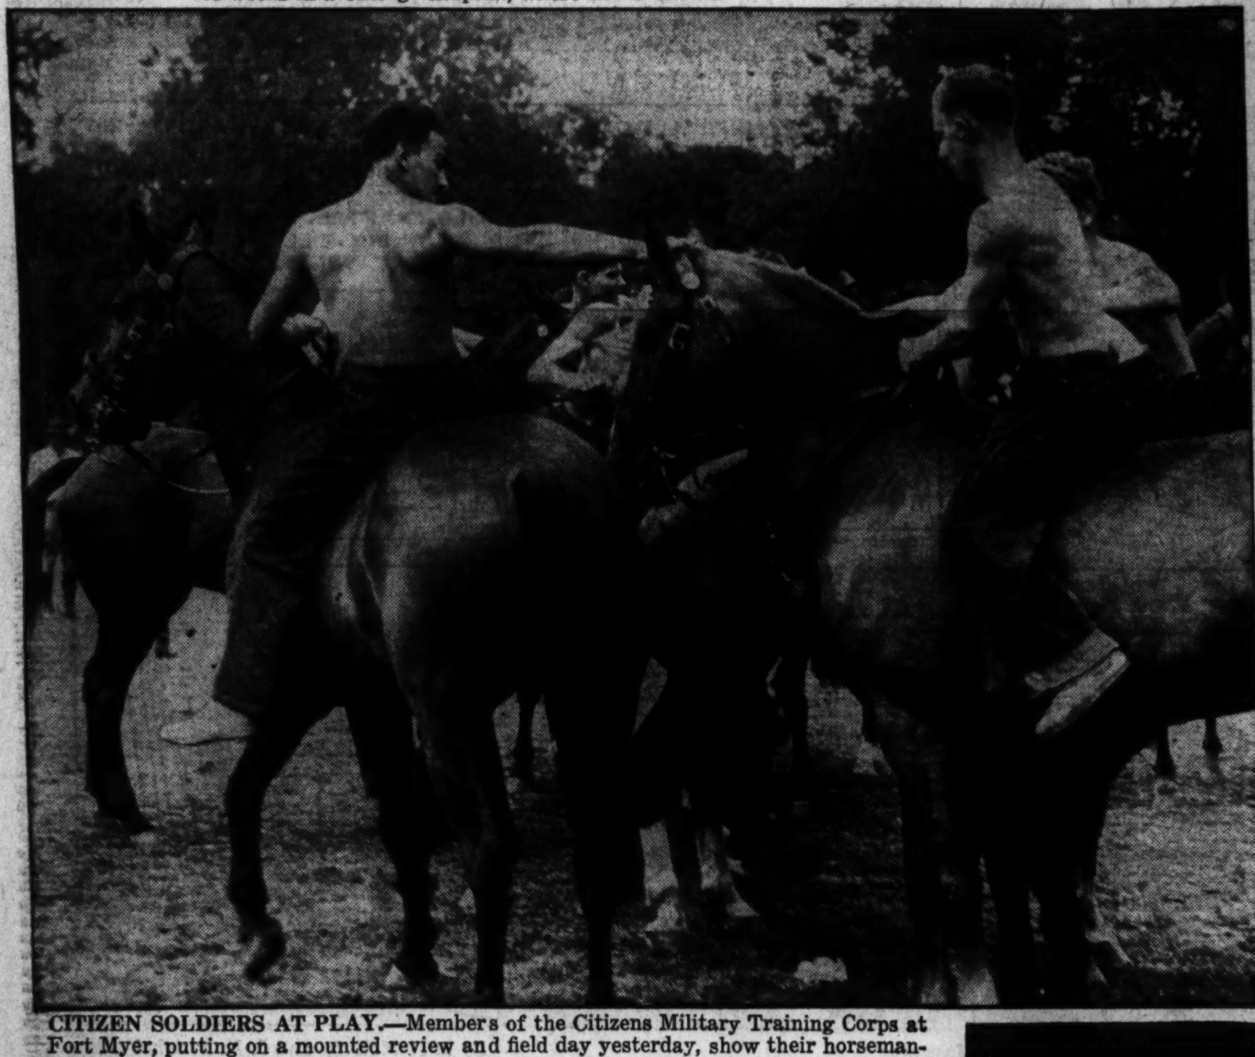
PARIS RIOTERS CURBED.—Paris police effectively tie up two striking railway workers in recent street riots in which several men were injured. This particular bit of action took place at the corner of the Boulevard Haussman and the Rue Lafayette—if you know your Paris.



CITIZEN SOLDIERS AT PLAY.—Members of the Citizens Military Training Corps at Fort Myer, putting on a mounted review and field day yesterday, show their horsemanship in a wrestling match mounted. No sport for sissies.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

TWO DIED HERE.—Duane Howard, a flying instructor, and Miss Virginia Thomas, of Berwyn, a Philadelphia suburb, were killed yesterday in the crash of this monoplane at Glenview, Chicago suburb, when it went into a tailspin at 200 feet.
